Short on Rain All Way From Texas. Mooreville Enterprise.
Mr. S. C. Webster, who has been traveling salesman for the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company in the South and West for the past twelve years, arrived here Saturday afternoon on a short visit to his sister, Mrs. Zeb Deaton. He was en route to North Wilkesboro, where he is to spend several months with his mother, Mrs. Sarah Webster. Mr. Webster drove through the country from Nacoches, Texas. He says there has been very little rain anywhere between his leaving point and Mooreville, except in Alabama, where the rainfall has been greater than anywhere else in the South and West. He stated that except a few places in Alabama and the Mississippi Delta, there is a great shortage of rainfall and that the crops show need of rain.

DILLARD DISCUSSES THE JUDICIARY AT ASHEVILLE

Diminished Respect for Judges and for the Law Itself, He Says
Asheville, July 2.—Addressing the North Carolina Bar Association at the morning session here today, J. H. Dillard, of Murphy, discussed "The Judiciary." He declared that "the older members of this association will recall that there was a time when the office of Superior Court judge was regarded as one of the greatest, if not indeed the very greatest, offices within the gift of the people; when the incumbent was accorded a profound, an almost reverential respect; when people looked upon the judge as the very incarnation of the majesty of the law, and hung upon his utterances from the bench as if on oracles spake; that there was a time when this was regarded as the one office which should always seek the man, and when its active seeking was taken as conclusive of the unfitness of the seeker."

Continuing, Mr. Dillard declared: "That such is not the case today, no one will deny, and while this may in some measure be due to other causes, we believe that in the main it is due to certain anomalies, if not indeed indefensible features of our system." It may be well to note, in this connection, that along with a diminished respect for its administrators, there has likewise come a marked disrespect for the law itself, especially among the young people.
This latter condition Mr. Dillard attributed largely to "the breaking down of the home—to the failure of parents to inculcate in their children a sense of responsibility to God for every thought, and word, and deed, the most potent influence for good that can be brought to bear upon a human life, in all its journey, from the cradle to the grave.

"Then, too," continued the speaker, "we have some judges, though fortunately few in number, who, through their own behavior, or rather lack of behavior, have not always inspired respect and confidence, just as for the most part we have had fine, upstanding men, who, despite the system, have always been able to command individual respect. But we are obliged, however, to conclude that if our system had been what it should, these few unfit men would hardly have won judicial possibilities."
Mr. Dillard declared that "it is doubtless true that none of us will ever live to see a life tenure of this office, x x x Public favor, like fame fortune, has ever been a fickle jade; the distance from the capitol to the Tarpeian Rock has ever been short, and so long as the tenure of this great office is made dependent upon public favor, just so long may honest and capable judges be denied respect, and just so long many of our best lawyers, dreading the uncertainty, will hesitate to enter the judicial office."
In this connection Mr. Dillard declared:
"We need to stop and think, and if any way can be found to improve upon the present condition, it would surely be worth while. I remember to have once seen a suggestion like this, though I have forgotten its origin: That the judge to be elected at first for a short term (only long enough to demonstrate his fitness or lack of fitness) and that at the second and succeeding elections he should be chosen for a long term."
Mr. Dillard discussed the rotation system at length. He reviewed the arguments that had been advanced both against and for it.
