Robert P. Bell has accepted a position at the Chamber of Commerce to assist in the distribution of license tags during the rush season.

According to a deed filed Friday in the court house D. A. McLaurin and A. P. Goodman have sold to H. C. Brooks property on Odell street, this city, for $2,250.

The first official DeMolay conclave will be held at Ashtaburton on July 13th. A large number of local DeMolay members are making plans to attend the conclave.

Mrs. J. Mac Caldwell and F. C. Caldwell and daughters, Frances, Neely and Dorothy Sue, arrived Thursday from Tampa, Fla., making the trip in Mr. Caldwell's car.

Several changes on Southern trains passing through Concord are announced for midnight tonight. The changes can be found in the schedule on the editorial page, and also in another column of this paper.

The American Legion of Mooresville, Post 66, will hold a picnic on July 3rd to which the public is invited. A number of entertaining events have been planned, including a "sing" in which a choir of 200 voices will participate.

The sewer pipe for the new hotel has been laid and the ditch which was dug for it is being filled again. All of the ditch on West Depot Street has been filled and it is probable that the entire ditch will be filled during the day.

Miss Mary King will leave Monday for New York to attend summer school at Columbia University. During her absence her sister, Miss Nora King, will be with the family of Dr. Parks M. King, in Charlotte.

Notice has been given by the city tax collector that all persons who fail to have their license plate on their cars by July 1st will be prosecuted. Attention is also called to the fact that cars for hire must have a special tag for operation.

Eight defendants were tried in police court Friday and each was found guilty. Five gamblers were fined $15 each and other, who owned the place where the gambling took place, was fined $20. One defendant was fined $7.40 for giving a worthless check and another was fined $25 for an affray.

City mail carriers of Concord enjoy a half holiday each Saturday now. Under a ruling of the post office department postmasters have the right to give the holidays in each city if they see fit to do so and Postmaster Ward ruled recently that carriers in Concord should have Saturday afternoons off.

The many friends of Mr. Geo. W. Dry, formerly of No. 7 Township, who is at this time with his son, Mr. F. O. Dry, of Albemarle, will regret to learn that he is in a critical condition. Mr. Dry is unable to walk or talk. He has been paralyzed for a little more than three years.

Paving work in Mt. Pleasant was not completed Thursday or Friday as had been expected. The rain of Thursday interrupted the work which was halted throughout Friday. However, the force of hands on the job got busy again this morning and it is planned to complete the task either today or Monday.

Walter L. Furr, city engineer, moved his office Friday from the city hall to the Dixie building. Mr. Furr will be succeeded as city engineer by Capt. Q. E. Smith about the first of the month, and he moved to his new offices Friday so Capt. Smith can have the city engineer's offices when he assumes his work for the city.

Farmers in Concord today for their weekly shopping bring reports of rains in all parts of the county during the week. Probably the heaviest rain, according to the reports, fell in that section of the county lying east of Kannapolis. Some hail also fell in that community. Crops are looking fine at present, the farmers report, and so far boll weevils are scarce in the county.

There seems to be plenty of profit in soft drinks, at least when the capital is furnished by parents and the profits are taken by the children. No less than a hundred impromptu stands have been erected by children in Concord during the past week and it is possible now to buy "soda pop," chewing gum, candy and other goods usually carried by such places of business in many front yards of the city.

Washington cut Philadelphia's lead in the American League Friday by winning the first game of their important series. At the same time Detroit was winning from St. Louis and Chicago from Cleveland. In the National League New York defeated Brooklyn, Pittsburgh defeated Cincinnati, St. Louis won from Chicago and Philadelphia and Boston split a double header. Charlotte won from Asheville in the South Atlantic.

Negro Convicted of First Degree Murder.

Winston-Salem, June 26.—"Guilty of murder in the first degree," was the verdict returned this afternoon by the jury in the case wherein Fred Jones, negro, was charged with the murder of James Monroe King, young white man, on the night of June 18th. The young negro heard the verdict with bowed head but his hands twitched and his head was kept in a rocking motion as the fatal words were pronounced.

POOR BOY WHO BECAME A NOTED SCULPTOR

New York, June 26.—There are instances where the achievements of a man cannot be accounted for on any other hypothesis than innate genius and such a one is pictured in the life of Paul Akers, the famous American sculptor, whose centenary will be observed in the world of art early next month.

Benjamin Paul Akers, as he was christened, was born near the village of Sacarappa, Maine, July 10, 1825. He was the eldest of eleven children; hence aside from the disadvantages of his obscure birthplace it became necessary for him to enter the list of bread winners at a very early age. His father was a self-educated but impractical man, while his mother was refined and energetic.

The family removed to Salmon Falls, Me., when Paul was a boy, and there he contributed to the support of the family by assisting his father at his trade, which was that of a wood turner. At this time he displayed artistic taste in designing ornamental woodwork. For a while he attended the common school and devoted as much time as he could snatch from his duties to reading his favorite authors, who were Plato Aristotle and Dante. Later on he became interested in German and French literature.

He first resolved to adopt literature, and to that end engaged to take a position in a Portland printing office. It was there that he saw in a window that which awakened a talent that brought him fame. It was a bust; one of Brackett's, and Paul had never seen a bust, a statue or an artist, but he then and there resolved to become a sculptor.

His first move was to Boston, where he studied plaster casting under Carew. He was then twenty-four years of age when he returned to his home, where his first works attracted attention. These were a medallion head and a bust of the village doctor. The next year he opened a studio in Portland, where he executed busts of Longfellow, Samuel Appleton and other notables.

He visited Italy in 1853, and it was during this visit that he modeled his most celebrated piece, "Benjamin in Egypt," which, however, was destroyed with the Crystal Palace in New York, where it was on exhibition. A letter written from Italy covers the situation, in it he says: "I was thrown from a world where not in all my life had I seen art into a world where all was art, all around me an earth, in the far heavens were multitudes of forms, all silent, but all demanding place, and none might help me."

At Florence he executed two bas-reliefs, "Night" and "Morning," but failing health forced him to return to his native land, and in 1854 he spent some time in Washington on work for President Pierce, Edward Everett, and Sam Houston, and the next year, 1855, he went abroad again, where he spent three years in Florence and Rome, producing his best known works, "Una and the Lion" and "St. Elizabeth of Hungary." At this time he modeled the "Pearl Diver" and an ideal head of Milton, which he described in Hawthorn's "Marble Faun."

He was permitted to make a cast of a mutilated bust of Cicero and restored the eye, the brow, the ears and modeled the neck and bust, which became an accepted portrait and designated "Akers Restored Cicero." It was Paul Akers who planned a free gallery of art for New York to contain in marble the reproduction of the chief works in ancient marble, but he died before his plans could be executed.
