"Death Bed" Marriage Insufficient to Make Wife Dependent.

A wife who married an injured employe shortly before his death, while he was in the hospital mortally injured, was not entitled to compensation, according to a ruling of the Industrial Commission, and its order was affirmed by the Supreme Court of Utah, in Sarah V. Industrial Commission, 227 Pacific Reporter, 1030. Mr. Justice Frick wrote the opinion of the court, in the course of which he said:

"Plaintiff married deceased at a time when he was mortally injured and without hope of recovery. Deceased was thus not only in a helpless physical condition at the time of the marriage, but was utterly without hope of ever being in any other condition. He was not earning a farthing at the time of or after the marriage that could have been devoted to the support of plaintiff. Indeed, he was a helpless burden upon her.

"The whole theory and basis of our Industrial Act is that the claimant has been deprived of tangible support by reason of the injury and death of the deceased employe. In other words, in order to make the provisions of the Industrial Act applicable, the applicant must show her dependency, and that she is deprived of the wages which the injured employe was earning at the time of the injury.

"In case she lives with her husband at the time of death, dependency is a matter of course, presumed. Where the presumption applies, therefore, the Industrial Act, in a measure at least, seeks to compel the employer to restore to the applicant a loss she has sustained by reason of the loss of the wages earned by the deceased employe. Where, however, as here, she has sustained no loss, nothing can be restored."

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS HOLD A DEMONSTRATION IN CHAPEL

Cigarettes, Chewing Gum, Chewing Tobacco and Compacts Banned in "Thrilling Meeting."

The High School had a revival Wednesday morning in chapel exercises which lasted from 8:45 to 11 o'clock and made the following pledges:

- 1.—To give up chewing gum.
- 2.—To give up chewing tobacco.
- 3.—To give up cigarettes.
- 4.—To give up the use of rouge and powder in school.
- 5.—To do better school work.

The pledges were made in the form of challenges from one section of the student body to the other and were followed by a rain of chewing gum, chewing tobacco, cigarettes and compacts which were thrown to the stage from all parts of the Auditorium. It is a matter of record that no books were thrown.

Even after the exercises in the chapel were over, the students back in their various rooms held confessionals and made promises to their teachers to do better work in the future.

The "revival" started after the regular religious exercises. Principal Hinton McLeod in a brief speech said that he had been asked to do something to improve the school spirit. After citing examples of good school spirit, he turned the meeting over to Miss Nancy Lentz, who also made a few remarks and then in turn turned the meeting over to F. D. Fanning, teacher of science.

Mr. Fanning then threw a bomb into the works. He forcefully told the students of all their shortcomings and in doing so did not mince words. According to the students, he "just cussed them out."

The school was then divided into two sections, the Gold and the Black. Each of the sections held a separate meeting in which captains and lieutenants were elected. John McGinnis was made captain of "The Black" and Walter Sullivan captain of "The Gold." The two sections then returned to the auditorium where they joined fervently in singing the school songs.

It was at this juncture that the pledges were made. They were given in the form of challenges. The Gold first challenged the Black to give up chewing gum. The Black then retaliated by challenging the Gold to give up chewing tobacco. Again the Gold arose and challenged the Black to give up cigarettes. Miss Nancy Lentz again arose and for the girls of the Gold challenged the girls of the Black to cease using "compacts" in school. Her opponents accepted instantly.

The casting of the banned articles then began. Someone started it by pitching a package of cigarettes to the chapel platform. Thereupon, chewing gum, chewing tobacco, cigarettes and even a few compacts descended on the stage. There was a veritable shower, accompanied by a huge demonstration on the part of all the students.

A challenge to good work was made and this was followed by cheers from both teams. Competitive singing of the school songs was then held with Price Doyle leading.

The Wednesday demonstration in chapel came about after considerable dissatisfaction had been evinced by both students and faculty at the spirit with which the students were doing not only their work but also their play. The general average in the mid-terms held late in January was very low, there being a very large number of failures. The basketball team has not been supported as it should, say members of the team and little interest was being taken in the other school activities.

It was felt that something should be done to improve the school and plans have been made for the meeting but after they had assembled, the enthusiasm swept the entire student body completely off its feet. One of the girls put it in typical flapper terms when she said: "It was just too thrilling for words. It was perfectly grand and we felt just like we were in a revival."

MAY FESTIVAL BEING DISCUSSED ALREADY

Queries About May Queen Taking Lead in Thought of Townsfolk.

Who'll be the May Queen is being asked on all sides by persons interested in the festival this year.

The celebration last year was such a success that even this early people are asking about it. The matter of who is to be the queen is causing the greatest worry.

H. W. Blanks stated positively this morning that there would be a celebration this year which "would completely eclipse last year's performance." Although it is early, preparations are being made and the details are being worked out for a spectacle which will "make all Concord open its eyes."

WILL DUST CROPS WITH AEROPLANES

Mabee Arranges Exhibition of Dusting Cotton to Prevent Boll Weevils, Raleigh News and Observer.

Dusting cotton to control the boll weevil by a commercial airplane company is a probability for North Carolina farmers this season if plans being made by W. Bruce Mabee, extension entomologist for the State College extension service are carried to fruition this summer.

George B. Post, business manager of the Huff Daland Dusters, Inc., of Macon, Ga., was a visitor in Raleigh yesterday conferring with officials of the extension division relative to carrying on some dusting experiments or demonstrations under conditions selected by Mr. Mabee. The company represented by Mr. Post has done experimental work under the direction of Dr. B. R. Coad, in charge of the government boll weevil station near Tallulah, Louisiana. The company has built its own planes which can be used especially for this dusting work and which can cover much more territory in a much less period of time.

Last year, the company had eighteen planes in use in Georgia and the idea was found to be entirely practical. It is stated by the entomologists that the cost of dusting by airplane does not exceed that of dusting by the regular horse-drawn machines now in use by the North Carolina farmers. When the airplane is used, the company does the work with its own machines and make a certain charge for carrying out its contract. The work is done under the auspices of the college entomologists and according to their recommended methods.

"Airplane dusting," says Mr. Mabee, "has now passed the experimental stage. We know that the boll weevil may be as effectively controlled in this way as by the regular ground machines, and the work is done more quickly, more efficiently and with less labor. We have arranged for some demonstration to be conducted in the state this summer and then later if groups of farmers care to have the work done, we shall help them to have it done properly."

Mr. Mabee states that not only will demonstrations be given with dusting cotton but that some dusting of peach trees will also be done. This has been found to be practical at Fort Valley in Georgia and the government authorities stationed there to help in the peach industry are recommending this type of dusting for control of peach insects and diseases.

When the poison dust is expelled by the airplane, it is explained the back wash from the propellers causes the dust to break into finer particles than usual and covers the plant to be protected with a complete film of the powder in a finely divided condition.
