SCIENCE BACKS TRUE RELIGION, SAYS DR. REILAND

Ethical Basis of Love and Sacrifice Demanded as New Christian Stimulus. A friend of this paper who formerly lived in Concord but who now is a resident of New York, writes as follows:

"Dear Mr. Sherrill: Enclosed is a clipping from the Herald-Tribune of Monday giving extracts from a sermon which was preached in the First Presbyterian Church Sunday morning, March 22nd, by the rector of St. George's Episcopal Church of this city. It gives some of the views of one of the modernists and is radically different, though not necessarily opposed in all respects, to the views which we have held for so long. Something is taking place in religion and I am sure I do not know what the outcome will be. I feel that the outstanding feature, and one which I think is hopeful, is that there is a disposition to talk about religion upon any and all occasions. I hope the Christian people can take advantage of this sentiment, or lack of sentiment, and make the most of it. "This minister is even bolder than Dr. Fosdick in his utterances but his communion doesn't bother him at all."

The following is the clipping referred to: The Rev. Dr. Karl Reiland, rector of St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church, declared yesterday in his sermon that science and religious faith were not inimical. The light of science on the Scriptures, he held, led to a clearer understanding of the teachings of Jesus. "There is a feeling," he said, "that science has no business in qualifying religious satisfactions; that somehow it is opposed to religion, especially in its doctrine of evolution. This makes for a perverted view of God, who must be behind a biological fact as well as behind a Bible truth. The same God is back of every 'ology' or 'onmy' and must be responsible for them as the creative cause."

New Attitudes Demanded. "The scientist is in no danger of discovering what is to God's discredit. The more he can unfold to us of God and His work, the better we shall understand the Creator and the better will our religion be on account of the truths which must result from the resolution of scientific fact with religious assertion. The creation story in the Book of Genesis, the teaching of the fall of man, resulting in death, entailed upon the race an account of an original sin, must go in the face of the establishment of evolution. This is, in reality, the only fall that man has sustained—the fall of this nation."

"So our scientific learning is driving us to feel that the Christian religion demands, among other things, four new attitudes. First, a new ethic as a basis of our religious stimulus—not an ethical basis of fear and a hope of reward, but an ethical basis of love and sacrifice. Second, a new focus—not some heaven to be achieved or hell to be avoided in the future, or, as the early Christians, to distrust the reason, despise the body and disparage the world—but a spiritual focus upon the value of this life here on earth where Jesus came to meet it and deal with it and help it to greater abundance. We know no heaven beyond this until we get there, no life but this until we live it, no place but this until we take it. Third, a new sanction to accept and follow the teaching of the Master, not because of prophecy nor the physical miracle of a Virgin birth nor any other miracle, nor the atonement satisfying an angry God—for none of these reasons—but for dogma nor for creed will the Church prevail and Jesus be worshipped."

Jesus' "Moral Need." "Jesus will be worshipped because He will be seen to be the economic spiritual and moral need of civilization in general and of character in particular, and Christian satisfactions will be where Jesus put them—not in the variegated faiths which you can express, but in the unmistakable fruits of life which you can produce."

Fourth, a new enthusiasm; not for something above and beyond our sense of reality, but an enthusiasm where Jesus found it—for and among his fellow men; an enthusiasm for the kind of life they should lead; the way they should walk. And so we need a new enthusiasm for humanity, for our common life among our companions of earth."

GOVERNMENT TO EXPEDITE PARCEL POST SHIPMENTS Payment of Extra 25 Cents Will Give Better Service. Washington, D. C., March 24.—The Postoffice Department has inaugurated what is called a "special handling" service by which parcel post mail will receive the same treatment as first class letters. Persons desiring to avail themselves of this quick parcel service can do so by paying 25 cents in addition to the regular postage. In explaining the new system, Postmaster General New said: "Its particular advantage applies mainly to its handling en route on railroads and other transportation facilities between the postoffice of dispatch and the postoffice of destination. It must be carefully distinguished from the 'special delivery' service, where the chief advantage applies after the arrival of mail at the postoffice of destination." Mr. New added that expedited parcel post mail can be further hastened by special delivery if the sender so desires by adding a special delivery stamp to the other charges. New Superintendent of Federal Prisons. Washington, March 25.—Luther C. White, of Massachusetts, was appointed today as superintendent of federal prisons.
