The Wildlife Club, a boy's club at Number 2 school, held its first meeting Monday, with H. L. Johnson, of the Y, in charge. Twelve of last year's members were present and all were enthusiastic over prospects for the club this year.

Dr. Anderson on Mr. Duke's Gift

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Commenting on the death of James B. Duke, whose recent gift to Duke University is said to have been the largest single gift to an educational institution in the history of education, Dr. Stonewall Anderson, head of the university, spoke with feeling concerning Mr. Duke.

"The announcement of the death of James B. Duke was a great shock to hundreds and thousands of Methodist people.

"Mr. Duke was not only a great business man of America and the world; he was a great philanthropist. His father and he and his brothers have been benefactors of Trinity College for more than a generation. Besides Trinity College, they have supported other benevolent enterprises in North Carolina under the auspices of the Methodist church.

"Something like a year ago Mr. Duke enshrined himself in the hearts and memories of all Methodist people and all other lovers of mankind by his munificent gift, which has been estimated as at least $25,000,000, to Trinity College, the name of which has been changed to Duke University.

"I have understood that Mr. Duke had been giving personal attention to the splendid building program now under way on the new campus of the university. Many of us hoped that he would live to see his great building scheme completed. But this was not to be. However, the work will go on. Mr. J. B. Duke, the business man, is forgotten. Duke University, by its service to men, will proclaim the name of J. B. Duke, the lover of his kind, to all coming generations."

COLORED FAIR OPENS TODAY WITH PARADE TODAY

Long Line Through City Starts the Week's Festivities.—Floats Feature Parade.

The Colored Fair started with a bang this morning when a parade consisting of the marshals and their assistants' two bands, floats, decorated automobiles and other automobiles made its way through the main streets of the city.

Despite the fact that the weather had suddenly turned cold, persons in the parade wore their costumes as arranged before hand, several of which consisted of paper dresses of a decidedly summery appearance and of a cool looking texture.

Heading the procession was a cavalcade of marshals and their wives or lady friends. These horsemen and horsewomen slowly paced at the front of the line, attuning to their appearance and dignity by wearing bands of colored ribbon slung over the shoulder as is customary with marshals.

Directly behind the marshals was a quartette of bicyclists, young boys who had decorated between the spokes of their vehicles with gay bunting. As the parade started through the business section of the city, some persons in authority ordered them out and they were forced to quit the line, to their evident disappointment.

Following next came a band and in the rear of the band was the line of gaily decorated floats. Outstanding in this group were the crepe paper covered automobiles with men and girls in them dressed to match. One was of pure white with all the ladies in white paper dresses. Another had the women in dresses of pink paper.

One especially good was a wagon on which was erected a small persimmon tree, in whose branches were four opossums. Dogs beneath and colored boys holding the dogs gave the whole a realistic touch of a hunting party.

The parade was wound up with a long line of automobiles not decorated.

Today is educational day at the fair grounds and the schools of the county declared a holiday so as to allow the children to attend. A large crowd of people is expected to attend.

To Enforce the Fertilizer Law.
Raleigh, October 20.—(AP)—Enforcement of the fertilizer law is a matter that continues to claim the attention of commissioner of Agriculture William C. Graham, he stated here today.

"Beginning with December 1, the new regulation will be rigidly effective," he said, "and I have been busy recently answering numerous inquiries and giving such information to the companies as is necessary for them to have in order to conform strictly to the law.

"Some of the companies do not seem to understand the change," continued Mr. Graham. "For example, some of them seem to think that ads for the term 'vegetable meal' they can list on the source tag cotton-seed meal, coco-bean meal, and tobacco stems. I am endeavoring to clear up this point. If the fertilizer contains cottonseed meal, it must be listed by that name. The same applies to coco-bean meal and tobacco stems."

In his original circular to the fertilizer manufacturers, the commissioner called attention to the fact that the companies must put no printed matter on the tax-paid tags issued by the State Department of Agriculture.

"I am very much gratified," concluded Commissioner Graham, "at the spirit shown by a large majority of the fertilizer companies in acquiescing to the new rules. A cooperative spirit on their part will, naturally, make enforcement much easier and will eliminate what might otherwise be disagreeable situations, as the rules will be rigidly enforced."

LAUDS PRESS FOR SAFETY PUBLICATION

Says Newspapers Have Cut Down the Number of Accidents.

The NEA Servicepaper. Newspaper readers have a greater chance of crossing the street safely than any other class, according to statistics presented by G. E. Wallis, research director of the Page Fence & Wire Products Association, Chicago, before the public education session of the fourteenth National Safety Congress at Cleveland.

As the result of publicity voluntarily given by the press on matters of public safety, the automobile casualty age is gradually shifting from the age period of active life to the non-newspaper reading age prior to 15 and to the ages beyond middle life where physical infirmities contribute to the accident hazards, Wallis says.

Only 30 per cent. of the fatal accidents to pedestrians are estimated to have occurred to the newspaper reading class of so-called active age. Approximately 42 per cent. have occurred to children under 15 years and 28 per cent. to adults over 34, Mr. Wallis said further:

"The interest taken by the American press in the education of the public in the prevention of automobile and traffic accidents is the outstanding public safety contribution of the past few years."

The amount of news space devoted to the automobile accident problem during an average month of the past year, if published in a single edition, would require an eight-column newspaper of approximately 500 pages, Wallis said.

Here and there since the jury returned its verdict there has been voiced the suggestion that Miss Cole's letters to Bill Ormond should be made public. Rev. Mr. Ormond, father of the slain man, says they will not be published.
