OFFICIAL OUTLAWS.

Charity and Children.

Of course any one with a spark of humanity in him deprecates the barbarity practiced on a negro prisoner which resulted in his death near Rocky Mount recently. Loud demands are going up on every side for the punishment of the men guilty of this atrocious murder. We have no protest against such demands. If the facts are as stated, whatever punishment may be meted out to these creatures will be richly earned. But even if they are punished with the utmost severity, the duty of the state will not end there. The highest duty of the state is not to punish the men guilty of this outrage, but to see to it that no similar outrages are perpetrated on prisoners who are yet alive. We have statutes enough on the subject. It is a flat violation of the law for any guard, jailer, warden or officer to manhandle any prisoner in his charge. The trouble is to get the officers above the law. The death of this negro together with the slaughter of Mr. Holt, a peaceable citizen traveling on the public highway about his own business, shot to death without rhyme or reason by a police officer, has roused the state to the danger of lack of restraint upon any body of armed men, whether officers or not. Things have come to such a pass in North Carolina that the ferocity of the hit-men is not banished, but policemen, and the terror of the jails is not confined, but jailers. This lawlessness on the part of officers of the law must come to a stop. Stopping it may mean that a certain number of criminals may escape, but that is better than the other alternative. Run-runners ought to be punished, but it is better that a thousand run-runners should go scot-free than that one peaceable, law-abiding citizen's blood be spilled by officers of the law. For if officers do not respect the law they are supposed to enforce, who else is going to respect it? "If the light that is in you be darkness, how great is that darkness!"

A RIGHTEOUS DECISION

Baptist Courier.

Last week the Supreme Court of the United States voided the Oregon school law. This state in 1922 enacted a school law compelling all parents and guardians to send their children between the ages of eight and sixteen to the public schools, for such time in the year as these schools were in session. At other times or times in the year the children could be sent to other schools. It was generally understood that the law was aimed at the parochial schools of the Catholics. The law based itself on the principle that the State is the supreme authority as to the education of the children that are to be citizens. The court did not take this view. And the rights of parents in the education of their children were maintained, insofar as these rights were exercised, without detriment to the State. It was a righteous decision.

We held no brief for Catholic schools. But Catholics have their rights under our constitution. Besides, the doctrine of the absolute supremacy of the State in education would destroy Protestant schools as certainly as it would Catholic schools. We trust that this decision settles forever the question as to a standardized education in this country. It certainly means that the state is not to do this work of standardizing. This is a victory for religion and for freedom. The German government laid the foundation for its autocracy in its long continued and absolute control of education in that country. We saw the result. Our own country would not succeed much better, perhaps not as well, for with us a thorough going state control of all education would mean, and would necessarily mean, that religion would have no place in such a system of training. The only way in which we can keep a real Christianity in education is by maintaining our denominational schools.

Major Charles Manly Stedman, representative in Congress from the Fifth District, is the only Confederate veteran in Congress at present. Major Stedman is a native of Pittsboro, N. C., where he was born in 1841. He began his service in the War Between the States at Bethel and surrendered with General Robert E. Lee at Appomattox.

The State Constitution provides for the separation of men and women prisoners in all penal institutions of the State.

Beauty Comes from stimulating Glands

The new way to beauty, health and vim is through stimulating glands. Let us show you at our cost how much it means to you.

The largest gland is the liver. It is the most important gland. We thought for generations that drugs made it active. Now we know they don't.

A torpid liver wrecks both health and beauty. It means lack of bile. Then germs breed and form toxins in the intestines, and those poisons are absorbed by the blood. Some results are these:

- Indigestion
- Constipation
- Impure Blood
- High Blood Pressure
- Heart and Kidney Troubles
- Bad Complexions
- Lack of Youth

The cathartics you take do not affect the liver cells. The ill results continue. But we have found a gland secretion which does stimulate the liver. It is ox-gall. Physicians the world over now prescribe it. And to millions it is bringing new beauty, new health and new vim.

Ox-gall is now embodied in a tablet. The name is Dioxol. Each tablet contains 10 drops of purified ox-gall. All druggists supply them.

We ask you to learn what Dioxol does. The results start in 24 hours. In a day or two these tablets may bring you a new conception of life.

Let us send you enough to try. See what you gain in a day. Do this for your own sake. Clip coupon now.

The Preacher's Pay.
Statesville Daily.

Rev. J. F. Apple, former pastor of Long's chapel Christian church, vicinity of Burlington, brought suit in the local courts in the latter town against two deacons of the church and the president of the North Carolina Christian Conference for salary due him as pastor. The court proceedings were opened with prayer by one of the defendants and there was an urge that the case be compromised, but the compromise failed, although it appeared that the prosecuting preacher was willing to agree to a settlement out of court. The proceedings were also closed with prayer, but it seems that while prayer was proffered it didn't pay the laborer his hire—didn't settle the debt. The case was thrown out of the court below on a technicality, but an appeal was noted. Counsel for the defendants declared that this was the first case of its kind in this part of the country. Maybe, as one of the same kind has been threatened in Hiedell. A former pastor of a congregation in this county alleges that the congregation has failed and refused to pay and he has contemplated legal action. Of course they will criticize the preacher for asking the civil authority to collect his hire. But sympathy here is with the preacher, without reference to any particular case. If a congregation fails to pay the preacher as promised he should show them up for what they are. The preacher has to live. He has a hard time living on what he gets at best. And when a congregation deliberately and wilfully refuses and fails to pay him his hire, the world should know the type composing that congregation. The cause of religion is never injured by exposing the hypocrites who profess in name and are without the root of the matter. It was a Rowan elegyman who declared that the devil didn't want any better agents than a congregation that refused to pay the pastor the pittance promised; and opinion here is that the Rowan cleric had it about right.

Business Restraint.

With customary apologies for fear you have heard it, permit us to refile the story of the business man who called in his stenographer to write a collection letter.

"No I want you to write a note to Blank Company to remind them of the money they owe us."

In a few minutes the stenographer returned with a letter, which the business man looked over.

"I'm afraid that is a little too strong. I don't want to insult them, just remind them of the account."

The second attempt made its appearance.

"That's better, but still a bit vigorous. What I want is just politely to remind them they have overlooked paying our bill."

The third letter eventually was prepared.

"That's much better. Just about what I want. Now just rewrite it to correct two misspelled words. There's only one 's' in lousy and one 'i' in swindler."
