IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

NO MORE MAD DOGS REPORTED IN CITY

Two Dogs Were Killed Tuesday Night and Three Yesterday by the Local Police Officers.

No more mad dogs have been reported to local police since they killed three yesterday. The dogs killed yesterday were said to have been bitten by a scrubby looking dog which came into town Tuesday from the Harrisburg section, bit two children and a number of dogs and was finally killed Tuesday night. The dog was raving mad, according to persons who can detect the disease.

One dog bitten by this mad dog was killed by police officers, Tuesday night and the other three were rounded up yesterday morning after officers were advised that they too, had been bitten by the mad dog.

It was reported here in one of the many rumors created by the presence of the dog that twelve hounds in one yard had been bitten. This could not be verified, but if they were bitten the police have not been notified.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Peele, who was bitten by the dog while near her home on North Spring street, is reported as resting very comfortably. The pasteur treatment is being given to her by a local physician and it will not be necessary for her to go to Raleigh as was formerly the case. The child was bitten on the nose, but her nose was not as badly lacerated as was first reported.

Police officers are keeping a sharp watch for stragglers among the canine family and all dogs that seem to be without home will be taken up and shot. Officers are determined not to let a mad dog scare be created here if they can avoid it, and dogs found running about without a vaccine tag and without apparent destination will be killed.

N. A. BLACKWELDER RETURNS TO HIS HOME

Neighbors later. On inquiring from one of the local policemen when he could catch a bus to Salisbury, he was interrupted by a tourist inquiring the way to that city. The policeman asked the tourist if he would not carry Mr. Blackwelder who would show him the road. This was agreed to and Mr. Blackwelder vanished in a car with a Tennessee license.

The fact that he did leave in a tourist's automobile gave rise to all sorts of strange rumors in Concord when it was learned that Mr. Blackwelder had disappeared. One man even went so far as to declare that he passed him on a road just at the North Carolina-Tennessee line. His family feared that he might have met with foul play.

When he left the city there was in his pocket, only seventy dollars. He is one of the more prosperous farmers in the community but believed that would be sufficient to take him to Moline and keep him till he had secured work.

Going to Salisbury, he there purchased a ticket direct to Moline by way of Chicago. Food was high on the train and so he ate but little. However, when he reached his destination, he procured a good boarding place which gave good meals so he lived well while there.

After a day's stay in Moline, Mr. Blackwelder, in pursuance of his plan to see the west, went over to St. Louis where he remained a day. Then he returned to Moline where three days were spent in looking for work. The nearest he could come to getting a job was a promise of work on the week following but this seemed too far away so he pulled out and went to Indianapolis. From Indianapolis he went on to St. Paul, where he eventually ran out of money and wired home to relatives for money with which to return home.

As Mr. Blackwelder took no baggage, he had to purchase underwear and shirts as he traveled, and he also procured a small handbag in which to carry the soiled ones.

Leaving St. Paul Monday night, he reached Salisbury in the middle of the afternoon and as there was no train till night, he rode a bus to Concord. His daughter had been in the city looking for him but when he did not come in on the train, she went back home. As soon as he could get to a telephone, he called the home and told them to come get him.

His grandson, Elba Faggart, a boy in his teens, reached his grandfather first. The two shook hands and Mr. Blackwelder said: "Hello Boy." He then resumed his conversation with the people gathered around. His daughter, Miss Vernie Blackwelder, next came up and they shook hands.

"Well, pa," she said, "aren't you glad to get home?"

"I don't know," he replied, "not so glad, I guess."

Later, the family was all seated on the porch of his home and the conversation was only partially concerned with Mr. Blackwelder's trip. Mrs. Blackwelder told of her journey to Texas and Oklahoma. She was interested, however, in learning about his food and water. He declared that the water was almost as good as it was at home except for the fact that it was "awful warm." He just didn't see how they could feel like they did for what they charged. Why, he said, he could get a square meal for 35 or 40 cents anywhere and it was just a plenty. They had chicken but he didn't eat that because he wanted something he didn't get at home. Only once did he eat a drumstick.

On his trip, he was lost a number of times in the cities but it was easy to get right, he declared, because he would ask a policeman who was always nice about directing him. Everybody was friendly, said Mr. Blackwelder, and helped him on his trip. It seemed like he had known the people he met all his life, they were so nice.

He wouldn't live in any of the cities if he had a chance, he added. They were just too dirty and crowded. And it was so easy to get lost. St. Paul was an old, dirty place, he said, in recalling incidents of his journey. Indianapolis was a clean place with wide streets and he was only lost once.

Had he not lost his nerve, he would have gone to New York. He had always wanted to go there but he was just a little afraid to try to get there.

Mrs. Blackwelder wanted to know if he had enough money for the return trip. "I sent him $5 more than he asked for in his telegram," she said.

She then told of how on the Saturday afternoon when he left, she looked for him about dark but concluded that he must have waited for some of the neighbors, who were returning late. Once a car stopped at the foot of the hill and she thought he had come back. When he did not come, she sent two of her children to look for him, thinking he might have had a stroke of apoplexy. When he failed to come back by morning, inquiries were begun and it was discovered that he had disappeared. And all the time Mr. Blackwelder was gone, we were that worried, said she, that there was hardly a thing eaten. All the pies just had to be thrown away and the chicken would last a couple of days.

Mr. Blackwelder, on his part, said he was feeling fine and declared that, as soon as he had a bath and put on clean clothes, he would be all right.

PLAN BIG AUTO EXHIBIT AT THE CABARRUS FAIR

New Feature Being Arranged by Dr. T. N. Spencer and P. M. Lafferty. Space Selling Fast.

An auto exhibit on a big scale will be one of the added features at the Cabarrus County Fair this year, October 13-17. Plans for the exhibit are being perfected now by Dr. T. N. Spencer, secretary of the fair association, and P. M. Lafferty, local auto dealer.

A tent, 200 feet long and 100 feet wide, has been secured for the exhibit and space 20x20 will be allotted for auto and accessory exhibits. Part of the tent space will be reserved for the band and concerts which will be given under the tent each morning at 10 o'clock.

Already a number of local auto dealers have signed up for space in the tent although Dr. Spencer and Mr. Lafferty have been working on the feature only one day.

Space for exhibits will be arranged along each side of the tent and down the middle, leaving a 20-foot aisle on each side of the middle exhibits. The band space will be in the middle of the tent.

Latest model cars and newest inventions in the necessary line will be shown on the tent for the benefit of the public, officials of the fair having been convinced that the public is greatly interested in autos and accessories.

FASHION SHOW IN "BORN RICH"

Many Expensive Gowns Worn by Claire Windsor in New Motion Picture.

What is one of the most vital factors in the production of a motion picture? A mere man would never be able to answer that question no matter how many "guesses" he is given. As for the women—well, we'll supply the answer.

It is the stars or the leading woman's gowns.

An incredible amount of time and study is given to the dresses to be worn in a picture, and there are several good reasons why producers are obliged to go to such pains. In the first place, the women in the audience would feel "cheated" if they were not treated to the sight of several stunning creations of the modiste's art. Secondly, those in charge of overseeing the costuming must never lose sight of the fact that fashions change almost overnight.

HINKS BROOKS SAFER IN PRISON THAN OUT

Mayor of Former Mayor Will Await Trial in Due Course.

Hendersville, Aug. 19.—It is not expected there will be further developments in the case against B. L. Brooks, charged with shooting down former Mayor Sam Y. Bryson, a couple of weeks ago. No move is contemplated looking to habeas corpus proceedings to get Brooks out on and pending trial at the next term of Hendersville Superior Court, which convenes October 5th. It is felt by counsel that Brooks is safer in the county bastille than out of it and his release might lead to other developments, if rumors current here are to be taken at face value. That the defense is inclined to think the prisoner's life might be taken as a measure of revenge is seen by some in the failure to seek his release under bond.

No special term of court will be asked for trial of the case, according to information in well-informed circles. Solicitor Pless stated when here he would ask for a special term, if desired, but no move has been made to indicate such desire on the part of counsel interested in the case.

WOMEN AND SMOKING.

Many women, apparently, do not believe the No-Tobacco Conference's warning that one-sixth of a drop of pure nicotine will kill a man applies to their sex. To feminine equal-rights program seems to aid at freedom to smoke in public as well as in private.

At Nantasket Beach, Mass., benches have been marked "Reserved for Women (Smoking Permitted)" as a result of many requests. Detroit street car lines announced that men and women would be allowed to smoke on the cars but there was such an uproar in the city council that a ban was placed on all smoking on street cars. Some time ago a Long Island railway provided a smoking car for women by way of experiment but it was so poorly patronized that the car has been taken off. "Sure they can smoke," said Chief of Police Jones of Terre Haute, Ind., when he received complaints that girls were seen smoking in autos.

The sight of so many women smoking in restaurants, etc., has led the Catholics Daughters of America and some other organizations to join in the war against cigarette smoking, especially by young women. Figures presented by the internal revenue bureau show that women are a large factor in disposing of the 78,000,000,000 American-made cigarettes consumed each year. Many manufacturers now cater to women with silk-lined, perfumed and other brands.

The anti-tobacco interests are assailing Secretary of Agriculture Jardine for his advocacy of tobacco. Dr. Jardine refers to Lady Nicotine as "an attractive and loyal friend." He pledges his support to the domestic tobacco industry because it is "a major source of income" for over 450,000 farmers.

"To encourage the tobacco industry is a short-sighted policy, unworthy of a nation of our intelligence," comments Dr. D. H. Kress, vice president of the Anti-Cigarette Alliance of America. He warns that "the tobacco habit is threatening the future of America."

A cigarette with tossed by a girl from a hotel window in New York tied up Broadway traffic with a crowd gathered to see the awning fire. Two stenographers were fined $5 each in that city for violating the no-smoking rule in the subway.
