COME more than 8,000 carloads of peaches which Georgia ships every season is really but a small item in the total of wealth that she produces each year. For Georgia is one of the great agricultural states of the South, having more farms—310,732—than any other truly southern state.

Georgia has gone in for diversification and is reaping rich benefits therefrom. To her great cotton crop of some 600,000 bales, she has added other means of increasing her great agricultural wealth. Now, great as is her corn acreage, greatest in oat acreage, she is also a tremendous producer of vegetables, small fruits and the like.

Her tobacco crop has grown amazingly. The fine grade light leaf of the coastal plains yielded $7,000,000 in 1924 and the 1925 crop is expected to bring $15,000,000. Her forests yield close to a billion feet yearly and her manufactories have more than doubled since 1910. She is third in textile production in the South. Her mines and quarries yield a great variety of products. Granite and marble from her quarries beautify cities throughout the Union.

Georgia's hydro-electric power development has been enormous. She now has more than 482,000 horse-power developed, more than any other southern state with the possible exception of North Carolina.

Georgia has more improved roads than any state in the South.

She is in a more prosperous condition than at any time since the abnormal boom days of the war.

There is a vast market for our own products in Georgia. Instead of going to territories far away where competition is hard, where freight rates are higher, where it is more expensive for our salesmen to travel, let's sell in Georgia, "The Empire State."

Georgia's newspapers will carry for us the message of what we have to sell. They'll sell for us.
