Al Smith and the State.
Charlotte Observer.
Will the Democrats of North Carolina accept Al Smith, of New York, as their candidate for President? If the answer were left to the leaders of the party it might be in the affirmative, but how about the people? The leaders are in for strategy; the people, however, have an eye more particularly for party principle. In the existing state of the party mind, there might be a revolt in case of the Smith nomination, for there has been no perceptible change in Democratic sentiment throughout the State in regard to the Smith possibility, since the famous New York Convention. But it appears a certainty that the party in this State is going to face the necessity of indicating its appraisal of Smith for the presidential nomination. Brook Barkley, in a Raleigh dispatch yesterday, told of the buzzing in the atmosphere at that center of the Smith bee, Mayor Walker's invasion of the South carries with it its own interpretation. His undertaking is to blaze a way through the South for Smith. The Walker mission was of easy interpretation in the North. The Philadelphia Record lays down the proposition that "the South is Democratic, but it dislikes Tammany Hall." Then it lines out the prospect this way: with the prestige of 748,000 votes behind him Mayor-elect Walker is going to Atlanta with the reported intention of seeking peace between the Northern and Southern Democratic camps. The South got very enthusiastic over Mr. McAdoo, of California, for the presidential nomination last year, while Tammany would hear of no one but the invincible Al Smith, wherefore both of them were beaten, and, perhaps, as a result thereof, the candidate upon whom the convention compromised was defeated. "If," says The Record, "Mr. Walker is really the dove of peace who hopes to harmonize Tammany and the Solid South and achieve victory in 1928 he is engaged in a work of high import."
Manifestly the battle of the future in North Carolina Democratic circles is to wage around how many Smith delegates his crowd can muster up for the National Convention, and how many the anti-Smith faction can develop in a countering movement. That is the point around which the North Carolina political battle is to be fought.

ROTARIANS PAY HONOR TO JUDGE J. M. OGLESBY

Elect Him Honorary Member at the Weekly Meeting—Armistice Day Program Meeting.
Concord Rotarians at their weekly meeting at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday paid honor to Judge John M. Oglesby by electing him honorary member of the club, heard an inspiring Armistice Day talk by Prof. Shipp Webb and gave careful thought to an address by T. R. Lewis, who viewed with alarm the growth of crime in the United States.

Judge Oglesby was one of the charter members of the Rotary Club and when appointed to the bench was serving the club as secretary. He was elected an honorary member in recognition of his work for the club and the honor that has come to him in his appointment to the Superior Court bench.
Prof. Webb made an inspiring talk on the significance of Armistice Day, paying due homage to the memory of Woodrow Wilson for his part in the formation of the League of Nations which bids fair to prevent wars in the future. While the United States has not yet joined the League of Nations, Prof. Webb stated, that organization is functioning with power, and the League treaty, which binds four powerful nations together to protect the boundaries of each against invasion from the other, is based on the principle laid down by President Wilson—that right will prevail and that the nations of the earth must agree to settle their differences by arbitration and not by warfare.

Dr. Lewis, who spent the summer in the east and north, spoke interestingly of his visit to other clubs, and concluded his talk with a warning against practices that allow criminals to escape punishment through sentiment or court technicalities. He cited a case where a man was indicted for stealing a cow, but was acquitted when it was shown that it was a bull he had stolen. Many prisoners escape punishment they deserve, he said, because the public does not back the court in its work.

ROME CHURCH KILLED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

Accident Occurred on the Kannapolis Highway When Church Stepped From Behind Car Into Path of Another.

Rome Church, traveling salesman for an egg-laying company, was killed yesterday afternoon in Kannapolis when struck by an automobile driven by E. E. Kintner, of Ohio. The accident occurred on the main highway in Kannapolis at a point near the Cannon Manufacturing Company.
Kintner was held until Coroner Joe A. Hartsell held an inquest over the body, but when evidence presented to the jury indicated that the accident was unavoidable, he was released.
According to eyewitnesses, Kintner had just stepped from his car into the road when struck. He parked his car on the side of the road and stepped around in front of it just as Kintner drove up. He received injuries that proved fatal in a few minutes.

The Macdonald Highlanders.
Featured with the Macdonald Highlanders band that is coming to Concord on Friday, November 13th, matinee and night at the Concord Theatre is Ernest Steel, Scotch tenor or Aberdeen, Scotland. This artist has a large program of Scotch songs that have been heard by many of you when Harry Lauder toured this country on several occasions. Mr. Steel presents his numbers in a manner that pleases everyone and is bound to keep you in good humor by his funny impressions of the Scotch songs of the present and past.

Another big favorite with the Highlanders band is Miss Gertrude Douglass, bag piper and Scottish dancer. Her various steps that she executes are of her own original idea and in addition to her Scotch dances gives several renditions on the bagpipes that are sure to keep audiences interested.

John J. Heney, xylophone soloist, with the band, is one of the fastest xylophone players in the country. His wide program of classics and popular music enables him to entertain the public as it likes to be entertained, namely with a variety of the difficult passages from the large overtures to the symphonic arrangements of the real up-to-date popular music. Every band carries a cornet soloist and in Mr. J. Knuteman, cornetist with the Highlanders, Mr. Macdonald, director of this band claims to have one of the finest soloists in this respective instrument in the country.

Mr. Tom Devany, trombone, ranks amongst the leading trombone soloists with the country, having played with Creator, Sousa, Conway and many other bands of renown.

The concert to be held here will start at 3:30 in the afternoon and at 8:30 in the evening.

The smallest Catholic church in the world is on the old Palo Alto plantation in Louisiana. The chapel is large enough for a small altar and standing room for the priest celebrating mass. The congregation occupies benches outside of the chapel.

MAX GARDNER FAVORS AUSTRALIAN BALLOT

Demands in Plain Language the Greensboro Secret Ballot.

Greensboro yesterday halted work and play to render its tribute to the dead of the world war, not in sorrow but in "sweet, tender recollection," a city straight in proudful honor of the gallant fallen, a city tooting to remind itself of the debt due those who died with flowers for their graves, enjoy of them, and the living being urged to "live for your country."

Real observance of the day here centered around the memorial services in the National theater, where Max Gardner made a great tribute to the dead and appealed to the living to so live that community, state and nation be better places. He endorsed Calvin Coolidge's world war record; praised the administrations of the late Governor Bickett and former Governor Morrison as the golden age in North Carolina, and came out with an unqualified declaration for the Australian ballot.

There was a hint as to present governmental policies in North Carolina. There has been no reduction of the potential horsepower of the engine of progress, he said, but there must be control as well as power. He said the situation now is one foot on the accelerator and the other close to the brakes, but there is as much danger in too much breaking as in too much uncontrolled power. Rightly used, no power can stop the state from going forward, he said.

Vote was his advice. He would make voting compulsory, make it a crime not to vote. Here he declared for the Australian ballot.

"We shall not rest content without material, social and educational progress. In a modern democracy the life of a people is expressed at the ballot box. The boasted scepter and crown of a free people is an untrammeled ballot. Our elections have been as free from corruption and injustice as human nature and partisan feeling will permit, but I am convinced that the time has come when she should stand abreast of our sister commonwealths and offer to the electorate of North Carolina a secret ballot in conformity to the Australian law.

"My feeling is that we should maintain an election law so fair and free and just that it will secure beyond the shadow of a doubt an unchallenged expression of a popular will. I therefore urge the American people to throw the weight of its powerful influence to the enactment by our general assembly of the Australian ballot."

He ended with an appeal for going forward; if there must be partisan ship to let it be without personal abuse, to work together for a better state and more glorious nation.
