Rickey's Choice

Here is Bert Shotton, the only Sunday manager in the major leagues. Branch Rickey, because of religious scruples, stays away from the ball park on that day and Shotton, fills in as director of the St. Louis Cardinals. It is understood that Rickey intends to retire shortly and that Shotton is certain to succeed him as the every-day-in-the-week leader of the Cards.

AFTER THE AMENDMENT'S DEFEAT

New York World. The Child Labor Amendment is beaten for this year certainly. There is every indication that it will be overwhelmingly beaten.

The sponsors of the amendment, who comprise most, though not at all of the men and women who have led the campaign against the evil of child labor, have now to make a very important decision. They can use their energies and their comparatively limited funds in an effort to convert the State Legislatures in a campaign for ratification which would surely take years. Or they can accept the result as a verdict not against child labor laws but against the extension of the Federal power and concentrate their efforts upon arousing the backward States and edging on the progressive States. They cannot successfully do both. They should, in our opinion, concentrate on the States. The campaign for ratification of the Federal amendment will arouse an opposition, partly interested and partly disinterested, which will block all progress in child protection. A campaign, State by State, will immediately isolate the selfish interests and bring to the support of the sponsors of child-labor laws the whole mass of public-spirited people.

Those who have fought the Federal amendment on the ground of principle are in honor bound to help to the limit of their powers in obtaining State laws. The anti-child-labor leaders should immediately capitalize this situation. To those who have fought the amendments for the sake of business profits, the World has this to say. You gentlemen of the textile mills and canneries and so forth had best remember that the honor-ratification of this does not mean its final defeat. If after a sincere effort is made to bring the States up to standard it becomes evident that the curse of child labor is ineradicable by State action, sentiment for this amendment will revive. The employees of child labor are to-day in the position of the liquor interests before the war. They have been granted a period of grace in which to reform themselves or at least let themselves be reformed by State action. If they will bring down upon themselves and country the whole force of the Federal power.

To all sides, then—to the sponsors of the amendment, to the opponents of the amendment on the ground of centralization and to the employers of child labor—the same course is indicated. It is, leaving the amendment aside, on the table but not dead, to inaugurate an intensive campaign against child labor in the States. The sponsors of the amendment have everything to gain and nothing to lose. If they succeed in the States they have attained their objective. If they lose in the States they will have given new force to the argument for Federal action. The opponents on principle are bound to support them, and would, even if they were not in honor bound. And the opponents for profit will find, we believe, that if they oppose State action they will stand morally isolated and contemptible before the Nation.

Somewhat Sarcastic Representative Boykin, at a dinner in New York, said of the sinking of the $30,000,000 Washington.

"When people tell me that this sinking was a move toward world peace I feel like answering them sarcastically. Yes, I feel as sarcastic as the drugist."

"The drugist, you know, had just taken a cinder out of a woman customer's eye. The pain had been severe, and the woman was very grateful."

"Oh," she said, "the relief you've given me! Thank you so much! Do I owe you anything?"

"Owe me anything?" said the drugist. "Of course not, ma'am. You owe me nothing whatever. Don't you buy all your postage stamps here?"

The largest pueblo ever found on the continent was recently discovered in the untraveled recesses of Nevada. Thus far forty houses and eleven bodies, ten of them women, have been excavated. Ancient pottery, estimated to be 2,000 years old, was found.

PAYING FOR THE HOME Up to two years ago my money all went to doctors and medicine for my stomach trouble. NORTH CAROLINA MUST DEVELOP HER COTTON MILLS

Australian Cotton Can Be Delivered in London at Six Cents Per Pound.

Raleigh, Feb. 3.—The salvation of both textile manufacturing and cotton growing lies in the further development of such fundamental research as North Carolina State college is now doing in cotton breeding and laboratories, James McDowell, cotton entomologist of New England, said today in an address before the faculty and students of that institution.

"The lessening of the cotton acreage a few years ago led the British parliament to vote in 1919, the equivalent of $1,000,000 for experimentation in growing cotton in England, colonies. As a result, Australia, which had only 78 acres planted in cotton in 1919 is now preparing to plant 15,000,000 acres in cotton in the next decade," Mr. McDowell said.

Australian cotton runs 800 pounds lint to the acre and they can grow it cheap enough to deliver at Liverpool at six cents a pound, he pointed out.

Mr. McDowell declared that within five years North Carolina mills will be producing as fine a grade of goods as any manufactured in New England, explaining the plainer class of material was the principal production in the southern states now.

Movie Photographer Sues James B. Duke.

Charlotte, Feb. 3.—Institution of a lawsuit asking $40,000 damages of James B. Duke personally was filed Tuesday by attorneys for Art Rudisill, local movie news reel photographer, plaintiff in the action. Mr. Rudisill asks the damages because of injuries to his spine received as a result of being thrown violently against the back of the seat of an automobile in which he was being driven by a man acting as his chauffeur at the order of Mr. Duke, for whom the plaintiff was making a special moving picture entitled "The Romance of a River," and showing somewhat in detail the development of the Southern Power Company's huge power plants in the Carolinas.

Gingham Mills Busy.

New York World. An advance of half a cent a yard on percales by all the leading printers and increased strength in gingham were the features of the week in cotton goods. The advance on percales was expected for some time, owing to the small margin between the gray and the finished cloths. Some of the large gingham manufacturers are now behind on orders, which is quite a change from the situation a few months ago. Large buying in print cloths developed late in the week. However, the Fairchild Index registered a decline to 15.613 from 15.636 the week previous, while the average price of cotton was practically unchanged.

The moccasins-like shoes of rough, untanned hide, which used to be worn in the Highlands of Scotland and in Ireland, were known as brogues. As modern shoes came in the leather was punched all over in a primitive pattern, the lace ornamentation became an elaborate sort of buckle, and the overhanging flap that kept the water out was worked over into a fringe.

MINISTERS WILL OPPOSE MODIFIED DIVORCE LAW

Winston-Salem Association Is Against Matthews' Bill to Reduce Separation Basis.

Winston-Salem, Feb. 2.—The Winston-Salem Ministerial association at its session today heartily disapproved of the bill introduced by Representative Matthews in the state legislature tending to lower the bars to divorce. The union commended the action of the legislative committee, which failed to report favorably on the bill. This bill provided that a separation of two years instead of five would constitute legal grounds for a divorce. The association went on record as opposing anything that would lower the standard of home ties in this state.

STATE SPENT $104,274 DAILY FOR CARS IN 1924

North Carolinians Purchased 34,758 New Cars at Value of $31,282,200.

Raleigh News and Observer. During the last year North Carolinians purchased 34,758 new automobiles at an aggregate cost of $31,282,200, according to figures made public yesterday by the Automobile License Bureau of the Department of State.

"That doesn't look like hard times to me," declared Captain Sprague Silver of the bureau. On every working day during the past year the people of the State spent $104,274 for new cars.

Cigarette Probably Caused Hospital Fire.

Charlotte, Feb. 2.—A lighted cigarette carelessly dropped by a visitor into the waste paper chute of the Charlotte Sanatorium is supposed to have been the cause of a small fire there yesterday which was damaging more in the excitement to the 85 patients than in the destruction of property.

The flame was discovered by the smoke emerging from the chute doors on each floor. An examination disclosed that a flame was leaping up the long shaft and was feeding upon the day's accumulation of trash at the bottom of the chute. The fire soon generated enough heat to ignite the wood-work in the walls and was becoming rather dangerous upon the arrival of the firemen. A few minutes' work on their part ended the danger.

Those patients whose rooms were near the fire were quickly moved to other parts of the building. Patients who were in danger of becoming unduly excited found a cheerfully assuring nurse at hand to calm their fears and make it appear that fire and smoke were all in the day's work and nothing to become excited over.

It was found necessary to remove one or two patients from the building but most of the others, caught the spirit of the nurses and seemed to enjoy the thrill of the occasion.

The salary of the keeper of the Tower of London during the reign of Queen Elizabeth was about $500 a year. He also received all the government allowances made to offenders of high rank who were too proud to accept it. All cattle that slipped off London Bridge, all carts that fell into the moat, all fotsam and jetsam in the Thames, two flagons of wine from every vessel arriving from Bordeaux, and many other things were included in his fees.
