

Murdered

Prof. O. B. Turner of the University of Louisiana, who was found murdered on the university campus at Baton Rouge, La. He had been slain with the ax which is shown above.

The Warfare in China. Charity and Children. The outbreak of warfare in China rouses new fears for the safety of our missionaries. The attacks have been directed largely against foreigners and the missionaries have to bear the brunt of it, no matter how little hand they may have had in causing it. It brings sharply to the fore again the age-old question of what we are sending to the heathen. If our efforts were confined to spreading the gospel of the Nazarene and the gospel of love, how could it generate murderous hate? But we, of course, are sending now as always two sets of missionaries, one representing the Christianity of the Occident, the other its brutal and greedy paganism, and in this revolt we find the dreadful evidence that for the moment the work of the missionaries of the devil is more effective than that of the missionaries of Christ. No man who examines candidly the national policy in the Orient of the Christian nations of the world can be surprised that occasionally it results in furious uprisings that sweep the country with fire and sprinkle it with blood. It has been a totally selfish policy, and therefore a brutal and bloody policy. Theology collapses when it runs counter to facts. A man may be as sound as a dollar, doctrinally, but if he is a tyrant, a thief and a murderer, his sound theology will do him no good in the eyes of an outraged God. Christian missionaries may wear their lives away in devoted service, but if the nations they represent are tyrannous, thievish and murderous, the heathen will occasionally rise against them, and we, for one, are not able to believe that the wrath of God will be directed primarily against the heathen. We need to support our missionaries with more than money. If there is not a God-fearing nation behind them, millions spent on foreign missions will be of no avail.

Master Liable for Servant's Death Though Servant Was Warned of Dangers.

A sawmill employe was fatally injured while oiling a band saw pulley. At the time of the injury he was using the more dangerous, but more convenient of the two methods of oiling the pulley, and was following his usual practice although he had been warned not to do so. The warning had been given a number of years before the accident, and the method actually used had been followed for a long time. Verdict was directed for defendant in the widow's action for death, and the judgment rendered was reversed by the Supreme Court of Mississippi in Hardy v. Turner-Farber-Love Company, 101 Southern Reporter, 458. The opinion of the court was written by Mr. Justice Holden, who said in discussing the effect of the warning given to the deceased servant: "It seems that the warning of the danger given the deceased, and the instruction to him to use the safe method, were given him about six years before the date of the injury, and all during the time since, while the deceased oiled the pulleys several times each day by using the dangerous way, there was an objection by the employer, but by his conduct he approved the use of the dangerous way, which was more convenient and agreeable to the deceased... this is in effect, was the furnishing of a dangerous place to the servant in which to perform his work, if the jury so believe."

"The hurry, bustle and incessant drive of the American temperament is responsible for the peculiar and characteristic American mortality increase during the 'dangerous age' period, between 40 and 50 years," says Dr. William S. Sadler, nationally known physician.

Red, the traditional danger signal, kept its lead as the most easily distinguished from other colors at a distance in recent daylight tests of the visibility of traffic signals. Test in order came green, blue, and yellow.

A Colossal Thing.

Lexington Dispatch. J. B. Duke added two million dollars more to what he had already done for Duke University last week. This gives the university something like nine and three-quarter millions in physical assets, not including about three millions of endowment. Only four other universities of the country, we believe, have the physical assets that Duke now has. Of course, the plant has not yet been erected, but it is out of the realm of guess work. Three thousand acres of land have been purchased and engineers and architects, the best to be secured, are working out the plans for the great group of buildings and the matchless campus that will be in readiness within a year or two. The stone of which the buildings are to be erected will be brought from a nearby quarry, and not from Vermont or Indiana. In addition to having such a physical plant, the new Duke University will have 32 per cent. of the income from at least $32,000,000 to begin with, and eventually the same per cent. of the income from $80,000,000.

The University of Pennsylvania is now conducting a campaign for an endowment of forty millions. Miami, Fla. proposes to put $15,000,000 behind a new university. The University of Pittsburgh is soon to begin a "cathedral of learning," a single building to cost many millions of dollars.

But none of these things dwarf this North Carolina project of a North Carolinian.

Dr. Fosdick Promulgated Nothing New.

N. C. Christian Advocate. Dr. Fosdick in stipulating the conditions upon which he would accept the pastorate of the Park Avenue Baptist Church of New York City said: "If I had my way baptism would be an individual affair. Any one who wanted to be immersed, I would gladly immerse. Anyone who wanted to be sprinkled, I would gladly sprinkle. If anyone as a Quaker had conscientious scruples against any ritual, I would gladly without baptism welcome him on confession of his faith. Why not?" The papers have put this as part of a sensational news story on the front page as if it were some more of that famous preacher's "modernism" and millions of readers will be thinking here is something new under the sun, when this is precisely what the Methodists have been teaching and practicing from the beginning. Baptism has been with the Methodists from the days of John Wesley an individual affair. The subject to be baptized chooses his own mode of baptism and Methodist ministers receive Quakers without baptism. Yet for Fosdick to say such a thing becomes "his news" and some who hear the name Methodist will join with the builders of inquisitorial fires for this modern heretic. Just let a man get the reputation of being a heretic and his most commonplace utterances get world-wide publicity.

Manners in Road Signs.

An English countryside flows by and the motorist comes upon a quaint village in which, second only to the ivy-clad church in visibility, is a huge sign warning him to slow down to eight miles an hour. Nobody does. How much better is the Yankee twist of mind that causes us to put up signs like these: "Stop, look—and live." "Look out, you may meet a fool around the corner." "Don't speed: it is 'Good Morning, Judge,' here." "Look before you weep."

"This is a good road; it will cost you money to burn it up." New Jersey civic pride—and rightness—coins this one: "Go slow and see our town; go fast and see our jail." But our award goes to Peekskill, New York. On the strategically placed vacant lot where one looks for the town's warning we find a sign which reads: "This is Peekskill's 'Friendly Town.' Somehow we cannot picture ourselves driving recklessly there. And though we may sometimes 'cuttle' at the bluntness of wit of some village fathers, their messages get home to us."

No part of the earth is too hot for the production of wheat if the climate is not too humid.

Chiropractic College Liable for Injuries From Treatment by Student.

A college teaching the science of chiropractic and maintaining a clinic where patients were treated by students or held by a nominal charge, was held liable by the Supreme Court of Oklahoma, in Carrer v. Chiropractic College v. Armstrong, 229 Pacific Reporter, 641, to be liable for injuries to a person while receiving treatment in the clinic, from a student assigned to administer it, where they resulted from negligence, carelessness, or lack of ordinary care. The alleged injuries consisted of forcing the patient's diaphragm against the edge of an adjustment table in such manner as to fracture the eighth and ninth ribs and cause the cartilages connecting and supporting the ribs to the breastbone to be torn loose, and bruising the muscles and flesh of the right breast. Mr. Commissioner Jones wrote the opinion of the court, in the course of which he said: "Defendant, in this case is a college, and operates a clinic in connection with its school, where they teach a science concerning the treatment of physical ailments and maladies, and while we have no authority which places chiropractic in the same class of other well known and reputable schools of medicine and surgery, it is nevertheless a well known and recognized school, which teaches a science or method of treatment of physical ailments and bodily derangements, and we think should be governed by the same rules of law, as other sciences and professions taught and substantiated for similar purposes. The practice of this science should be governed by the same rules of law as the homeopath and the allopath and other schools of medicine, and in dealing with the 'dangerous' 'sensitive' heads in this line, a 'strong' and 'right' rule is applicable, and should be in dealing with hospital and ambulatory cases. We think the Chiropractic College should be held liable and responsible for the acts and conduct of those whom they place in charge of patients entering the institution for treatment, regardless of whether the treatment be gratuitous or otherwise."

NOTES OF SPORT.

Water polo is much more popular in Great Britain than in America. The first rowing regatta on the Hudson River course at Poughkeepsie was in 1887. When first organized in 1894 the United States Golf Association had a membership of only four clubs. Mrs. Cecil Leitch, of Great Britain, is the only woman golfer to win the British, French and Canadian championships. The first cinder path in America was built on the grounds of the New York Athletic Club at Mott Haven in the year 1871. In all his twenty-two attempts to swim the English Channel, Jabez Wolfe was never nearer success than in his first one. After only seven hours' swimming he had covered fifteen miles, twelve of them on the direct course. Success seemed assured, and in his station he put on a triumphant squint, with the result that his left leg gave way. His pain was very severe, and as he relied on his left leg for propulsion, every stroke became an excruciation. Nevertheless, he kept on, and it was not until nearly three hours later that he allowed himself to be taken out of the water, when only three and three-quarter miles from the French coast.
