NOT UNLAWFUL TO FILM CHILDREN Growing Motion Picture Industry in State Necessitates Ruling in the Raleigh News and Observer.

Children under 16 years of age in this state may be used in the production of motion pictures without violation of the child labor law, only if they have their background in a cotton field or country setting, according to a recent ruling by Attorney General Dennis G. Brummitt. The rapid development of the moving picture art and other art work which is employing children under sixteen years of age in this state, brought the matter to the attention of the child welfare commission of which E. F. Carter is executive officer.

In the opinion of Attorney General Brummitt, the rural background could not be construed to mean a mill, factory, cannery, workshop, or manufacturing establishment, all of which are explicitly forbidden places for children to work, in accordance with one provision of the law. And while the photographers and others employees of the film company might be engaged at labor at the time, this was not considered sufficient to cause the employment of the children a violation of this law.

In making the decision, the attorney general concurred with the interpretation of Mr. Carter, the executive officer, and the child welfare commission. This commission states that its policy is to confine itself most strictly to the laws laid down in the child labor law, although by legislative act they were vested with broad powers for the protection of the child life in the state.

"Poor Mrs. Jones." The Pathfinder. The life of a farmer's wife, with its trials and tribulations, but also with its blessings and its luxuries, forms the plot of a new educational movie put out by the department of agriculture. "Poor Mrs. Jones" is the title.

Mrs. Jones, weary of the task of managing a farm home, keeping the farm account books, caring for the chickens, tending the garden, and performing a hundred other household duties in addition to rearing a family, gets "tired of it all" and demands that her husband sell out the farm and move to the city. Farmer Jones appears open to conviction, but first he decides that Jane has been working too hard and needs a rest. So he sends her off to the city to visit her married sister whose husband has a job with a salary that seems princely—from a distance.

Mrs. Jones goes. She gets a sample of life in a crowded city flat learns of the taste of food not fresh from the farm, the hazards to children, of the traffic jams, the struggles at the bargain counter. After a week she is glad to cut her "vacation" short and return home—convinced that her lot is not so bad as it had seemed, that each dark cloud of farm life is lined with silver and that in reality she is "rich" Mrs. Jones.

MRS. MARGARET FAGGART DIED THIS MORNING

Had Been Ill For Past Two Years.—Funeral Services to Be Held This Afternoon. Mrs. Margaret Faggart, well known woman of this city, died this morning at 2 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Miss Pink Faggart, on Powder street, after an illness of two years. Death was caused by infirmities brought on by old age. Funeral services will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Miss Faggart, conducted by Rev. J. M. Varner. Interment will be made in the cemetery at Center Church. Mrs. Faggart was 80 years of age, having been born in this county on September 29, 1835. She was a daughter of the late Frederick Bost and had made her home in Concord for more than 30 years. Her husband, Timothy Faggart, died near the close of the War Between the States. The deceased was a member of Epworth Methodist Church, having joined the Methodist Church as a young woman and moved her membership to Epworth Church many years ago. Surviving are three daughters and one son as follows: Mrs. C. F. C. Miller, of Lando, S. C.; Mrs. R. V. Faggart and Miss Pink Faggart, of Concord, and William Faggart, of Cabarrus county.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR T. D. MANESS TODAY

Held at First Baptist Church.—Death Was a Great Shock to the City. Funeral services for Tola D. Maness, one of Concord's most prominent and influential citizens, who died suddenly Saturday night at his home here, were held this morning at 11 o'clock in the First Baptist Church. Services were conducted by Rev. G. V. Tilley, of Hertford, former pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Tibbs, who has been preaching in the church during the summer months. Interment was made in Oakwood cemetery. The church was completely filled by relatives and friends of the deceased and banked high around the altar of the church were hundreds of floral designs sent as last tokens of love and respect by those who had known him best. Music was furnished at the church and grave by members of the church choir and other musicians of the city.

NICK SAPPENFIELD'S INJURY HURTS DAVIDSON

Football Team Will Suffer From Loss of Star Quarterback.—Ritchie Gets In Game. Nick Sappenfield, injured Saturday when he broke his leg in the football game at Davidson has been received with much sadness here in Concord. Nick was one of the old home town's favorite sons. His rise last year to stary heights in football was spectacular and, although most of his friends declared they knew he could do it all the time, they were none the less proud of his achievement. He had become one of the outstanding quarterbacks in the state, his brainy work in leading the Davidson team being a feature of the season's play. All the dope from the Presbyterians would indicate that there is no one to take the Concord boy's place which will mean that Davidson's chances for a willing team are somewhat lessened. Two players, Overton and Hewlett, have been tried in quarter position and the place will probably go to one of them.

BUICK ROADSTER SMASHES FORD ON KANNAPOLIS ROAD

Charlotte Insurance Man Is Arrested In Accident Charged With Driving While Intoxicated. A badly bungled-up Buick roadster in front of the city hall attracted large crowds of inquisitive spectators this morning and brought forth a constant stream of speculation from the bystanders. According to Chief of Police Talbirt the machine was being held in custody awaiting the hearing of R. Binkman, of Charlotte, who was arrested on a charge of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquors while driving an automobile. Mr. Binkman's arrest followed an accident on the Concord-Kannapolis highway near Glass when he ran into a Ford belonging to a Mr. Johnson, of that section, and almost completely demolished the machine which was parked on the side of the road. The accident occurred shortly after midnight. According to the persons on the outside of the city hall, Mr. Binkman had been to a wedding and was returning to his home when he ran into the Ford car. This was not verified by Chief Talbirt. Two persons were with Mr. Binkman at the time of the accident but their names were not known by the chief. Mr. Binkman is said to be a prominent insurance man of Charlotte. A local insurance man went on his bond of $100.

AN UNUSUAL FIRE INSURANCE POLICY

Print of "The Vanishing American," Is Insured for $100,000. Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 19.—One of the most unusual insurance policies ever written was written in Charlotte yesterday, when Ernest Ellison general agent of the Maryland Casualty Company, insured the print of "The Vanishing American," against fire, theft and damage for $100,000. The policy was written for the Carolina Exposition Company, following the action of Mr. S. E. Kent, general agent of Famous Players Lasky Corporation in withdrawing the print from circulation, following its first screening by officials in New York.

The Mysterious Handkerchief.

A large, white handkerchief with a large hem and five matches are required for this mystifying trick. As many other tricks the handkerchief must be prepared beforehand. This is done by cutting the stitching of the hem at each of the four corners so an ordinary match may be slipped into the hem at each place. These places should be fastened again so there is no appearance of the handkerchief being disturbed in any way. A white thread should be fastened over the end of each match to keep it in place. When you are ready to perform the trick lay the handkerchief out flat on a table so that all watching may see. Beginning at one corner, roll up the handkerchief into a compact roll, the fifth match being rolled up in it. This done, fold over the ends. Then, by feeling, find one of the matches in the hem of the handkerchief. When the performer is sure he has found one of these matches he breaks it. Everybody, of course, will hear it break, but when the handkerchief is unrolled the unbroken match will fall to the table. The performer must at all times pay strict attention to the position of the loose match and those fastened in the hem. The trick can be repeated four times, breaking a match in one of the corners each time, thus making it more puzzling.

Say Farmers Are More Optimistic.

Kinston, Sept. 18.—The prosperity that appeared to have been snatched from Eastern Carolina when tobacco prices showed a drop from the 1924 levels and bid prospects were reported to be making material inroads upon the cotton crop, is, after all, just around the corner, that is the opinion of well-informed business men and bankers here today. Conditions are much more encouraging than three weeks ago. They have improved greatly within 10 days. The economic quirk that resulted in 15-cent tobacco was followed by a section-wide protest from farmers. Their lamentations may have been premature. According to the tobaccoists, the growers themselves were responsible. They flooded the markets with inferior weed, much of which was shunned by the buyers, warehousemen state.

No Tidings Yet From Missing Hickory Boy.

Hickory, Sept. 19.—No trace has been found of George Sherrill, 13-year-old son of J. H. Sherrill, who was thought to have left town this week in company with Brooks Pruitt and another youth, all about the same age. The last time the boy was seen was on Tuesday morning about 7 o'clock when he went to his father for a dollar to buy school book. After getting the money from his father the boy went to a brother and secured another dollar from him on the plea of buying a book, saying that his father did not have the money. The two dollars is all the money he had and is thought to have had. He was wearing white duck trousers and white canvas shoes when he disappeared.

next time the flag passed. Granetzer failed to obey the warning saying: "My flag is the red flag," the sergeant deposed. In the view of the magistrate who sentenced him Granetzer was guilty of disorderly conduct because by his refusal to take off his hat he created a disturbance. The sentence was imposed last Tuesday after failure to pay a $25 fine. Mistaken Identity Proves Unpleasant Burlington, Sept. 18.—Being the double of another man, a murderer is not a pleasant experience during the time it is necessary to wait for identification, if Tom Perry, negro, knew what he was talking about. Tom's appearance tallied with a negro wanted in Moore county for the alleged killing of another negro and he was picked up here yesterday by Currie Marrie and on advice of the Moore county sheriff held several hours for identification. A crippled left leg, lame from a stroke and other physical features caused him to be picked up. He admitted that he had been in Moore county and had read about the alleged killing in the papers, but more that that he knew nothing, declaring "they don't know me; I don't know dem." The negro resigned himself to wait, concluding as he was being escorted to the "coop" that he was not the man, but reckoned it best to let the Moore county officers see him. USE PENNY COLUMN—IT PAYS
