R. O. SELF NAMED AS BUS DIRECTOR

Chief Clerk Corporation Commission to Run Bus Laws With His Other Duties. Raleigh News and Observer. Official designation by the Corporation Commission of R. O. Self, chief clerk of the commission, to have charge of the administration of the new motor bus legislation; failure of any competing bus lines to agree on schedules; a last minute rush of many applications for franchise by bus lines; and the perfection of a mutual insurance company to underwrite the required insurance which must be carried on the buses, were features of the last day before the new bus laws go into effect.

Mr. Self's designation as administrator of the bus regulations carries with it no exemption from his other duties as chief clerk of the commission, but he has been allowed an assistant, J. A. Bland, who has been freight inspector for the commission.

Whether Mr. Self will have the authority to arrange schedules or whether the Corporation Commission will have to sit as a body on each complaint of a bus line is a matter which has not yet been determined and it is thought that a ruling from Attorney General Dennis G. Brummit will be asked.

That some such action must be taken immediately seems certain for none of the bus lines operating in competition have been able to reach an agreement among themselves as to schedules. The schedule controversy between the Safety Coach Line and the United Stage Line operating between Raleigh and Greensboro, was the subject of a meeting yesterday.

They were unable to agree on the privilege of leaving on the half hour. The matter will be decided by the Corporation Commission.

At least a dozen other lines have submitted schedules which will have to be the subject of action by the commission. They operate in the main between Greensboro and Charlotte and between Charlotte and Asheville.

Face "Peeling" Brings Death.

Mrs. Jessie Gilchrist died during a face "peeling" operation at a Hollywood, Calif., beauty parlor. An autopsy showed traces of a poison commonly used in face peeling operations. This was the second operation of its kind that Mrs. Gilchrist had undergone. The beauty doctor who treated her the first time fled the country after one of her patients died.

CLEAN PICTURES AND SENSIBLE CENSORSHIP.

Christian Science Monitor. In a recent speech made in Hollywood to a group of motion picture directors, Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., put the matter of clean pictures before his audience with a clarity that must have come startlingly to many ears. He told these leaders of film destiny that he understood and sympathized with the many intricate problems that lay before them, and he assured them that he had no intention of laying down formulas for what they should do. "I simply lay before you one formula," he said, "and that of what you must not do. You must not offend common decency. That's all."

There can be no doubt that Mr. Hays struck the vital spot of the 1925 picture situation when he summed up the whole question of censorship and film policy in this one forcible dictum. At a time when books and plays are becoming more and more emboldened in the presentation of salacious subject matter, it is an amazing thing to consider that the "movies" are almost automatically and voluntarily straightening up. Such a pronouncement as Mr. Hays argues a state of affairs that is practically without precedent.

This cause of clean pictures is not being figured on from a purely moral basis either. The picture world is recognizing that it is as much a matter of good business as sound morals to have a clean screen spread before the public. As if in answer to the general thought summed up in Mr. Hays' pronouncement comes the credo from one company to the effect that this concern is out to make only clean pictures. He realizes the value of such a policy from a sound business standpoint, and is pushing his slogan of "Studios where clean pictures are being made." This may seem to be the "straight and narrow path" for this company, when on the neighboring lots the pursuit of the easy boxoffice dollar through sensational films is going on apace. Yet the cry of clean pictures is in the air and the support of the public is assured.

The only explanation of the curious protection that has guarded the moral tone of the screen almost from the beginning lies in the fact that it is the first art to have ever been dependent on the voice of the majority, for its existence. There can be no pandering to the tastes of the few in this picture game, because the production and distribution aspects are so closely interdependent. It is also the first art form that must be strictly businesslike to succeed. If there is more business than art involved in the motion picture today, it is no harm to art in the long run. Perhaps the older arts have something to learn after all, from this upstart of the present century, which is able at twenty to conduct its affairs with a decorum more or less forgotten by its elders. There need be no fear that in observing the requirements of common decency all originality and appeal will be driven from the screen. Rather will abstention from the objectionable lead screen talent into lines of greater beauty and invention. Mr. Hays is deserving of universal support in his campaign for clean pictures and sensible censorship.

He Looked Like the Man. Two Negroes were working in a coal bin in a Mississippi town, one down in the bin throwing out the coal and the other wielding a shovel. The one inside picked up a large lump and heaving it carelessly into the air, struck the other a resounding blow on the head.

As soon as the victim had recovered from his momentary daze he walked over to the edge of the bin and peering down at his mate, said: "Nigger, how come you don't watch where you throws dat coal? You done hit me smack on the head."

The other looked surprised. "Did I hit you, nigger?" "You sho' did," came the answer. "And I jes want to tell you, I see been promising the debil a man a long time, and you certainly does resemble my promise."

Says Germany Is Arming.

Germany is persisting in her effort to maintain a complete staff of officers for an army such as she had in 1914, according to the report of the allied war committee headed by Marshal Foch. Illicitly manufactured guns and other war material were found, as well as secret and walled shops in steel mills ready to turn out cannon at a moment's notice. German pacifists gave the tips that led to the discovery, wit was said. The ambassadors' council, evidently impressed by the evidence furnished, asked Marshal Foch for suggestions as to how the Germans can be forced to comply with the disarmament provision of the Versailles treaty.

There Were Two Sides to This Story—and Both Are Told

RUTH WATERBURY, THE WIFE

How would you like "the wife" to tell the world what she thinks of you? And, wife, how would you like friend husband to broadcast his opinions of you? One of the national magazines has evidently gone a long way toward explaining the psychology of matrimonial troubles by thus getting two intelligent persons in the throes of the same experiment to tell frankly and in detail the how and the why of it all. Neither it is said, knew that the other was also writing their story for publication in the same magazine.

MILTON RAISON, THE HUSBAND

The courtship and marriage had been the talk of Greenwich Village and New York's literary circles. Milton Raison, a young poet, hooded like friend husband to broadcast his opinions of you? One of the national magazines has evidently gone a long way toward explaining the psychology of matrimonial troubles by thus getting two intelligent persons in the throes of the same experiment to tell frankly and in detail the how and the why of it all. Neither it is said, knew that the other was also writing their story for publication in the same magazine.
