Merchants Show the Way. "Newspaper advertising has materially cut down the cost of selling gas appliances," said C. A. Nash, of Davenport, sales manager of the United Light & Power Co., speaking before a meeting at Cedar Rapids, Ia.

"In the old days in the gas business," said he, "we depended on our house-to-house salesmen to create our market and to effect a large percentage of our sales. In recent years through the adoption of the successful advertising plans of merchants, our market has been developed so that now 75 per cent of our patronage comes to our store to make selections. Only 25 per cent of our sales are made by house-to-house canvassing."

"While our newspaper advertising expenditure have been increased and we are spending more than the average gas company does with the newspapers, at the same time we have found this most valuable, inasmuch as our sales have increased enough to more than justify the expenditures and in addition to this the outside selling expense has dropped to a small fraction of what it formerly was."

THE AMAZONS' DELIGHTED LARGE AUDIENCE IN CITY

Play One of Most Interesting and Best Acted Ever Presented by Concord Persons.

Viewing with "Green Stockings" and other of the best amateur plays ever presented here, "The Amazons" was presented to a large and enthusiastic audience Friday night at the high school auditorium, the persons taking part in the play being highly and justly praised for the fine manner in which the show was put over.

Mrs. Gales Pickard, Concord's most popular actress, had a stellar role in "The Amazons" and her work again stamped her as an actress of unusual ability. As the mother of three daughters who were trained to be boys, Mrs. Pickard was offered many fine opportunities to display her marked ability and on each occasion she made the best of the opportunities.

Misses Helen Marsh, Rebecca Dayviant and Dorothy Wolf as the "boy-trained" girls, played major roles in the play, being assisted by Bill Morris, Wallace Moore and Miles Wolf who were their most ardent suitors. Miss Helen Patterson as the training master for the young ladies, delighted the audience with the manner in which she handled the role assigned her.

Minor parts were assigned to Mr. Nims, Mr. Blanks, Mr. Doyle and Mr. McLeod, but these parts were so well acted that they really became major roles. The play was directed by Miss Margaret Virginia Ervin and Miss Belle Means and to their efforts is due much credit for the splendid performance.

Flowers used in the decorations on the stage were furnished by Efrid's. The play was given for the benefit of the High School Athletic Association and the High School Parent-Teachers Association.

Charlotte Man Seeks Divorce in Guilford

Greensboro, May 8.—William Keller, Charlotte resident, asks Guilford superior court for an absolute divorce from his wife, Mary Elizabeth Keller, in answer to a suit she had filed in the office of the clerk of court asking for alimony. In his answer and request for divorce, he denies that he is wealthy, but says that he has been making about $80 per week and turning $20 of that over to her. He claims that he has always been faithful to her and did not want to become separated from her, but asserts that she has an ungovernable temper which makes it impossible for him to stay near her and for that reason he asks that she not be allowed alimony and that he be given a divorce. Mrs. Keller lives in this city.

The Wireless Pirate

London, May 9.—The super-radio pirate has appeared in the person of the man who not only listens without paying a license fee, but who makes records of the voices of famous singers when they appear before the microphone. He can sell such pirated records much cheaper than the phonograph companies, who have to pay a big fee to the singer for his services.

EXCURSION BOAT MEETS DISASTER ON MISSISSIPPI

Had Half a Hundred Prominent Persons Aboard—Most of Them Saved. Memphis, May 8.—Four are known to be dead and fourteen are missing as a result of the capsizing of the United States government steamer Norman, sixteen miles south of Memphis on the Mississippi River late today, a wreckage of the survivors showed shortly before midnight tonight.

The survivors arrived here at 11:30 p. m. on board the steamer Mississippi. The Norman sank as she was returning from Cow Island with a party of engineers here attending the convention of the Mid-South Association of Engineers. She was moving along smoothly, according to survivors, when she suddenly began rocking from side to side for perhaps five minutes, when she careened far over and failed to recover. Three minutes later she had gone from sight.

The scene of the disaster is sixteen miles south of Memphis, opposite Coahoma landing, and 300 feet from the Tennessee shore. The known dead: Prof. Walter G. Kirkpatrick, University of Mississippi. Mrs. Kirkpatrick. Mrs. J. F. Dorroh, wife of Dean Dorroh, of the University of Mississippi. Major W. M. Gardner, Memphis. She steamer had on board about fifty persons and of these approximately 35 or 40 tonight were huddled in a little cabin on the shore of the river near the scene of the disaster. The place is isolated and was difficult to reach.

News-paper men sent to the scene were forced to make their way to Tunica, Miss., eight miles away, traveling part way on mule back, part by boat and part by automobile, to obtain wire facilities. The steamer sank at exactly 5:10 o'clock, according to survivors, who said there was no panic.

Tom Lea, who happened to be passing the Norman in a motor boat when she turned over, saved the lives of most of the rescued, W. W. Debard, of Memphis told the Associated Press. Few persons managed to swim ashore. There was no explosion when the boat sank, the survivors said, Jack Cochran, engineer, having turned off the fuel oil under the boilers when the boat began to misbehave.

The first news of the accident reached Memphis when George Foster, of Memphis, who swam ashore, reached the K. R. Armistead plantation on the river, near Lake Cormorant, Miss., and telephoned for help. Immediately afterward, efforts at rescue were started. Speed boats bearing physicians and newspaper men were then started for the scene.

At 11 o'clock tonight the steamers Monitor and Cisca, both equipped with searchlights, were cruising the waters at the scene endeavoring to locate bodies. Other steamers were reported on the way to aid.

The survivors were first taken to a negro cabin on reaching the shore and were cared for there. Memphis Engineer First to Tell of the Disaster. Memphis, Tenn., May 8.—George Foster, a Memphis engineer, gave the first word to the outside world of the sinking of the government steamer Norman with a possible loss of many lives in the Mississippi River, south of here. Appearing at the home of K. H. Armistead, on the river near Lake Cormorant, Miss., he told of the disaster.

Foster told members of the Armistead family that he swam to the bank of the river with a nine-year-old boy, one or two women and another man or two after the boat turned over in midstream without warning. He said that only six or seven out of the supposed forty or fifty persons on board swam out.

The boiler of the boat is supposed to have blown up according to meager information received here tonight. The location is just opposite Coahoma Landing, Miss., and not far distant from the head of Joe's Harris Island, where the river current is swift and treacherous, old river men said.
