

HERE ARE PUZZLES

Clues and Places That Are Nouns and Verbs. Can you name a seven-letter fabric from Cambodia? Or a five-letter surgical dressing that took its name from a town in Palestine? Or a popular seven-letter color named for a famous battle in Italy? The number of common words that had their origin in place names is surprising, says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographical Society.

source. In justice to Damascus it must be said her own looms later made the weaves as perfectly as her steel-workers made Damascus blades. "Muslin still is woven in the cool damp cellars of Mosul from long staple silky cotton of southern Mesopotamia. Pustian is a heritage of Rome in Egypt. The 'tossatum,' or walls, protecting an imperial legion on the Nile between the nucleus of Cairo and in the Pustat, or Old Cairo quarter, Arabian weavers created fustian. Names bear living testimony to France's contribution to the textile art. Cambic is the child of Cambini hot long since a focal point of the west front. Fulle, in central France, made possible the gauzy cloud of beauty for many a modern 'creation,' while gauze itself honors Gaza in Palestine; Arras, also on the Western front made wall hangings so well that civilization forgets to capitalize the 'a' andingham is said to relate to Guingamp in Brittany, although it may go back to a Mala term 'going gang,' meaning striped. "Worsted barely manages to squeeze on the maps of Norfolk county, England, today, so little connection has it with the production of thousands of yards of worsted. The Channel Island of Jersey is well advertised by its cows, but who

SHORT DRESSES FAIL TO IMPRESS AT UNIVERSITY

Girls With Longer Skirts Won Most Favor at Carolina Easter Dance. Chapel Hill, April 20.—Dresses that end just below the knees may be proper and acceptable according to the new edition of styles, but they are not the sort that win favor with men on a ballroom floor if the Easter dances held at the University this week may be taken as a criterion.

LITTLE WILL CASE FINALLY ADJUSTED

Anson Sanatorium Will Get $52,000 Instead of $100,000 as Bequeathed in Will. Wadesboro, April 18.—A final agreement and adjudication of the Little will case was perfected before Judge T. D. Bryson here this morning by agreement of counsel for the executors, the children of the late R. E. Little, and proponent, the Bank of Wadesboro, whereby the last two codicils of the will of R. E. Little were set aside, the body of the will remaining intact.

Wants Gullies to Fill Themselves

The Progressive Farmer. "What is the cheapest and quickest way to fill big gullies? Make a barricade across the gully, using old wire fencing or poultry wire at short intervals. Fasten the wire first in the bottom of the gully and then to the two sides, using driven stakes to hold it in place. The wire should be placed V-shaped, the bottom of the 'V' pointing down the gully. Place straw, leaves, or trash of any kind above each wire barricade to catch and hold the soil. Gullies four or five feet deep can be filled in a short time in this way. To keep them filled, terraces must be made.

connects it with the jersey cloth that it originally made for stockings? Asminster in Devon admits it has made no rug for more than 100 years. "These towns and places proudly boast their inventions, but the way of inventors is hard—they often fail to get the credit. There is a noble bird in America which grazes our fields annually, but because some one thought it was a native of the Near East we call it turkey. The guinea pig ought to be a Guiana pig and about all panama hats see of Panama is the carpet—it is always painted to explode the myth, but Brussels makes no Brussels carpets. They were made in Wilton, England, another rug "trade-mark" and took the title Brussels carpet because the designs imitated the famous Brussels tapestries.

"A man achieves fame's pinnacle, it has been said, when his name is incorporated into the language as a verb. The verb 'pasteurize' is a splendid wreath on Pasteur's grave. Few cities or countries give us verbs, although they have given hosts of nouns and adjectives. Sixty miles south of Smyrna, a river empties into the Mediterranean after twisting a 200 mile tortuous course. Modern maps call it Menderes but once it was known as the Meander, memorialized in the verb 'to meander.' In 1500 when the classics of Greece and Rome were being saved to the world by the first master printers, Aldus Manutius of Venice, brought out an edition of Vergil, dedicating it to the States of Italy. For this volume he created a new font of type, simulating script. When we italicize today we use that font. A Chinese port serves to label a practice in the very 'changhaai.'

Make a better mousetrap, it is said, and the world will wear a path to your door. Names of towns and countries in our language are trade-marks of famous 'mouse-traps.' Venice early adopted the sentiment 'when better mouse-traps are made Venice will make them' and this city has given its name probably to more things than any other. There is tribute to its craftsmen in the terms venetian glass, venetian sauce, venetian red, venetian ball, venetian blind, venetian carpet, venetian chalk, venetian (a textile), venetian dentil, venetian door, venetian embroidery, venetian flat point, venetian mallow, venetian pearl, venetian raised point, venetian soap, venetian samac, venetian well for organs, venetian white, venetian windows, and venetian, meaning a domino for masquerades.

"Sardine" and "sardonic" have little in common, but they had the same mother, Sardania. The first arose from the native practice of preparing small fish and the last from the fact that the ancients got there on a herb that puckered up the mouth. The Phoenicians got salt at a little port in Southern Spain and so they called it 'mader,' meaning salt; but when we use its revised form, madder, we mean a luscious grape. 'Vandal' and 'frank' are the opinions of dying Rome concerning certain Germanic tribes. "Long ago a bloody battle was fought near Magenta, Italy. Quite unopposed of the gory allusion, women often wear magenta named for this reddened field. In 1836 a fancy-dressed troop of Croats from Austria were in France and the consummate glory of their costume, the busy business man perpetuates today in his only vanity—the tie, or a cravat, from 'Croat.'

"Patrians of Rome liked to summer at a pleasant sheltered seacoast resort they called Baia. Rome's Miami has given its name to thousands of indentations on hundreds of seacoasts and in some tongues it still is 'baia.' Champagne should be called perignon, and thereby hangs a tale. Certainly the man who may have invented the cork in cork stop bottles as well as a wine, deserves a place in the language. Dom Perignon was a monk in charge of the cellar of the Haut Villers Abbey in Champagne back in the 18th century. It had been the custom to stop bottles with pads of hemp or cloth steeped in oil, but the monk conceived the use of corks instead. The family stopped wine, he discovered, cut up all sorts of articles, that soon became famous. The Evil One helped in its manufacture, so rumor spread, but finally Dom Perignon's secret leaked out. The world goes elsewhere than to Champagne for the conception today, though it is called champagne, forgetting Perignon. The English language is full of geography. But how many of us connect those terms with cities or places: lima beans, laocine, hamrick, china, coffee, canaries, bauxite, navy, gasconade, troy weight, cologne bologna sausage, tangerine, derby, castle soap and astrakhan?"

Great Small Grasses and New Pastures Carefully. Just as grain fields and pastures begin to look green in the late winter or very early spring, we are tempted to turn stock on them and let them stay. But it does not pay to graze too closely. Let's remember these facts: 1. Close grazing seriously injures the grain and the pasture, and when there is little to graze the stock get little benefit, but the crop is injured by too close grazing and tramping. The ground is injured, too. 2. Under no circumstances should temporary pastures be grazed when the ground is wet. 3. Usually between March 20th and April 15th all grazing of small grain should cease.

Music rules the natural world. That was a great day when the planets first swung into place and space. That was a greater day when the spheres were anointed with song. The world was born with music—when the "stars first sang together." The world was redeemed with music—"Peace on earth, good will toward men." The world will end with music—"The Song of Moses and the Lamb." God's great organ is nature. "The stars are the keys"—the stars.

"Forever singing as they shine, The hand that made us is divine," says Schopenhauer. "Music is the melody to which the world is the text." We used to think it was poetry that Congress spoke—"Music hath power to soften rocks or bend a knotted oak." That's not poetry. Under the power of music of the great organ in the cathedral of Rheims, the stone walls years ago began to crumble. The architects say this was a direct result of the vibrations. It has been recently discovered, that the stones of the churches of northern Germany are crumbling under the minor chords of the great organs. Scientists have just discovered that there is one tone that will crumble rock over the hardest flint. And scientists believe it is possible for a sound to be reached which will disintegrate the diamond. Music "hath power to soften rocks." When we read that Apollo played and the rocks did listen, that was nearer science than poetry.

"Orpheus with his lute made trees, And the mountain tops that freeze, Bow themselves when he did sing, To his music." Music rules the natural world. All the air is filled with invisible bells. Angels are the ringers and the music falls in waves "as sweet as melted pearl." Didn't you ever hear the mountain ring with music and all the hills sing with joy? The sifting of the winds, the beating of the waves, the sighing of the boughs, the whist of the bird's wing—these are part of Nature's great orchestra. The chirping robin, the twittering swallow, the caroling lark, the trilling thrush, the warbling canary—these are part of Nature's great choir. The dirge of the tree tops, the moaning of the seas, the weird soundings of the woods, the whisper of the spring, the cadence of the waterfall, the zephyr of the winds, the rhythm of the brook—these are Nature's minor chords.

The deep roar of the ocean as it beats against the rocks, the thundering oratorio of the cataract, the crash of the storm, "the music of the spheres"—these are Nature's major chords. "Everything that has breath doth declare that music rules the world of Nature." Music a Power in National Life. Music rules the national world. He was more than poet who said, "If I may write a nation's songs, I care not who writes her laws." One national air is worth more to a country than an army of 100,000 men. What the "Marseillaise" has done for France, "God Save the King" and "The Star Spangled Banner" has done for America. Song has slain more than the sword. Ten thousand Greeks rush into the battle of Marathon and under the intoxication of their national song drive 100,000 Persians into the sea. A handful of Christians at Tours, singing as they fight, "The Lord is a strong tower," scatter the hordes of Saracens every whiteward. Gustavus Adolphus was thirty years of age when he was inspired by song. The victories of Scotland, Cromwell, Luther, were the victories of Christian song.

Music the Great Heart Power. Music rules the human world. It elevates the thought, purifies the soul, uplifts the life, awakens holy emotions. It gives polish and finish. It vivifies the respiration, energizes the muscles, quickens the circulation, stirs the soul! Not what a man says but what a man sings determines his character. Not the acts but the songs reveal the man. "The man that hath no music in him, him I sell," Cromwell, Luther. Nor is it moved with chord of sweet sounds. Is it for treasons, stratagems, and spoils? Sings one, "He who does not sing at his work is a dangerous man." "All one's life is music if one but touch the notes rightly and in time," says Ruskin. Would that were true of all. "Within men are lutes and sing harps"—true if men but knew how to touch the strings. When Liszt's father asked him what he would be, he pointed to the picture of Beethoven and said, "That." And in answer to his father's surprise, said, "It is in me." Music—it is in all of us if we, but knew it. "Some men move through life as a band of music moves down a street, bringing out melody on every side, to every one near and far." "The passing of many as the passing of Evangeline; when they pass there is the evanescence of sweet music."

Long after it was heard no more. "The music in my heart I bore." "When Handel, writing 'The Messiah,' wrote 'He was despised and rejected of men,' he fell sobbing. Handel had ears we not of not. When Jenny Lind was in this country more than seventy years ago, Dr. Lyman Abbott went to hear her in the great auditorium 'The Messiah.' He tells us an old sea captain sat beside him and asked him to point out the great singer. After a chorus or two and a few solos, Jenny Lind arose and sang, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden." As she sang the heavens seemed to open and the great audience heard not her but Him singing down the ages, "Come unto me." As she finished, the silence more eloquent than applause hushed the audience. Doctor Abbott, hearing a harsh, guttural sound, turned and behold! the old sea captain snoring. There is no music without unless there is music within.

Music is more healing than medicine. It hath power to soothe the troubled breast. Pythagoras was in the habit of quieting his troubles with the harp. Philip V. of Spain cured himself of melancholy by listening to the famous singer Farinelli. Elton in trouble asked that music be brought. Saint Cecilia had perturbed spirits with David's harp. The old philosopher claimed that music could restore the original harmony of the soul. Paul and Silas found that music soothed and softened their dungeon bed. Beautifully and truthfully says Longfellow: "And the night shall be filled with music, And the cares that infest the day Shall fold their tents like the Arabs, And silently steal away." No wing has such power to lift as music.

Music and Religion. Music rules the religious world. No God no music. He is the inspiration of it. Music comes from God and leads back to God. Montaigne says, "Music is the only art that does not corrupt the mind, for it is born of God." He started the stars to singing and inspired the angel host to sing "Glory to God in the highest," and filled the hearts of the redeemed hosts with "Ho, y, holy, holy, God—that's the name that sets all the strings of the soul vibrating. Religion is the mother of music. Even the Holy Spirit is put under the figure of music when it says, "Thou hearest the sound thereof." There are more commands so there to pray. "Sing ye to God all ye kingdoms of the earth, sing ye to God." Paul exhorts us to "admonish one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual song."

The loftiest book of music ever given to the world was given to us by David, the psalmist of Israel. His 150 psalms are all songs. The first book printed in America was the psalm-book. The religious world has more than 400,000 hymns. The New Testament church, the Scotch church, the early Methodist church was a triumphant church because a singing church. The great musical productions have been religious productions: Mendelssohn's "Elijah," Haydn's "Creation," Beethoven's "Mount of Olives," Bach's "Massion," Spohn's "Last Judgment." When Spurgeon has been forgotten, and Beecher's name is milder, and Luther's sermons are out of print, Wesley, Toplady, Perrenet, and Adams will live on through their "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Rock of Ages," "Coronation," and "Nearer, My God, to Thee." A chronometer can measure time, a cyclometer can measure distance but nothing can measure the power of music. For sixteen years no music was heard in the ancient temple. A temple without music, a soul without music. In vision does it not come over you—the evenings when around the little cabinet organ with your mother you used to sing, "Is My Name Written There?" "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," "Hear the Bells of Heaven?" The bells of Heaven—Don't You Hear Them? They ring out, "Oh, Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" Only the music of heaven can make melody in the soul.

Music in Heaven. Music rules the heavenly world. There is one link between earth and heaven—music. The twenty-two chapters of Revelations are full of music of heaven. Music is heaven and heaven is music. There is no discord in heaven and that makes heaven. There is nothing but discord in hell, and that makes hell. "Music is the love language of the soul." It is the language of the skies. All earthly things shall pass away—all but music. It is the one immortal thing. The music of all bubbling streams and singing trees and sweet sounds and noble friendships will roll on beyond the grave. And I heard voices as it were great thunder, and they sang a new song—the song of Moses and the Lambs. "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty." And the 144,000 shouted Amen and Amen. As says Pope, "Heaven, and heaven alone, is full of the sounds that song has sown." When Handel wrote the Hallelujah chorus he saw the heavens open. Music opens heaven. Richter says: "Music brings the waves of eternity near the weary heart of man as he stands on the shores of time longing to cross over. Music is the evening breeze of this and the morning breeze of the future life." As King Henry IV. by dying, he said, "Angels whisper music to my weary spirit." The morning breeze was fanning his locks. A soldier at Fort Donelson, two limbs torn off, life fast ebbing away, turned his pale face up towards the pale stars and whispered, "Though like a wanderer, The suna zone down, Darkness cover me, My rest is gone, Yet in my dreams I'd be, Nearer, My God, to Thee, Nearer to Thee."

Upon the gates. Let the music float out. Let the redeemed boat in—Christian Advocates (N.Y.).

The most popular girl on the floor the first night—and she was from Virginia and had never attended University dances before—wore a dress reminiscent of the old grandmother type. It was a gown of the colonial style, with a hooped skirt effect, the hoop being about the knees. Her coiffure was equally old-fashioned; her hair was parted in the middle and lay flat on either side. The men thought it was the individuality of the right sort and she got "the rush." She was Miss Blanche Spencer, of Martinsville, Va., who is attending the Holton Arms School, Washington D. C.

The dances were well attended by girls from this and neighboring states. They were chaperoned by the wives of faculty members. The conduct was reported as excellent. Altogether there were seven dances. The first, held on Tuesday evening, was given by the Junior Order of Gingham, Ogburn Yates, of Monroe, was leader, with Billy Devin, of Oxford, and Henry Johnson, of Tarboro, as assistants. The Sophomore Hop was held Wednesday morning with Fuller Brown, of Asheville, leader, and Horace Strickland, of Nashville, and Gus McPherson, of Raleigh, assistants.

The Gorgon's head dance was held Wednesday afternoon, with Jack Cobb, of Durham, leader, and Stacy Smith, of Asheville, and Lawrence Watt, of Reidsville, as assistants. The Monogram Club gave a dance Wednesday evening. Billy Devin, of Oxford, was leader, with Jeff Fordham, of Greensboro, and Emmett Underwood, of Charlotte, as assistants. Thursday afternoon the Junior Prom was given. Dave Woodard, of Wilson, was leader, and Chadwick Luzzell, of Greensboro, and James Webb, of Hillsboro, assisted. The final dance was the Easter German Thursday night. H. G. Little, of Greenville, was leader, with Henry Johnson, of Tarboro, and Hartwell Bass, of Henderson, as assistants.

CURED OF HOOK-WORM. Half Million Porto Rican Jibaros' "Jibaro" is the name given to the laborer of Porto Rico, and under modern methods more than half a million of these laborers have been cured of hook-worm, 300,000 by treatment provided by the government, and 200,000 by treatment provided by private means. The treatment is not complex, but consists in the main of Thymol and Epsom Salts in proper proportions. Pretty nasty to the taste one would imagine; not so with Paspao-Laxative-Links—about as good to the taste as candy. Even today many people in this great and glorious land are said to "have a hook-work," when they are merely run down, and lack energy, sufficient to supply the "go." Nearly all disease is traceable to derangements of the stomach or bowels—the most important organs, being the source of all energy. Almost all troubles—common cold, consumption, fever, etc., are due to a loss of vitality caused by imperfect stomach or bowel action. Indigestion and constipation form the starting point for a whole list of ills. Go to Pearl's or Gibson's Drug Store today and get Laxative-Links and see how good they will make you feel. Prove to your own satisfaction that they will assist nature in digesting the food and regulating the bowels more effectually than anything ever prepared. These druggists have them in stock and they carry the recommendation and guarantee. Be sure to get the Pink Candy Lozenges in the Pink Package. Should be used whenever. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Two State holidays occur in North Carolina in May, these being the 10th, Confederate Memorial Day, and the 20th, Mecklenburg Independence Day. The 30th, National Decoration Day, though not a State holiday, is observed by the postoffice, and in Raleigh the Confederate veterans usually decorate the graves of the Federal dead in the National cemetery.
