PHILADELPHIA RECORD. Spotty and irregular conditions are to be found in various lines of trade and industry, but springtime is expected to bring about improvement. In spite of the jinx of Friday, the 13th, the past week has found progress in the reports to Dan's from various sections of the country. Their tenor is that "general trade continues in a wholesome position and results for the first quarter of the year will disclose further gains in various instances. Reports showing larger earnings by different corporate interests give convincing proof of the improved conditions, and more dividend resumption and increases have been announced. While outputs apparently exceed consumption in certain lines and some adjustments are being made, burdensome accumulations of goods are the exception and the close approach of spring is beginning to give a renewed stimulus to buying."

The Credit Clearing House notes a substantial gain in wholesale orders during the week. The lull of February has been succeeded by a complete recovery in purchasing, with an increase the country over of 8 per cent. over the preceding week. The largest gain was in the Mountain states, with 11.3 per cent. The Pacific coast reported the smallest increase, 2 per cent. Compared with the corresponding week of last year, the country as a whole showed a gain of 2.7 per cent.

February payrolls of the steel companies, while below the same months record last year, are the largest wage disbursements in the industry since April, 1924. The February report of production also shows an excess over January of two-thirds of 1 per cent. As to the price situation, what has been said already can only be repeated. The comment is made that "some of the advanced prices are virtually forgotten, while others are obtained on small and inconsequential tonnage. This leaves the finished steel market in general at the level obtained January 1st, but in a few spots it is a shade easier still. In the main, however, such advances in November and December are retained."

The census report on cotton showed on Saturday a total of 550,000 bales consumed by domestic mills during February, compared with 508,000 in the same month last year and 600,000 during January. The figures proved to be slightly above private estimates and, with unsettled weather in the southwest, caused something of a buying movement at the week-end. The government report on exports showed a decrease of 24 per cent. last month from the previous month, but at that they were far in excess of any other February shipments since the war, and the takings by domestic mills were the largest on record for February, except in 1923. Interest is shown in a wide variety of cotton textiles but prospective purchasers appear to be discouraged by the high price schedules, justified by the manufacturers by the cost of production. The London sales of wool last week showed declines, but not as great as those in the February and March sales in Brisbane, Australia. The early wool buying in the west has begun in Ohio, where it is said a substantial amount of wool has been purchased on the sheep's back by a buyer for Boston interests. The general hide market continues weak. Recent declines in that market have caused buyers of finished leather to look for reductions, but prices have been firm on moderate business.

Wheat prices had their greatest break in the history of the Chicago Board of Trade Friday, May wheat dropping 15 cents a bushel under Thursday's close, with the break in rice about the same. Wheat showed a decline of 30 cents from the high point of the movement. The collapse has resulted in the final loss to the market of public participation in the industry since April, 1924. The February report of production also shows an excess over January of two-thirds of 1 per cent. As to the price situation, what has been said already can only be repeated. The comment is made that "some of the advanced prices are virtually forgotten, while others are obtained on small and inconsequential tonnage. A CHERISHED POSSESSION

Col. Cameron Has a Watch That Was Bought in Liverpool in 1754.

(By the Associated Press) Raleigh, N. C., March 16.—Colonel Benjamin Cameron, of Staunville, possesses many relics and heirlooms, but one of his most cherished possessions is a watch that was purchased by his great-grandfather in Liverpool, England, in 1754. The watch still keeps good time, said Colonel Cameron. It is wound by means of a key and the works are hand-somely engraved.

"I have been to the very store in Liverpool where this watch was purchased by my grandfather, in 1754. The storekeeper showed me the record of sale.

"But that is not the most interesting thing about this watch," continued Colonel Cameron.

"It was carried several hundred yards down the river once when I was in a railroad wreck and the garment in the pocket of which I kept it was found lodged in the limb of a tree, but the watch kept on running. It did not even stop.

"That was back in 1890. The wreck occurred near Salisbury. I was asleep in a Pullman when it happened. The train fell ninety feet, through a bridge, while going forty miles an hour. When I waked up I was pinned in beneath an upper berth. The only response I got to the calls for help I uttered was the hissing of the engine. I knew something had to be done right away. I was in water up to my neck. I finally managed to get hold of the chains that held the upper berth in place and released them. Then I extricated myself.

"This watch was found later far down the river, where it had been taken by the current when the train fell into the water. I shall never forget that experience."

Colonel Cameron's watch has the maker's name and the number in it. The number is small, indicating its antiquity. The company that made it is still doing business, Colonel Cameron said. It has put out millions of watches since his was purchased in 1754 by his great grandfather.

Will Give Lecture Here on Eyesight Conservation.

Charles F. Southard, field secretary of the Eyesight Conservation Council of America, of which John J. Davis, secretary of labor, is first councillor, will deliver lectures, illustrated with lantern slides in the public schools of the city on Monday, the 24th.

Mr. Southard will explain the causes of eye-strain and glare and will try to impress upon the parents and students the importance of guarding against impairing the eyesight in early youth.

Twenty-five out of 42 million people in shops, factories and other business concerns recently examined are said to have been suffering from defective vision, and the council is striving to assist in bringing about a better understanding of the preservation of the eyes in order to lessen the economic waste.

The schedule of Mr. Southard's lectures has not been definitely arranged, but he will visit all of the schools.

Members of all the Parent-Teachers Associations and all other parents interested in learning how to protect the eye sight of their children are invited to hear Mr. Southard at Central School at 3:30 Monday afternoon March 24th. Mr. Southard is visiting all the larger cities in this section and spent three days this week in visiting the Charlotte schools.

Short Circuits

A short circuit not only means diminished power but is a probable cause of fire. Ferret out a "short" as soon as you have any reason to suspect one. It pays in lower battery upkeep, increased power, and may save your car from total loss by fire.

There are other common causes of fire, some of which cannot be easily detected. Even a minor blaze in your car or garage means an outlay of cash for repairs. It is wise to insure your car against such loss.

A Challenge.

Greensboro News.

Seemingly satisfied that the newspapers have been bought up for the primary election as a result of filling their tills from the receipts of political advertising, Representative Connor, of Wilson, sought to prove and point and expose the newspaper folks by championing the bill of that other eminent patriot, McDowell Neal, which would have compelled publication of receipts from this source. The Daily News regrets that the measure didn't pass to show up some cheap politicians; but even in its failure it has exposed some of them. So far as observed the papers seem quite willing for a show-down; they have nothing to conceal. During discussion of the bill, which was defeated in the house by only 29 to 39. Mr. Turlington, of Iredell, remarked that "there is no more reason for newspapers to disclose what is paid them for legitimate business than there is for a lawyer to disclose what he receives from a client." Notwithstanding the law was defeated, the assertion is risked here that every newspaper will gladly, cheerfully, enthusiastically, make sworn statement of every cent received for political advertising if every lawyer-legislative candidate will open up and make public the amount he receives from corporation clients. It would certainly be most interesting reading for the folks back home to learn how many of the lawyer-legislators are, or were just prior to the election, and will be again when the legislature adjourns, the retained attorneys of corporations, public and private, and various other interests that are much concerned in legislation.

If the idea is to inaugurate a "clean clean" campaign, the newspapers will welcome it. Why not proceed voluntarily, without waiting for a law on the subject?

Ever, if a man does pass you with his auto he may be behind with his payments.
