A Teacher's Protest Against "Drives,"
New York World.
Teachers complain that they are tired of "drives" which, they declare, serve only to disrupt classroom work and add to the teacher's burdens. The gist of their complaints is made public by City Superintendent of Schools, William J. O'Shea.

The billboards cannot hold all the "drives" we have had and the calendar cannot hold their "weeks." They all, of course, make a scramble for the schools, where they proceed to abuse the teacher's obligation to public service.

We yield too deferentially to whatever is done in the name of progress, regardless of how absurd the particular cause may happen to be. It would be a wholesome thing if opposition were expressed when some especially absurd campaign was launched. With such a possibility staring them in the face, the proponents of such drives as Learn-to-Swim Week, held during the chilly days of last month, might not be so rash.

The first automobile constructed by Cignot, in 1789, is still on view in a museum in Paris.

MRS. A. A. KING DIED HERE THIS MORNING

Death Comes After a Few Days' Illness.
Funeral Arrangements Not Made.

Mrs. A. A. King, one of the most loved women of Concord, died at her home on West Corbin street at 8:30 this morning after an illness of only a few days. "Aunt Add," as she was known to all her friends in Concord and the county, had celebrated her 80th birthday on February 27th and at that time had seemed in unusually good health. She was taken sick shortly after a party given in her honor. Her condition became serious when bronchial pneumonia developed and an account of her advanced age, she was unable to fight the disease long.

The hour of the funeral has not been determined as yet owing to the fact that arrangements can not be made until word is received from relatives in Texas. The funeral services will be conducted at Central Methodist Church and the burial will be made in Lincoln county beside the grave of her husband.

Mrs. King was born in Rutherford College, February 27, 1845. She was married October 16, 1864 to Joseph Hamilton King, who was also of Lincoln county. She has lived in Concord for a number of years.

Surviving Mrs. King are five children, Peter E. King, of Constantinople, Turkey; J. Oliver King, of Oklahoma; Horace J. King, of Texas; Mrs. J. W. Clegg, of Greensboro, and Miss Ida Mae King, of this city. There are 18 grand-children and 19 great grand-children. Mrs. King also has two sisters living, Mrs. D. P. Dayvaunt, of Texas, and Mrs. P. A. Hoyle, of Newton. She was a sister of the late Dr. D. D. Johnson, who for years operated a drug store in Concord.

The announcement of Mrs. King's death came as a distinct shock to her hundreds of friends and relatives in the city and county. The news spread rapidly and cast a pall of gloom over the city, the deceased being one of the best known and most popular women in Concord.

Mrs. King had been a member of the Methodist Church all her life, and for many years had been an active member of Central Methodist Church, of this city. She attended services regularly, was keenly interested in the affairs of the Church and was a powerful influence for good in the various circles and societies of the women of the church.

Y BEATS HIGH SCHOOL IN LOP-SIDED CONTEST

Highs No Match For Larger and More Agile Y Team.

In a lop-sided match at the High School Gym Friday night, the Y basketball team completely crushed and walked over the High School team and beat the High by a 40-7 score.

The outcome was never in doubt. From the very first of the game, it was evident that the High School would not be able to compete with the Y. The Association team had not only superior height but had better pass-work and appeared to be more agile.

The game was witnessed by the largest crowd of high school students that have been on the floor during the entire season. Despite the fact that their team was losing, they cheered every play in which the High School showed up well. When Jarrett made the High's first field goal in the fourth quarter, pandemonium reigned for several minutes.

Jarrett was the only High School player able to make any field goals, shooting all three for his team. The scoring of the Y team was very evenly divided.

LEGION MEETING FEATURED BY ADDRESSES FROM VISITORS

Supper Served at Conclusion of Program.
Quartette Delights the Audience.

Speeches by State Commander Wade Phillips, of Lexington; Paul Noel, also of Lexington, and Rev. Mr. Sherry, field secretary of the five million dollar endowment fund for orphan children, featured the meeting of the American Legion held in its club rooms on Depot Street Friday night.

All three of the visiting speakers made entertaining and forceful addresses. They congratulated the Legion on the excellence of the club rooms and on the good chapter which the local post had maintained in the past.

A quartette composed of R. E. Ridenhour, Jr., Sam Goodman, R. P. Benson and Jess Raiford sang several humorous selections.

The meeting was presided over by John M. Oglesby, former commander of the local post. Rev. C. B. Scovill opened the meeting with a short prayer which was followed by the song, "America." In addition to "America," a number of other songs were sung by the members of the post led by the quartette.

At the conclusion of the meeting a Dutch supper was served.
