Pearls Popular

Pearl rings are quite the rage these days—real pearls are preferred, but the majority are a manufactured composition. This one has two large and one smaller pearl arranged in a cluster. The large pearls are pink and the small one is of gray.

HOTEL CONSTRUCTION ATTRACTS SPECTATORS

Structure to Be of Latest Fireproof Design—Lounge Room in Front of Building.

Interest in the construction of the hotel continues to be manifest by the large number of persons who take every opportunity to observe the work being done. Especially is this true now that the building is taking some sort of shape.

Inquiries have been made as to the place where the hotel lobby and dining room will be put. It is easy to see the space reserved for the bank but the other parts are not quite so evident.

Directly facing the street on the first floor are to be five small shops which will be rented out by the hotel company.

Above these shops, on the second floor facing Union street is a large room which is to constitute the lounge, while directly in the rear of this is the lobby and behind the lobby is the dining room. The lounge is to be used for such gatherings as the civic club meetings and convention meetings.

Steel girders have been used in the construction of the lower floors and these girders are being covered with concrete to make them double fireproof. In case of fire, the concrete would keep the girders from having any danger of melting. The entire structure is to be of latest fireproof construction.

SILVER HILL FIRE CAUSES CONGESTION

Salisbury Mayor Gives Views on the Practice of People Attending Fires in Cities.

The fire Tuesday evening on Silver Hill, when two negro houses burned, was of such brilliance that practically the entire town was out to see it, causing a prolonged congestion in the vicinity of the Hartwell Mill while the excited crowds watched the flames.

As a side-line to the fire, Mayor Hinderlite, of Salisbury, who had stopped up-town to procure a soft drink during the time the excitement was in progress, made a statement as to what his policies were to be along certain lines, namely, the practice of having the public attending fires.

Said the Mayor: "Before my administration as mayor of Salisbury was expired, I am going to pass a law making it a $50 fine for any person to go to a fire. Yes sir, I am. Then I am going to take the money I get from that source and build more streets. Don't you think that is a good idea?"

Thereupon the Mayor left the drug store, leaving his listeners to ponder over his words.

The two houses which were burned made one of the brightest lights ever seen in the city.

On the hill directly across from the city proper, the light shined for miles around. The homes were the property of John Giles and his wife, and Nancy Foster.

The World's Best Joke.

What is the world's best joke? It isn't about some man's in-law. Neither is it what Pat said to Mike. Nor is it what one colored man said to another man during a crap game. The world's best joke is "Per Capita." Here is how per capita is determined: A man has a million dollars. Another man hasn't a dollar. But according to per capita, the wealth of the two men is $500,000 apiece.

FRENCH WON'T SECURE TERMS THEY'RE AFTER

But There is a Feeling of Optimism That An Agreement Will Be Reached.

Washington, Sept. 23.—The conclusion today of informal negotiations between Minister Caillaux and his experts on the one hand, and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Under Secretary Winston and other assistants, joined by Secretary of Commerce Hoover and others of the commission, found all trying to reach that middle ground upon which an agreement for the settlement of the French debt might be effected.

There is a feeling of optimism, so far as arriving at an agreement is concerned, but the French participants find that they cannot at all hope for terms akin to those which they have sought. No formal meetings of the two commissions are scheduled, for it will not be of any avail for the members to enter into further discussions until the experts get somewhere closer to that middle ground for which now they are groping. It is said that much has been accomplished today, but a settlement is far from being in actual sight at this moment; that seems certain, although the participants in the conferences do not like to admit that fact.

The thought is that Minister Caillaux will agree to a settlement on the best terms he can get as to total payments, leaving some of the details to be worked out by the French experts. He will go to New York Thursday evening or Friday morning to fulfill some engagements he has there, sailing back in his native land, it is said that he will be in position to go before the French parliament and justify his acquiescence in the American demands on the ground that the members of the United States debt commission are hard traders and would not recede, and it was a question of acceptance of those terms, to be as an opening wedge for a loan in New York, or complete failure of the negotiations.

Back home, also, Minister Caillaux can mold public opinion to his way of thinking, putting his case before the French as showing he and his colleagues, representing the several political schools of thought of France, had done their utmost. It was come forcibly to the front that the American Congress looks upon the British-United States settlement as a pattern to which future agreements must conform. There can be a slight juggling of figures, so that the payments during the first few years are lighter than in the case of the British settlement, but the general features of the prospective French agreement must conform to this other document.

The so-called safeguarding clause, by which it would be agreed that in the event of financial difficulties arising in France there would be a downward revision of payments, is in controversy. This is looked upon as merely another way of saying to the United States that if the German reparation payments should fall in whole or in part the French would be absolved from the payment of their debt to America in the same degree. It is intimated outside official circles that French delegations should have judged more keenly the sentiment in the United States and have taken less for granted before coming to this country on this mission. Even now, after the various conferences, formal and informal, their offers are quite far apart from what the United States expects in the way of payments, and that middle ground which is being sought at the close of business hours today was not even in sight, it is said. That which the French look upon as a political debt is to the representatives of the United States a hard business proposition, and because of the condition of the French budget, members of the American commission say they cannot learn quite far apart from what the United States expects in the way of payments, and that middle ground which is being sought at the close of business hours today was not even in sight, it is said. President Coolidge, as well as the members of the United States debt commission, has declined to make any comment upon the situation. A White House spokesman today stated, however, that Mr. Coolidge has been kept informed of the various developments and that he has placed his approval on all that has already been done.

"See the dollar I found?" said Bobby. "Are you sure it was lost?" asked his father. "I know it was," answered Bobby. "I saw the man in the store looking for it!"

MORE TROUBLE BREWS FOR RALEIGH OFFICERS

Quite a Flurry Has Been Raised About Breaking Drunk's Arm in Prison Cell.

Tom Bost in Greensboro News, Raleigh, Sept. 29.—Police Chief J. Winder Bryan with his plain clothes detective, Jessie Wyatt, soon to be tried for murder in the second degree, seems a candidate for further trouble in his backsliding officer A. W. Perry, who broke the arm of B. T. Henderson, white carpenter, while Henderson was oozing the booze from his cell in the city jail September 25.

Chief Bryan was with Detective Wyatt when the officer shot and killed Lawyer Stephen S. Holt, of Smithfield, June 2. Always there has been a feeling that a good general would have prevented that bloodshed which is now known to have been accidental. Henderson went on a jamboree last week and got himself arrested. He stuck his arm through the cell and when he got it back from Officer Perry it was broken. Chief Bryan was on hand. He says the broken arm was an accident.

Then the city informally voted Mr. Henderson $150. It was very quiet about it. Mayor Culbreth approved the check and made the motion to pay Henderson the $150. The money is taken from the city treasury. No record was made of it as a claim. But the money was paid out on oral evidence of the hurt. Is a rather ignoble showing all the way.

Chief Bryan gives complete exoneration to Officer Perry for the courageous cracking of the fool drunk's arm, but out of the abundance of economy does not give the policeman the balance in the city treasury as a reward for his bravery.

Both papers have taken considerable cracks at the police chief and his subordinate. There is no disposition in the city government to proceed against Officer Perry. The chief would not swear out a warrant and nobody has moved to Solicitor Evans. The Times makes a furious assault on the whole business this afternoon. It demands somebody's scalp and does not appear to care how many it gets. In that the populace joins. There is a great deal of indignation about it. Two paragraphs from the Times say:

"If Chief Bryan felt that the police officer who broke the prisoner's arm should be exonerated he ought to have gone a step further, mentioned him in order, paid the drunk's claim out of his own pocket or passed the hat among the brethren in arms."

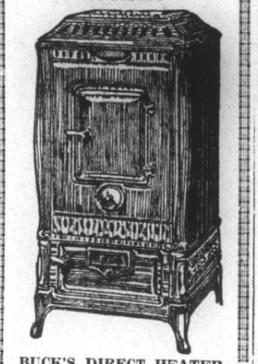

"The commissioners should reopen the case, call for the refund of the $150, and if the commissioners were as they have been stated, call for a resign-nation of the officer who breaks the arms which prisoners extend from cells and that of the chief of police through his exoneration of his subordinate shows that he thinks it is an act committed in the line of duty."

About That. "What is it that keeps us from doing wrong?" asked the teacher. "Well," declared Jimmie, "there's ten commandments and about nineteen or twenty amendments."

Tourist: (paying his bill): "Well, I'm square now." Hotel Keeper: "Yes, sir, and I hope you'll be round again very shortly."
