FARMER WITH A TOWSACK CATCHES HIDE TO JAIL

Lexington Dispatch.
That Charlie Gilliam, high deputy sheriff (a little over six feet) of Davidson county, has a persuasive way about him has long ago been learned by those who have been around the courts of this county and seen the results of his work. It is related that he has been known to make arrests upon invitation. Thursday night he went to arrest a man charged with stealing chickens and actually found the accused practically in the fact of paying back the money he received from the man he is alleged to have sold the chickens to, while the owner stood by to receive his property back from the purchaser, an innocent party in the whole business. Luck was just naturally breaking with the county's highest deputy. But that's nothing. Listen to this:

On his way back along the road about six miles south of Thomasville, Deputy Gilliam, who was accompanied by Deputy Jim Moore, drove by a man lugging a towsack across his shoulder.

"How far are you going?" cordially inquired the deputy.

"Oh, just a little ways up the road," replied the sack carrier.

"Well, come and get in and I'll take you as far as you're going," insisted Mr. Gilliam.

"Oh, I'm just going a little piece and I'd just as soon walk," came the reply.

The deputy opened the door of his car and repeated his hospitable offer and the wayworn traveler dumped his burden down near the officer's feet. There was a rather strong perfume coming away from that sack. Now, if it had been even the slightest odor it would perhaps have been all the same, for when Charlie Gilliam gets on the windward side of liquor he is getting ready to make a prisoner.

After riding along for a short while the farmer, as he appeared to be, declared he was ready to get out. Mr. Gilliam redoubled his courtesy, opened the door and dismounted and offered to assist the passenger in getting his burden out. "What have you got in that sack?" inquired Mr. Gilliam.

"That's just a little stuff I saw a fellow hide awhile ago, so I picked it up."

Asked to repeat his story, the man said that he saw a woman hide the sack.

"Well, brother, you surely did get it in the wrong man's car," said the deputy.

"Who in the thunder are you?" inquired the now alarmed burden bearer, and when he got the information sought it is related he was speechless for a space of time.

"Why not tell the truth about where you got this stuff?" demanded Mr. Gilliam.

"The truth even wouldn't do me any good now," was the dejected response.

Examination disclosed seven pints of corn whiskey in the sack, and the next morning the deputy secured another pint in the vicinity that he believes was a mate to the seven.

The guest who became the prisoner of Mr. Gilliam was Tom Emmons, of Conrad Hill township, aged about 45 years. The ride was concluded at the Davidson county jail. A hearing will be given Thursday.

Folks who go about the country in automobile have gotten to be a little careful about who they pick up on the roads, at nights especially. And now some folks may become even more careful about being picked up.

GREENSBORO VOTES TO SUPPORT JAMES B. DUKE

Resolutions Adopted by Chamber of Commerce and Ordered Forwarded to Philanthropist.

Greensboro, Sept. 12.—The local chamber of commerce directors in a meeting last night, declared support for James B. Duke in cases he wants to extend the Piedmont and Northern electric line from Charlotte here. This phase was not approached like Lexington, Thomasville and Winston-Salem were, but the local business men would like very much to see Mr. Duke run the line by here. They say they would be glad to give a considerable part of their traffic to the electric line and thus get competitive railroad service here.

A formal resolution was passed asking that the line be extended through here and forwarded to Mr. Duke.

The directors also passed a resolution thanking B. N. Duke for his recent gift of $10,000 to Greensboro college and his gift of $50,000 to Guilford college.

The Tramp Printer.

Monroe Enquirer.
A fellow blew into The Enquirer office one day last week. He need not have told me that he was a printer, for I knew it by the time he had gotten over the doorsill. He borrowed a dollar of me and it is to be presumed he also borrowed a dollar of Brother Beasley over at The Journal office.

I always did have a kindly feeling toward tramp printers. They are such cheerful liars. I never loaned one a dollar in my life but that it would be returned. They are great promoters—but not so greatly different from other folks—they're almost human.

I sometimes wonder if a tramp printer ever had on a clean shirt and collar in his life. Once I became sorry for a knight of the road and gave him a clean shirt because the one he had on was so dirty. The fellow took off his coat and put it on over the one he was wearing.

"Surely," I protested, "you will not put that one on over your soiled shirt?"

"Why not?" said he. "This makes only the sixth shirt I am wearing."

Farmer's advertisement:
"Anybody wanting to buy a big fat hog, come out and see me."

Catherine: "Isn't this a horrible photo of me?"
Clara: "Yes, but a very good likeness."
