Entries are asked to take note of this fact and either send them to Mrs. Mayme Moore Sifford, Box 597, Charlotte, or bring them to Miss Cooley at her office here not later than noon Monday and they will be taken over by Miss Cooley later in the day.

It is expected that over twenty women from Cabarrus county will have costumes entered in the Exposition in an effort to win some of the handsome prizes which are offered. A total of $1,000 is to be given out in cash prizes.

Women who enter the contest must not only design their own dresses but they must make them as well.

NORTH CAROLINA HELPS TO SUPPLY FLORIDA WITH FOOD

Two Thousand Pounds of Poultry Shipped From Hendersonville to Jacksonville, as an Example.

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 17.—(AP)—While Florida people are busy making money, North Carolina is helping to supply them with food.

This was pointed out today by the division of markets of the North Carolina department of agriculture. A shipment of 2,000 pounds of poultry from Henderson to Jacksonville was cited as an example. The prices obtained for this particular shipment averaged about two cents higher than the New York market, it was stated.

The division of markets is just now launching a campaign to "put North Carolina behind the hen" and to encourage increased poultry production in this state. There will be an inspection of hatcheries, with a view to encourage the production of certified flocks, it was recently announced by the division.

"Eastern North Carolina farmers are being urged by the division to invest some of the money that is coming in from cotton in fences, looking toward the production of more feed and livestock. More dairy cows are urged."

"It seems that our eastern North Carolina farmers are to have the benefit of a good cotton crop this year," said an official statement issued by the division today. "So far, weather conditions have been good for getting the crop and no doubt a good price is in store for the producers."

"One of the best things that could be done with a part of this cotton money, by our farmers, would be to purchase fencing materials to fence their farms and be in position to get full value for the crops that are grown."

"Sooner or later," the statement advises, "our cotton growers are to find out just what a good crop of weevils can do, and a wet year, following a dry one like this has been, is likely to occur at any time. Our producers are growing more crops like velvet beans, soy beans, and tame hay that can best be used with livestock."

With more livestock on North Carolina farms must come more pastures, whether permanent or temporary, and with pastures must come more fencing."

In discussing the need for more dairy cows, the statement says: "Many of our eastern North Carolina counties show that few real dairy cows are to be found. More really good cows are needed to furnish milk in a commercial way."

"Milk is now coming into eastern North Carolina from places hundreds of miles away, to be made into ice cream to furnish food for our folks, when this might be furnished by our own farmers. At present, the dairy sections of the state are found in the Piedmont and mountain counties. There is a ready sale in the state for all milk and dairy products."

"There are now a few cars of surplus dairy cows to be found for sale in western North Carolina and others can be had outside the state."

"The building of pastures, fencing of farms, and the purchase of good milk cows would make a wise investment this fall and winter."

It is further pointed out that during the past year the department of agriculture, through the division of markets, assisted in placing 1,673 head of feeder cattle from western North Carolina. And this year, it is suggested, the lack of rain in western North Carolina will cause an earlier movement of these cattle for feeding than is customary.

Livestock shipping associations have been formed during the year, it is said by the division of markets, in Madison, Buncombe, Haywood and Jackson counties, and it is estimated that these organizations will handle approximately 4,000 cattle.

"Approximately 1,000 head of these cattle have been marketed already," said the statement issued today. "V. W. Lewis, at Raleigh, and T. L. Gwyn, at Canton, both of the division of markets, are in close touch with the situation and are in position to render service to cattle feeders and butchers looking for cattle."

"It appears that cotton seed meal and hulls will be cheaper than last year and that fat cattle will be as high or higher."

Many North Carolina farmers, says the division of markets, have been taking advantage of good prices for hogs. Several cars of hogs recently shipped have brought better than 14 cents live weight. During the week of August 25, a car of poultry was shipped from Alamogordo county.

"It looks as though the coming year," the statement says, "will be an interesting one in the poultry industry. The division of markets will be in much better shape than last year to render service in the marketing of poultry and eggs. A number of produce exchanges, owned and controlled by poultry producers, are being established in many of the counties."
