GASTON DENIES CONSPIRACY TO BRIBE

The Idea That Anybody Could Bribe Daugherty, Burns or Mellon is Ridiculous, He Says.

New York, Jan. 21.—Gaston B. Means, former department of justice agent, took the witness stand late this afternoon in his own defense in the trial of himself and Thomas B. Felder on charges of having attempted to bribe government officials.

Means denied testimony of witnesses for the government that he had entered into a conspiracy with Felder, Elmer W. Jarnecke, or any of the Cruger System gasenket officials to have indictments for using the mails to defraud against the officials quashed.

He denied he ever had told Jarnecke that he had had a conference on the matter with Attorney General Daugherty, William J. Burns, or Secretary Mellon and characterized as "absolutely false" statements attributed to him by government witnesses that he had ever said or intimated that these or other government officials were or could be bribed.

The idea that anybody in the world could bribe the officials mentioned by the government witnesses, Means said, was ridiculous. Under cross examination by government attorneys, Means appeared eager to go into details concerning numerous transactions to which he testified at a previous trial for conspiracy to violate the prohibition law and before the Wheeler committee in Washington. Questions concerning these transactions repeatedly were asked by the government attorneys and objected to by counsel for Means.

Do You Shut Your Eyes When You Spend Your Money?

Some persons spend money blindly as long as they have it; when they reach the bottoms of their pockets they worry and wonder where money for needed expenses is coming from.

Others chart their expenses and savings in advance; then they check up on spending to make sure they have followed their plans. These persons keep budgets. Under their system paying bills is a matter of mere routine instead of an eleventh hour hurry-scurry to make both ends meet.

Spending without planning is a disorderly sort of way to go through life. Frequently it deprives you of necessities, comforts and recreation. Often you find—too late—that money for things you need has gone for things you really didn't want.

Today is Budget Day, the sixth day of National Thrift Week. Substitute system for chance. Get a budget book and keep a budget. You'll be amazed to see how much further your money will go.

Save Gas and You Save Money

The gas flame under the first teakettle is correct. It burns with a steady blue flame. If your gas burners show a white or yellow flame, gas is being wasted. Call us up at once.

The second teakettle shows a wasteful, extravagant use of gas. Much of the heat is going out into the kitchen and the sides of the kettle are liable to be smoked. The water would boil just as rapidly if the gas were turned down. Once water reaches the boiling point it can boil only so fast. A low flame is more economical and just as effective.

Warning—Don't turn gas part way off at meter. This lowers the pressure and greatly hinders your cooking.
