A REAL FIGHT IN NEW YORK CITY.

More interest is aroused in the mayoralty campaign in New York City perhaps than in any other city in the United States and for that reason the approaching campaign is claiming the attention of thousands of persons who live outside New York State even.

Tammamy has nominated State Senator James J. Walker as candidate for mayor, and Mayor Hylan heads another slate that will get Democratic support since the Mayor calls himself a Democrat.

The real fight so far as the Democrats are concerned is between Hearst and Governor Smith. Hylan has the support of Hearst who was repudiated some few years ago by Governor Smith.

Brooklyn and Richmond are responsible in a large measure for the entrance of Senator Walker into the race. Democrats in these precincts at times have questioned the loyalty of Hylan and they do not like the way in which he has lined up with Hearst.

ANOTHER TARIFF FIGHT IN SIGHT.

Dr. Edwin F. Gay, professor of economic history at Harvard, told the Institute of Politics at Williamstown last week that America's balance of trade with other nations will soon shift from a favorable position to the other side of the ledger, as a consequence of larger and larger imports of goods arising from the payment of the interest and principal of Europe's debts to America.

The same argument is being used by a number of economists in support of the view that it will not be long before American industry will be demanding removal or lowering of our tariff walls in order to maintain our trade balance.

Dr. Gay says the influx of goods in payment of European debts will be accompanied by a period of high prices here. Imported goods will be relatively cheaper than they are now, but domestic goods will be higher.

The News of Greenville, S. C.

finds that "the price tendency of domestic commodities does seem to be upward at the present time. If American prices continue upward, it will be increasingly more profitable to Europeans to pay our duties on their goods and sell them at American prices. This may be what Dr. Gay has in mind. The situation might be met by a demand for even higher tariff walls, but it might be reasoned that this could hardly be a permanent remedy. The tariff and its relation to our foreign trade is looming up as one of the most important topics for Congressional thought in the next few years. Should the trade balance develop an unfavorable trend during the last half of the present year, it might precipitate a tariff debate at the next Congress."

WEATHER INJURIOUS TO THE CROPS.

Weather and other conditions during July were shown today to have been detrimental to crops generally in the department of agriculture's monthly report.

The large prospective corn crop was reduced 145,000,000 bushels as compared with a month ago, the production now indicated being 2,950,000,000 bushels. Rye, flaxseed, rice, sweet potatoes, tobacco, hay and grapes also showed losses from forecasts made last month.

Winter wheat, for which a preliminary estimate of 416,000,000 bushels was given, showed an increase over last month, but spring wheat with a total of 263,000,000 bushels declined 13,000,000, placing the entire wheat crop 7,000,000 bushels below the forecasts in July.

There was an improvement in oats, the crop forecast being 1,387,000,000 bushels of 95,000,000 more than a month ago. Barley, white potatoes, apples, peaches and pears also recorded increases in their prospective production.

GIRL FAINTS ON WITNESS STAND

Richmond, Va., Man Bound Over on an Assault Charge. Greensboro, Aug. 11.—Miss Mary Bradshaw, of this city, 23 years old, nurse in training here, collapsed while on the witness stand testifying against R. C. Gray, formerly of Richmond, Va., charged with attempt to commit criminal assault upon her, and again at the conclusion of her testimony. She had to be carried from the courtroom by three men, one of them a physician.

The man was bound over by Judge D. H. Collins to superior court and a heavy bond fixed, $10,000.

The girl testified that she and Gray left a dance here Saturday night and took a ride in a car. She admitted that she suggested the ride. In a short while he stopped the car and tried to assault her, but failed of his purpose, brought her back to the dance and home. The defense stressed she did not tell any one of the alleged crime until the next evening. Gray was arrested Monday afternoon.

It was while she was being questioned as to intimate details of the alleged crime that she collapsed on the stand and she fell to the floor after she had been cross-examined.

The distinction of being the youngest regular player in the major baseball leagues belongs to Freddie Lindstrom, third baseman of the New York Giants. Although he is not yet twenty years old young Lindstrom is receiving a salary of more than $7,000 a year.

FISHERIES PRODUCT PLANT SOLD AT AUCTION FOR $44,330

Receiver Neal and Former Treasurer C. B. Atwood Engage in Personal Battle. Wilmington, Aug. 10.—Developments in the Fisheries Products Company today consisted of the auctioning off of the Hilton plant, across the river here, by former Judge W. H. Neal, Laurinburg, which was bid in, in the name of E. F. Keith for $44,330 or an increase of ten per cent over the amount bid for the plant at the previous sale that was not consummated. Also by the controversy later in the afternoon at the meeting of stockholders said to represent half million dollars in shares, between Receiver Neal and C. B. Atwood, former treasurer of the defunct concern.

Atwood took exception to some of Receiver Neal's statements at the meeting, it is stated, and they indulged in some personalities, which other intervening stockholders declared were not relevant and would not result in bringing any money back to the holders of the seven million dollars stock in the defunct corporation.

Receivers Neal and James H. Weckert left the meeting before it adjourned, in order to catch a train, but they assured the stockholders that they would be glad to give any information possible to them through a stockholders' committee, and it is believed that within several weeks this meeting will be arranged. The receivers declared that they were doing everything possible to facilitate the liquidation of the company, but they expressed the opinion that it would be best to confer with a committee representative of the stockholders than with the entire body of stockholders.

WINSTON-SALEM LEADING STATE IN MANUFACTURES

Makes One-Fourth of All Goods Produced in North Carolina, According to Reports.

Winston-Salem, Aug. 11.—According to information released today by the Winston-Salem Chamber of Commerce, upon authority and at the request of the census bureau of the United States department of commerce, the output of the factories of Winston-Salem in 1923 totaled $229,451,447.

This is an increase of almost $28,000,000 in comparison with the last industrial census to 1919. The value of the products for that year were $200,485,000, and during which, because of war conditions, peak prices for raw materials and finished products prevailed.

The figures are further interesting in comparison with the state as a whole. According to these figures Winston-Salem manufacturers over one-fourth of the total products of North Carolina. The census of manufacturers covering the state as a whole show that North Carolina, in 1923, turned out goods valued at $951,910,590, of which Winston-Salem made $228,451,447.

THE LIMITED

CHAPTER IV
"Jim, you've young mail clerk, has wandered aimlessly into the stormy night on learning that his wife had had in giving birth to a boy. Bob Wilson, who had saved the Limited Mail, shields him from harm. Jim is about to dash himself into a water well when Bob snatches him back. The two fight desperately and Jim is getting the better of his resistor when his senses return and he bursts into a paroxysm of tears. He cringed at the babe who caused his loved one's death.

CHAPTER III—Continued
"You won't leave me, Bob?" he pleaded pathetically, clinging to Bob's arm.
"No," said Bob simply. "I'll see you through, old man!"

"Afterwards—" Jim nodded with a wan smile, "I'll go away with you. I'll never accept—that baby—it kills its mother. It has killed its father, too."
Mrs. O'Leary, alone in the little parlor, uprose to meet them from her armchair in which she had kept fitful vigil through the night. Her sidily eyes fixed on Jim's face with concern, and gleamed with relief when she saw that he was crying.

"Don't you take the little one away, Jimmy boy?" she smiled sorrowfully, proffering the infant.
Jim's grief seemed on the point of oncoming again, as, without glancing at the baby, he repulsed it, and talked to the mantel where he stood with his soul dissolving out of his eyes as he stared at a framed picture of his wife; which, Bob saw, was the same as the one in the mail car. Bob moved up and stood beside Jim; looking at the picture, too.

Bob quickly lifted the picture from the mantel and held it close to Jim.

ad with eyes that without any foreknowledge on his part were also set.

"About the kid—" he began lamely, in a low monotone, avoiding with the instinctive psychology of man to man comforting any direct or influencing look at Jim or any tone of sentimental pleading, there's this to remember, old man, he was—your wife's happiest desire. She paid a damnably big price for him. Her flesh—her blood—her ones—live on in him. There's too much of her—in him—for you to turn him down, Jim. Taking care of him is the price you'll have to pay to redeem her sacrifice."

It was a queer scene in that little room, hallowed by the ancient sacrifice that had been made by the one now no longer warm with life—with her shabby and unshaven hobo, a wanderer on life's fringes, dominating a homely little everyday tragedy.

Bob quickly lifted the picture from the mantel and held it close to Jim, who made a loving but futile effort to see it through his film of tears.

"Look at that picture, Jim—then look at that baby!" Bob counseled gently, again prompted somehow by an inner fancy that he could not understand himself.

Great quivers shook Jim as he stepped unsteadily to Mrs. O'Leary and, bending over the infant, tried to see its face, which was thus bap-fized in the clean tears of his father's agony.

With quick, hungry tenderness he fitted the baby into his thin arms, then turned and looked at Bob streamingly.

"Looks—just—like his mother," he sobbed proudly.

Mrs. Bryan Never Heard of Woman's Plans for Memorial. Concord, N. C., Aug. 11.—Mrs. William Jennings Bryan has never heard of Miss Dinah Bryan Evans and has never lent her approval to Mrs. Evans' announced plans to establish a national memorial to the Congressman at Slewiston, Fla., the widow of the fundamentalist leader told the Associated Press tonight. Mrs. Evans, characterized as Mr. Bryan's "god-daughter," was quoted in New York dispatches today as saying that the widow had approved the erection of the site on the southwest shore of Lake Okechobee for the monument to the former secretary of state. Tentative plans for erecting a memorial to Mr. Bryan in Washington have been made by life long friends of her dead husband, Mrs. Bryan said.
