IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

CALLS FOR AID REACH COUNTY WELFARE OFFICER

During Past Several Weeks Number of Persons Have Asked the County to Aid Them.

J. H. Brown, county welfare officer, is receiving many requests for aid now, he reports. All cases are investigated thoroughly by the officer before action is taken.

It is necessary to make full investigation, Mr. Brown declared, for there are always people asking for help who do not need it and who make a habit of sitting with folded hands while they wait for the county to keep them up.

Of course, in many cases aid is given, Mr. Brown added, for the county is anxious to help persons who really need and deserve help.

And in this connection Mr. Brown told the story of the "meanest" woman that he has known in his experience as a welfare officer.

During fair week, Mr. Brown related, a woman came to him and asked him to find her a place to sleep. She told him she and her uncle and brother were en route to Greensboro from Asheville and that just out of Concord a truck had run into their car. She came on to town for fear it would be late at night before the car could be repaired. At the hotel she was advised there were no empty rooms; she could find no room at any boarding houses recommended. To make her plea more emphatic she told Mr. Brown she was soon to become a mother.

Mr. Brown believed the woman and prevailed upon a friend to take her in for the night. The friend does not operate a boarding house but was willing to give the woman a place to sleep. It was after midnight when the woman was placed in the "company" room of the house. A clean room, clean bed and heavy welcome were given her. She was deeply appreciative on the surface and retired after a kindly "good night" for all.

The next morning when the owner of the house went to call the unexpected guest the deceit and "meanness" of the woman was discovered. "The woman was gone but she left wreckage behind her. A half-smoked cigarette was found in the middle of the bed lying in a hole it had burnt through a sheet; part of a handsome rug on the floor was covered with ashes and another part of the rug had been used for toilet purposes.

There was no note of explanation; no message of thanks.

"And why shouldn't I be careful about people who want aid, especially strangers?" Mr. Brown asks.

A. M. E. ZION CONFERENCE MEETS HERE TOMORROW

Bishop George C. Clement of Louisville, Will Preside—To Adjourn Sunday.

The fifteenth session of the West Central North Carolina annual conference of the A. M. E. Zion Church will convene in the Zion Hill Church, West Depot Street, tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, Bishop George C. Clement, of Louisville, Ky., presiding.

The principal features of the session aside from the collecting of its finances will be the discussing and planning for the educational, moral, industrial and religious betterment of the colored people in general.

The citizens, white and colored, are invited. The conference will close Sunday night, the 23rd, with the reading of the appointments.

Scrubs vs. Alumni.

In a cleanly fought, well-matched, and spirited game, the scrubs of the Concord High School sent the Class of '25 to the bitter-tasting and unexpected defeat, by a score of 6-0, themselves rising in a maze of glory to a standing that is an example of the true fighting spirit of the squad, and the faultless guidance of their star captain and quarterback.

Using long days of past practice with the seniors as stepping stones, the scrappy second team climbed through the varsity line, and with the goal 8 yards away, sent the dependable halfback Hoover, for a short run around the right end for a touchdown. The try for an extra point was a failure but the scrubs returned for the kickoff in a happy frame of mind.

The Senior line was composed of several inexperienced players, and the backfield was encouraged by the return of Widenhouse, their speedy halfback, who has been out of the game recently due to an injured ankle.

Although this game was not of the widely advertised sort, it was not without its thrills. One period of special note was in the third quarter, when G. Howard, of the Seniors, snatched the pigskin from the maelstrom of flying cleats, and ran 40 yards toward the goal of his teammates, but was stopped on the ten yard line. This was the nearest the alumni was to the goal of the second team, losing their chance to score by a fumble which resulted in a ten yard gain for their antagonists.

The teams as a whole represented a splendid corps of young football men who have been most successfully coached under Coaches Johnston and Moore.

Simpson, captain and quarterback, demonstrated his ability to sidestep in the most thickly infested spots of the field, when he made a spectacular 25 yard run around right end, and also a 15 yard center rush.

The work of Cline, Lineberger, and Jarratt was also of no little note, as they battered the lines of their respective opponents for short gains.

This was the last game this season for some of the fellows, but a fighting representation will trot out on the new high school field Wednesday, to give the Concord "All-Stars" the battle of their lives. This eleven is composed of groups of the young business men in Concord, and the line average is said to be 208.

Folks, this is absolutely the last game you will have an opportunity to see in Concord this year in which the high school is involved, so come out and cheer your boys to a walk-over.

GOAT AUCTIONED OFF FOR BENEFIT OF THE "Y"

Team Which Won Goat in Hotel Drive Offered It For Sale to Help Underprivileged Boys.

Group No. 10, led by L. T. Hartsell, Jr., of the hotel campaign, auctioned off the goat which the team won in the hotel drive by selling more stock than any other group in the campaign. Mr. Hartsell in offering the goat for auction declared his team would allow it to go provided it brought as much as $25, the money to go to the Y. M. C. A.

The goat was finally bought by G. L. Patterson for $51 after he and C. W. Swink had enjoyed a spirited tiff for the animal. C. S. Smart was the auctioneer and H. W. Blanks, secretary of the Y, announced that the money received for the goat would be used to purchase tickets for underprivileged boys for the Father and Son banquet.

The sale of the goat aroused much interest and enthusiasm. Dr. T. N. Spencer declared in his opinion the animal was in fine condition and was worth the price offered, so the bidders did not hesitate to enter the field.

Mr. Patterson plans to keep the goat as a souvenir of the hotel campaign, a campaign in which he played a major part.
