Revival in Progress at Methodist Protestant Church. For the past week the people of the First Methodist Protestant Church have been enjoying a series of revival services. The pastor, Rev. P. E. Lindley, opened the services last Sunday and continued the work until Rev. N. G. Bethen, of Lexington, came to do the preaching.

Attendance has been good and the interest increases. The hot weather is not keeping the folks from the house of worship these evenings. Last night the interest reached the highest point and spirited singing and effective preaching.

Tomorrow's program will depart from the usual services. There will be a special service for the aged persons of the community at 1 o'clock. Effort will be made to have as many of the older people as possible. Reservation will be made for them and cars will be sent for any who are without a way of conveyance.

Then at three o'clock in the afternoon there will be a program by and for the men and boys. At 7:30 in the evening Mr. Bethen will deliver his third message of the day to the regular large congregation.

The meeting continues into next week on the regular schedule of services at 7:30 each evening.

What's the Matter With Marriage? Durham County Progress. When Judge Henry A. Grady comes to Durham next month to preside over a term of superior court, he will find a total of 36 divorce cases awaiting disposal and in each case the interested parties will say that they have tried married life out to their heart's content and found it a failure.

What's wrong with married life today, anyway? Years ago a divorce case was as rare as a pearl in an oyster and when one did come up in the courts it was the talk of the countryside. But today not a term of superior court in Durham or any other county in the state but that has one or more such actions and the divorce record in the state is growing by leaps and bounds.

Away back in the years ago men and women doubtless had just as many family spats as they do today. However, there was probably not as much infidelity as is found today and the latter probably makes up the basis for the majority of the cases brought up these days.

And there is a cause for the latter. Men and women do not take the marital vows as seriously now as they did a long while ago. Ofttimes marriages are for convenience alone and such a union cannot long and successfully exist and, as a result, the courts step in and sever the marital knot.

But whatever the cause, the sad fact remains that marriage now is not the institution that it once was and at present rate of increase the time will come when whole terms of court will have to be devoted to the severing of that most sacred tie.

THE ART OF DRIVING ONE OF A SERIES OF TEN LESSONS

WHEN it is necessary to slow down or stop, my advice is to let the engine do as much of the braking as possible, thereby saving the mechanical brakes. To steady a car, that is when it is necessary to slow down appreciably but not necessarily stop, the foot brake should be applied gently, with the clutch in. This insures even and effective braking. When driving on slippery roads the foot brake should be used as little as possible. An idea that most people have is that when the rear wheels of a car are locked the driver cannot get a greater braking effect. But this is wrong. By easing the power just as the wheels are about to lock, and then reapplying it, a better grip of the road surface is maintained. Another point which may seem unimportant, but which really is important, is the method of handling the brake lever. The usual way is to pull (or push as the case may be) this lever with the ratchet catch engaged, but this only tends to wear out the

MAGEE WARNED OF TROUBLE, SON SAYS

Leahy Had Threatened to Kill, Young Magee Declares. Carl C. Magee, militant New Mexico editor, who shot and killed J. B. Lassater and wounded Judge D. J. Leahy in a fight in a Las Vegas hotel, had been threatened with violence and was expecting trouble at any time.

ONE VETERAN WHO HADN'T PASSED OVER THE RIVER

Monroe Journal. Years ago when Bob Glenn was making a big speech in Monroe he began to call the roll of the old Confederate soldiers who had "passed over the river." After calling the name of each well known soldier Mr. Glenn would wind up by saying, "he too, has passed on." Somebody had given him the name of Uncle Ali Tcherin as an old soldier who had also passed on, but that was a great mistake as the speaker found when he called Uncle Ali's name and said, "he, too, is gone." Mr. Glenn was nearly swept off his feet by hearing Uncle Ali's voice in the audience call out, "No, sir, I'll be damned, of all 'Tombazin' has gone anywhere." Yesterday Frank Blair, who has been visiting here a day or so, and Tom Dillon were standing in front of the store talking about old times. They had called over dozens of names that were once familiar to them, but all of whom have "passed over the river." Mr. Blair had gotten the idea that Col. Bob May was in the list of those who had "passed over the river." Just then Bob hove in sight and Frank was much surprised as Mr. Glenn had been on the day that Uncle Ali shouted to him that he had not gone anywhere yet.

IN WHICH EDITOR R. F. BEASLEY SETS UP AN ALIBI

Monroe Journal. The Charlotte News says in the police court in Charlotte, "R. F. Beasley paid a fine of $50 and costs for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor." Notwithstanding the well known definition which Jack Williams gave of an alibi, we feel moved to set up one. Jack defined an alibi as "Latin for a damn lie." We do not regard an alibi so lightly, especially since we feel called upon to make use of one.

VIRGINIA JUSTICE

Wilmington Star. The ancient rivalry between North Carolina and Virginia has in more recent years assumed a different aspect. The land of the longleaf pine is no longer the valley of humiliation between two bumps of conceit. But while North Carolina has outstripped her northern neighbor in many respects, there still lingers in the Old Dominion one of the greatest attributes transplanted in the fair colony by the early English settlers, namely a respect for the law. In Virginia today as in yesteryears a murder is a murder, and the punishment for murder is death. In the fearless and impartial administration of justice, unhampered by maudlin sentiment and unfettered by social restraint, Virginia still points the way to North Carolina and scores of sister commonwealths from the Atlantic to the Pacific. In evidence of this there is the conviction of Rudolph Disse, the Richmond youth who killed his paramour and his rival, and added a policeman to his list of victims when his escape seemed doubtful. Notwithstanding the pleas that he was insane, that he was a drug addict, and a victim of other weaknesses, Disse has been sentenced to pay with his own life for one of the three he took to assuage his bestial passions. It is noteworthy that Disse was not tried by a jury of Richmond people. The courts of Virginia gave him every opportunity to obtain the maximum benefits. A jury from another county was impelled to hear the evidence, and this jury has declared him guilty. Thus does Virginia justice wreak vengeance upon those who wantonly slay her sons. Disse was not notably prominent socially, or in a business way, but he was afforded an able array of counsel to represent him. Even had he been the scion of the oldest of the F. F. V.'s, the result would have been the same. The records of Virginia courts show that money, influence and social prestige are not sufficient to "foolwink" the law. Offhand we do not know what the homicides in 1924 is a serious indictment. In the two larger cities of the state they will probably reveal a fairly high average, but taking the state as a whole, we believe Virginia's record far less sanguinary than our own. Two hundred and ninety-nine homicides in 1924 is a serious indictment of North Carolina. It faints at a laxity somewhere that cries to high Heaven for remedial measures. Barely a day passes that some new homicidal situation is not spread across the front pages of the daily papers. "The traffic officer says you were going 40 miles an hour," the judge told the fair prisoner. "Yes, sir," she admitted, "but you see, I was to meet my husband in five minutes, and I didn't want to keep him waiting." And the judge, being a married man, discharged her.

Paint to Protect — As Well as to Beautify

WHEN you get ready to paint and are talking it over, debating this color and that, don't overlook the most vital point—protection. The biggest job paint has to do is to save the surface. It is a well-known fact that Pee Gee Mastic Paint has never been surpassed in protecting any surface to which applied. Its beauty is an incident to its real value—adding long years of life to your home, barn, out-buildings—wherever used. It stays "put" and retains its high gloss for years.
