HORSE SHOE FITTING AGAIN POPULAR HERE

Numbers of the Young Men of the City Resume Their Efforts to Ring the Post.

Horseshoe pitching, for a time in the early summer one of the chief diversions of a number of the young men of the city, has again regained its popularity, the links at the Y being in constant use during the past few days.

The most consistent winners in yesterday's games was the team composed of Clarence Ridenhour and Earl Henderson Brown. These two players during the afternoon's play of freeze-out matches constantly retired their opponents.

Plans are again being proposed for a tournament to be held at the Y. M. C. A. at an early date.

It was a Parisian architect who, in the year 112, first conceived the idea of numbering houses. But like so many men with bright ideas, he was before his time, and it was not until nearly the end of the eighteenth century that the custom of giving houses street numbers became at all general.

DEPOT STREET EXCITED OVER TWO ACCIDENTS

Successive Smashes Create Uproar, Sending Workers Out to Watch Happenings.

Depot street was all excitement this morning when two accidents within ten minutes of each other, had persons working on that street running out of their shops and places of business to watch the local happenings.

The first occurrence of the unusual came when Charles Long after running G. A. Brunson's new Ford out of J. D. Boyd's Garage, caught the steering wheels in the car track and in getting it righted, dashed up on the sidewalk, hit the wall at Ehrld's, gave the barbers at the DeLuxe Shop a scare by taking a piece out of the screen door and then jerked out on the street again.

In his dash up the street, young Long passed between a telephone post and a wall which looked far too narrow to admit any object the size of a Ford.

As soon as the Ford had been taken away, and everyone had gathered round to hold a post-mortem, there was a loud crash and the crowd dashed down to have a look at the newest accident.

The second one occurred when Eugene Laughlin failed to put on his brakes quickly enough and hit a Ford belonging to Clarence Parfroy, parked just below Wilkinson's Undertaking Parlor.

No special damage was done to either automobile in the second accident, despite the pending crash when they struck.

Mr. Brunson's Ford was damaged rather badly, a fender being bent and a spring being broken.

Clarence Parfroy, who works in the DeLuxe Shop, declared that he was becoming alarmed at the rate accidents were happening. "First," said he, "my shop is run into. Then my Ford gets hit. I think I had better phone home and tell them to look out; I'm liable to get hurt myself."

FIVE BOYS HELD FOR ENTERING HOME HERE

Carried Off Number of Articles From Home of J. H. Barrett on Crowell Street.

Five boys, all of them in their teens, have been turned over to County Welfare Officer Brown as a result of their entrance into the home of J. H. Barrett, on Crowell street, Monday afternoon. Owing to the ages of the boys and their desire to give them another chance without too much publicity, officers declined to make public the names of the boys.

Two fountain pens, one razor, one ladies' wrist watch, one $2-cylinder S. & W. pistol, one money bank and a flash light were taken from the home and all of the goods except the razor and bank have been recovered. Police officers stated that the boys have confessed they spent the money and sold the razor for a dime.

The watch and pens were found under a board in Tar Creek, the officers reported, one of the boys leading them to the spot where the goods were hidden. The watch had been taken from its bracelet, and one of the youngsters showed the officers where the bracelet had been dropped through a hole in the house.

The boys were questioned separately by the officers and the reports made by them corresponded so accurately that it was an easy matter to find the goods and get a full report on the robbery.

The boys entered the house Monday afternoon while all of the occupants were away.

Following their arrest the boys were turned over to Mr. Brown, who will make disposition of their case.
