SUPER-POWER PROJECT NOW NEARING REALITY

Carolina Power and Light and Other Southern Companies are Involved. New York, May 16.—Wall Street visualizes in the plan to sell Southern Power and Light Company to the Electric Power and Light Company, subsidiary of the Electric Bond and Share Company, the creation of one of the largest super-power projects in the country, linking stations from Niagara Falls to Houston, Texas.

Companies owned or operated by the Electric Bond and Share Company figure prominently in the development which will carry the group through fourteen states. Among the properties involved are American Power and Light, National Power and Light, Southeastern Power and Light, American Gas and Electric, Carolina Power and Light, Leigh Power Securities, and the newly formed Buffalo, Niagara and Eastern.

Another link could be established, it was pointed out, through the lines of the Southwestern Power and Light serving northeastern Texas. The recently formed Mohawk and Hudson Power Corporation has been mentioned as another probable connection.

There was no present intention of changing the corporate relationship of the various properties, it was said.

Stewart's Washington Letter

BY CHARLES P. STEWART, NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Word from France that several American automobile parties are in, or at any rate on the edge of the Moroccan war zone, is causing acute uneasiness here. It's a wild country, of wandering tribesmen with a picturesque native village here and there and a spice of peril.

Adventurous tourists like it. The emphasis, however, on the item of peril is rather too heavy to be pleasant just now. The Gallic military authorities are discouraging civilians from running into danger but the reckless ones are hard to control.

WASHINGTON officials are not much afraid Abd-el-Krim, the enter rebel, will kill any Americans he may catch, except by accident. He kills Spaniards.

What is considered likelier is that he'll hold American captives to ransom. He does this even with Spaniards if their friends have money enough to be worth while. Occasionally, when somebody's relatives are slow in remitting, he sends in one of the prisoner's ears, as a gentle reminder.

Officials are aware in advance that anything of this kind practiced on an American would start a terrible howl, not only from the victim, but here at home, as well—vehement demands that "something be done."

And it might be very hard to think up anything effective to do. The State Department recalls that President Roosevelt had such a case to deal with once—minus the detail of the amputated ear. It was that of the naturalized American—he was born a Greek—Perdicaris, who was kidnaped for ransom by the Moroccan bandit Raisul. "Perdicaris alive or Raisul dead" was "Teddy's" chief ultimatum to the sultan. It worked that time. The sultan dug up the ransom himself. But there's no sultan to cable to now. An ultimatum might be served on Abd-el-Krim, but the French and Spanish impression is that he's ultimatum proof.

SPEAKING of the sultan reminds the State Department of another experience with the same ruler. A Chicago private banker named Stensland had shipped with depositors' money. He turned up in Morocco.

The State Department asked for him. "Not," said the sultan, "while his money lasts." There was no extradition with Morocco then. Assistant District Attorney (now Judge) Harry Olson of Chi-ago went over to see about it. He cultivated the sultan socially—became his warm friend. Then he asked for Stensland—just as a friend. "As a sultan," replied the monarch, "we have our dignity to consider. We can't surrender him, but perhaps he'll go voluntarily."

And he ordered Stensland locked up. Anybody who knows the inside of a Moroccan prison knows why, in a couple of days, the captive sent for Olson and begged for the luxury of Joliet.
