ROANOKE REGRETS LOSS OF OSCAR BLACKWELDER

Popular Preacher and Civic Leader Leaves Virginia City to Take Largest Church in Baltimore.

Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Blackwelder, of this city, who for several years has been pastor of the Virginia Heights Lutheran Church in Roanoke, Va., recently resigned to take up work in one of the largest Lutheran Churches in Baltimore.

The Roanoke Times of Monday, June 24th, takes note of his departure in a front page story and editorial comment. The story is accompanied by a picture of Mr. Blackwelder. From the two sources, it is indicated that Mr. Blackwelder has made a remarkable success in Roanoke and that he is well liked by the people of the community.

An evidence of his popularity is given in the editorial, headed "A Civic Loss," the text of which is as follows:

"The Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder last night concluded a pastorate of four years at the Virginia Heights Lutheran Church and departed for new fields of labor. After a trip abroad he will assume the pastorate of a large Baltimore church in September. He has made a good beginning in the Christian Ministry and has stamped his personality upon this community as that of an earnest, energetic, eloquent young man, imbued with gifts which make success in his high calling assured. A splendid "mixer" and extremely public-spirited, he will be an asset to Baltimore. Roanoke parts with Mr. Blackwelder with regret and bids him Godspeed."

The text of the story is, in part, as follows:

"Declaring that it was not a farewell sermon, but, as he expressed it so vividly, "just a regular sermon, Christian friends, until we meet again," the Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder delivered his last sermon as pastor of the Virginia Heights Lutheran Church last night before an audience which not only taxed the interior of the church auditorium but filled all available space within hearing about the doors and windows.

"It was a most touching occasion for the relation between pastor and congregation was severed with the greatest reluctance, and even the visiting friends could not help but see the close bonds that had existed between Mr. Blackwelder and the Virginia Heights church. Following the close of the service, J. R. Terry took his stand at the front of the congregation, requested that the congregation be seated once more, called Mr. Blackwelder back to the pulpit from his place at the door where he had gone to give the word of cheer, and presented to him a purse of gold, which represented the love for the departing pastor from the hearts of the congregation.

"The entire city of Roanoke shares with the Virginia Heights Lutheran church the loss occasioned by the departure of Mr. Blackwelder. Coming to Roanoke nearly five years ago, immediately after his graduation from the Southern Theological Seminary at Columbia, S. C., he not only met with remarkable success in his particular field but wove himself largely into the community. Mr. Blackwelder was also a student of Roanoke College. When he took charge of the Virginia Heights Church he found it a struggling mission of 52 members. Today it is an active, aggressive church with a baptized membership of nearly 400.

"Mr. Blackwelder has during his stay in Roanoke, shown a broad civic spirit which has appealed to the community. He was a prominent member of the Kiwanis Club and this organization expressed keen regret over his loss to the Roanoke Club at its recent meeting. He was chairman of the education committee and active in other work of the club.

"The Baltimore Church extended a most flattering offer to Mr. Blackwelder and he will take up his work there in September. Christ Church is the largest Lutheran Church in Baltimore and has a membership totaling near the 3,000 mark."

Forgotten Fashions of Yesteryear Inspire The Sweater of Today

L O, the poor Indian, with his picturesque colorful blanket, is no longer a common figure on the plains of America—those vast broad lands that were his ancient heritage. But, all the beauty—the primitive glory of the color and symbolism of his day still flame in bright silhouette against the time-old trees that have watched the red man give way to the swelling tides of white civilization. The old reds, the hard, bright yellows, the wood browns, even the patterns that were his, go down to the links every morning on the new sweater and hose that the smartest sets are wearing.

Sometimes the sweater turns turtle at the neck—and just as often it does not.

At Newport the crew neck nava-jo slipper and hose is most popular—especially when complemented by a jersey skirt in white or tan, with smart "kick" pleat.

They're really quite chic!

Low-Priced Garments In Better Style Lines

could not referred them to (items wanted). Cheaper Dresses Well Styled. One of the outstanding reasons for the success which manufacturers of the cheaper lines of dresses have met with this season was said yesterday to be the marked improvement that has been made in the styling of them. In many cases, it was further said, it is possible for a woman to get "lines" in a dress now at $10 to $15 that could be had a few years ago only in garments costing two or three times that amount. The result has been that the sales of cheap dresses have increased, women and girls of moderate means finding it possible to make a better showing with two cheap dresses than with one more expensive one. The further assertion was made that never before in the history of the ready-to-wear trade were values in popular-priced merchandise greater than they are at present.

Promoting "Good Times in One Rural Community."

The Progressive Farmer.

For the older boys and girls, or the young men and young women, any occasion that will bring such young people together under wholesome influences should be encouraged—and if such occasions also bring the older folks together at the same time, so much the better. That picture of old English country life as given in Goldsmith's "Deserted Village" deserves frequent duplication in this country.

"And all the village train, from labor free, Led up their sports beneath the spreading tree * * * The young contending as the old surveyed."

In this connection, a Georgia friend contributes a suggestion that is worth passing on to our young folks all over the South. She writes:

"My own old home community woke up and became a delightful place to live one summer when a college boy came back home and organized the Community Social Club, the sole object of this club being to provide some form of wholesome amusement for the whole community at least once a week, in a systematic way. The college boy was made chairman of the program committee, and the community had a steady succession of fish fries, straw rides, watermelon cuttings, picnics and moonlight picnics, community sings, swimming parties, tennis matches, movie parties, etc., for every Saturday afternoon and evening the whole summer. When parties were given in homes, no attempt was made to serve refreshments, except watermelons or fruit, because the crowds were so large, but every effort was made to provide everybody in the community with a way to get to every meeting. This community, found that when such amusements were planned regularly, everybody came and enjoyed them, but when there was no organization to arrange them, there were not nearly so many community good times."

Tennessee Cities Lead in Coin Sales. More than 5,000 Confederate memorial coins were sold on the first day in the Nashville, Tennessee, city campaign, according to Mr. Vance J. Alexander, chairman for Davidson county. The Nashville quota is 20,000 coins, and preliminary reports indicate that this amount will be over-subscribed by the close of the campaign on Saturday, June 27th. Among the large purchasers of coins in Nashville was the Banner. Major E. B. Stahman was the first to place his order with the Nashville committee. Reports from Knoxville indicate the sale of 10,000 coins in the first day of the civic campaign. A special numbered coin was auctioned at the Riviera Theater to Colonel Wm. Shields for $50.00. Colonel Shields thereupon presented the coin to the Ladies Memorial Association. In presenting the coin, Colonel Shields said: "Recognizing with admiration the noble work of the Ladies Memorial Association of Knoxville, whose object and purpose is almost identical with that of the Stone Mountain Association, and especially as it was your organization that originated the memorial idea in the South, I deem it a fitting tribute to present to your association the first Stone Mountain half-dollar received in Tennessee, which has come into my hands at public auction. The coin is given without reservation, and may be used by the Ladies Memorial Association as they see fit."
