Scarlet Fever.

Youth's Companion.
Scarlet fever, or scarlatina, is one of the so-called children's diseases. It is marked by fever, prostration and a red or brownish-red—not scarlet—eruption, followed by the peeling of the scarfskin. The disease occurs most frequently in young children below the age of six, but it may attack at any age a person who has previously escaped. As a rule one attack confers immunity for life, though second and even third attacks are not unknown.

The first symptoms of the disease appear in from two or three days to a week after exposure. The earliest symptom in children is often a sudden attack of vomiting. Very young children may have convulsions. Almost immediately the temperature rises, the face becomes flushed, the eyes are bright, and there is a headache. The throat is sore and congested and in the severer forms shows whitish spots or membranous patches that suggest diphtheria. The tongue is coated, but its edge often looks red and raw, while the upper surface is dotted with red points. The glands in the neck are usually more or less enlarged.

The characteristic rash appears twenty-four or thirty-six hours after the first symptoms. It shows first on the chest and spreads down over arms, body and legs. The face often shows very little of it. After it is fully developed the eruption remains stationary for two or three days and then begins to fade. At the same time desquamation begins. The outer layer of skin peels off in large flakes, and often in large pieces; that of the hands sometimes comes off entire like a glove.

A mild attack of scarlet fever is not a very serious matter in itself; the complications and consequences—a weakened heart, acute inflammation of the kidneys, ear trouble leading sometimes to permanent deafness, and joint troubles—are more to be dreaded. Scarlet fever may, however, occur in a very malignant form, and the patient may die within twenty-four hours, despite every effort of the most skilled physicians. We shall discuss the prevention and treatment of scarlet fever next week.

So What's the Use?

Exchange.
If you stay home in the evening you're afraid of your wife.

If you stay out till 10 o'clock at night, you're a rounder.

If you spend your money, you're foolish, extravagant and improvident.

If you hang on to your money, you are a tightwad, a grouch and a mutt.

If you admire the women you're a trifler, a flirt and a home-wrecker.

If you don't look at them, you're a mossback and a moron.

If you own a car, you're a spend-thrift and are putting on airs.

If you don't own one, you're a hick and a back number.

If you wear decent clothes, you're a stuck-up dude and a cake eater.

If you don't wear a slouch and a shiftless nonentity.

If you walk fast on the street, you will have blood-pressure.

If you don't walk fast, you will have fatty degeneration and gout.

If you go to church, you are a hypocrite and go for business purposes.

If you stay away from church, you are a heathen and bad example.

If you make a lot of money, you are a crook and a grafter.
If you don't make a lot of money, you are a simp and an incompetent.

Claims Cancer Can Now Be Prevented.

Cancer is the great human menace. It is increasing by leaps and bounds. If anything, it is increasing more rapidly in the United States than it is in the British Isles. Of those now living in the British Isles, 5,000,000 are doomed to die of cancer if they do nothing to prevent it. In the United States the doomed number is 10,000,000 and might easily rise to 15,000,000 or 20,000,000.

This remarkable statement is made by Sir W. Arbuthnot Lane Bart, one of the world's most eminent surgeons and dietitians, in an article appearing in the June 20 issue of the Dearborn Independent.

According to Sir Arbuthnot, cancer is not caused by the bacillus that scientists have so long sought and not yet found, but rather by poisons created in the body by the food that is eaten. It is a filth disease, and its prevention is accomplished by keeping the digestive tract thoroughly drained of its ac-

Continuing.

Continuing, the doctor says "What we should do then, if we would avoid cancer, is to eat whole-wheat bread and raw fruits and vegetables, churning all meat, first that we may be better nourished, second that we may more easily eliminate waste products and thus adequately drain the house in which our cells live. Whoever foregoes white bread will perform a great service for himself. It is deadly."

It is a difficult task to change the food habits of a nation or to induce the people to take sufficient exercise each day. Sir Arbuthnot says, however, that "whoever will correct his diet to a reasonable extent, take reasonable exercise and keep his digestive tract absolutely clean, need have no fear of cancer."

A Huge Relief Map.

A relief map of the State of California six hundred feet long and costing one hundred thousand dollars has, writes a contributor, been built in the nave of the Ferry Building in San Francisco. It is said to be the largest map in the world. Scores of artists, engineers, draughtsmen, mechanics and electricians were constantly employed on it for, longer than fifteen months.

The canvas used in connection with the painting of the background and various inset displays is large enough to fit a full-rigged ship with sails. To illuminate the map more than twenty-two thousand electric lamps will be used. Approximately five thousand miniature boats dot the representation of the Pacific Ocean, and even hydroelectric power lines and state highways are shown. The number of miniature buildings used in the representation of towns and cities will exceed six hundred thousands.

The North Carolina State board of embalmers, created by the general assembly of 1901, is composed of three members of the State board of health and two practical embalmers elected by the board of health. The board regulates the practice of embalming bodies in the state.
