WILKINSON-GREEN WEDDING WEDNESDAY

Feature of Week's Social Affairs in the City—Miss Miller to Entertain Bridal Party.

The feature of the week's society in Concord is the marriage of Miss Virginia Wilkinson to Stove Green, which will be solemnized at St. James Lutheran Church Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. L. A. Thomas, pastor of the bride, will officiate.

The wedding music will be rendered by Miss Helen Misenheimer, of Winston, and Miss Lois Crowell will sing.

Miss Winifred Gann, of Savannah, is to be the maid of honor. Mrs. Arthur A. Edgeworth, of Monroe, is matron of honor.

Bridesmaids are Miss Nell Green, of Gastonia, sister of the groom, and Miss Margaret Miller.

Master Jimmie Corzine, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Corzine, will be the ring bearer.

Lewis Muggrove, of Charlotte, will act as best man to Mr. Green.

Groomsman are Leigh Colyer, of Charlotte, and William Bennett, of Wadesboro.

The ushers will be E. F. White, Jr., Max Wadlock and Miles Wolf, all of Concord, and Martin Meltae, of Wadesboro.

Miss Margaret Miller will entertain the bridal party after rehearsal to-night at her home on South Spring street.

Meeting of Missionary Society.

The Agnes Penick Missionary Society of the Rocky River Presbyterian Church met last Thursday at the manse with Mrs. T. H. Spence hostess.

Members of the society spent the day sewing for the hospital at Banner Elk.

Visitors during the day were Dr. and Mrs. Lubencho, of Harrisburg; Miss Margaret Ford, county tuberculosis nurse, and Miss Beulah Courtney, county nurse. Teachers in the Rocky River School were guests of the society at luncheon.

Miss Bertie Dry has returned from Albemarle, where she spent several days as the guest of Miss Venie Maulden.

FORMER CZAR OF K. K. K. IN INDIANA DECLARED GUILTY

D. C. Stephenson Convicted of Second Degree Murder; Two Others Freed.

Noblesville, Ind., Nov. 14.—D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, was guilty by a jury here tonight of second degree murder in connection with the death of Madge Oberholzer, of Indianapolis. Earl Kleck and Earl Gentry, his bodyguards and co-defendants, were found not guilty.

Second degree murder carries the penalty of life imprisonment. The jury had been out five hours and forty minutes.

Judge Will M. Sparks gave the case to the jury at 11:46 o'clock this morning.

Miss Oberholzer took poison following an alleged abduction and died 29 days later.

Stephenson less than a year ago was a political power in Indiana.

According to a dying statement Miss Oberholzer made and which was the foundation of the state's case, she first met Stephenson last January 12th at an inaugural dinner given in honor of Governor Ed Jackson.

Ordinary Meals Made Distinctive by Salads.

A salad that appeals to both eye and palate saves many a luncheon or dinner from being just ordinary. There is zest, and satisfaction too, in a really good salad. It must fit in, of course, with what goes before and after, and besides it must have what might be called a personality of its own—freshness, flavor and color.

Perhaps that is the reason some cooks get poor results from the materials and time they employ in salad making. Good materials—fruits, vegetables, or what not—may easily be spoiled by a poor dressing. Good dressing can be wasted on poor materials. Both materials and dressings may be good and the salad still lack appeal to the eye. One certainly does not eat with his eyes, but the better good tasting food looks the better it really tastes.

There are countless combinations for salads. Some are quickly and easily assembled; others require time and considerable work. For the cook who wants satisfactory results in a minimum of time and with a minimum amount of work the canning industry has provided two special products—mixed fruits and mixed vegetables for salads. That they really meet the cook's needs is shown by the great increase in their production and consumption.

Five years ago fruits for salad were not an item of sufficient importance to be reported upon separately by the Census Bureau. In 1923 over half a million cases, or about 120,000,000 cans, were produced and sold, and each year since that time a still larger amount has been put up. Mixed vegetables, too, have found increasing favor with cooks the country over.

"Legends of the Hopi."

That one may know and understand the ceremonies of this little known tribe of Hopi Indians, I shall give a brief history, such as I believe has never before been published.

These Indians believe that prior to the beginning of their tribe, the face of the earth was covered with water. There came a time when the waters receded. Life beneath the surface heard the Great Spirit knocking on the surface of the earth, signaling life beneath to come forth. The snake, being the first to answer, came out and was changed into human form. They believe every living thing on the face of the earth, in the water and in the air has a soul of its own and a right to live. As man dominates the earth, so does the eagle control the air, hence this symbol is used for the Eagle Club, and is the reason for the eagle weatherers used in head-dress. Therefore the Hopi believe that in the beginning they came from a snake-skin, and that each snake has a soul; but first of all, they believe in the Supreme Being.

Eventually the Hopi were driven into the desert wastes and barren cliffs of Arizona by the ferocious Apache and Tonto tribes, where they built their cliff-dwellings and pueblos. Regardless of what one might have read or may read concerning the cliff-dwellers the Hopi are undoubtedly the original, genuine cliff-dwellers of the North American continent.

On the beliefs I have mentioned, the Hopi religion is based; or in other words, they believe in God and all that is good, and they live it. The name Hopi (pronounced H-pee), translated, means "Peaceful."

At Concord Theatre four days this week—Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Y QUINT ORGANIZES FOR YEAR'S STRUGGLES

Robert Dick Chosen Captain of Team at Practice—Prospects Good For Basketball.

Concord basketballers gathered at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night and completed the organization of the Y team which is to represent the association this year.

Robert Dick, diminutive forward who has speed over the local court for a number of years, was selected captain of the quint and will take the leadership of the locals for his second straight year.

Dick played on the High School team here before going to Davidson College. At the Presbyterian institution, he was considered one of the most promising freshmen prospects and was slated for a position on the varsity but did not return to school.

He has been one of the mainstays of the Concord team since his return to the city, his floor work being of a high order and his goal shooting being accurate.

Prospects for a team this year are very good. Although only one other member of last year's varsity, Miles Wolf, is out for the team, there are some likely looking new members.

In addition to these two letter men, there were two of last year's high school team trying out for the team. They are Livingston Easley and J. F. Harris, both of whom are showing up well. Cole, a stalwart guard, who is a newcomer in the city, made up the fifth in Coach Denny's first team. Clyde Shoaf, of the scrubs, showed up best of the men not placed on the first team.

Practice consisted of goal shooting, floor passing and a brief scrimmage. A schedule of more than unusual difficulty is being arranged for this year.

CHINA GROVE IS PUTTING IN A SEWER SYSTEM

Deep Well Will Furnish the Water For the Growing Town.

China Grove, Nov. 17.—Work is progressing nicely on the contracts for the putting in of water and sewer for the city, with a well now drilling far below the hundred foot line and a contract for the pipe set.

The city will on the 18th sell $75,000 of the $110,000 bonds to take care of the construction.

The well is being put down by Sigmor of Richmond and the contract for the piping for the water and sewer lines has been given to Paul N. Howard, of Greensboro.

One or perhaps two wells will be used to furnish the water and the sewerage will be taken care of by five septic tanks.

The streets will be laid in conjunction with the work being done by the state highway commission on the road from Salisbury to Landis. This street will be of a width varying from 30 to 36 feet.

The work now under way will take care of the demands in the growing town of the southern portion of the county and meet a need that has been growing for some time.

Jas. H. Van Ness Died Monday.

Charlotte Observer. James H. Van Ness, aged 84 years, Confederate veteran, highly and beloved citizen of Charlotte, for 54 years, died Sunday at 4 o'clock at St. Peter's hospital, where he had been a patient for the past six months.

Mr. Van Ness had been in declining health for the past three and a half years, death taking him in striking similarity to his entire life, quietly, peacefully, tranquilly.

Ethel—The bride nearly fainted during the ceremony, and had to be supported by her father until it was over.

Edith—Yes, and now I hear her father has supported both of them since.

An Occasional Column

By MILES WOLFF

Mrs. Sylvia Norman has again brought pressure to bear on her educated typewriter and makes the following contribution:

After perusing our Honored Column Conductor's remarks about an ideal newspaper we feel that we are hardly fitted to appear in his column. Should the tail of his scornful eye see these words they would no doubt wither and become less than the dust.

WELL, WHY DON'T THEY?

Glancing through The Tribune we find a local advertiser advertising a dining room set in glowing terms:

"It is a correct and harmonious reproduction of Chippendale type unusually well built and imposing for the price that is set upon it. We can sell cheaper."

DID YOU THINK THAT I LOVED YOU?

Did you think that I loved you
Ho ho, funny man
Because perhaps I kissed you
As only I can?

Ah, no. I love oysters!
And up-to-date jazz,
The rustle and bustle
A theatre has

The whir of the motor
As an up grade we take
And the kiss of the sun
On a blue morning lake.

But you—
Why my dear
Don't you know that your hair
Is leaving your head
—One by one—
Shiny and bare!

RAIN! RAIN! COME AGAIN.

We certainly apologize for our disparaging remarks about the rain. Since September the rain has aggravated us continually by removing all traces of the curling from our hair. So no wonder our disposition was warped to such an extent that we did not realize that, in this country, our arch enemy is the GREAT GOD RAIN.

THE CITY.

Darkness wrapped her sheltering cloak About the shining city
And though Night hid her strong young form,
Above her restless feet, so pretty,
I saw the lovely spangles gleam
The yellow lights of which men dream
A faery thing, the city
A beauty without pity—
But in swift mood and change
The lure of all things strange.

Occasional Column readers will be delighted to learn that Mrs. Norman has agreed to make other contributions to this department during her visit to Concord. She will write more in an early issue.

It seems to me that in recent weeks, Mrs. Richmond Reed, who, by the way, is my favorite librarian, has added some treasures to the list of books in the local emporium of culture. Her efforts to acquire something good and at the same time something interesting have not been in vain.

There are two books to which I wish to call particular attention. Although very different, I found both fascinating.

"The Red Lamp" is the first. It is positively thrilling. The more one reads it, the more one is gripped by the story until the volume has been finished. It is mystery from beginning to end, and is one of the few books of its type that does not leave the reader with a flat feeling when completed. For days it leaves its impress on the person who has just completed its pages.

I started reading it one night when all alone in my ancestral domicile. The fig bush just outside of the living room swayed slightly in the fitful wind which was blowing scratching the window pane ever and anon. There was a slight rustling among the falling leaves in the yard. With such a setting I started it. Ere I had read forty-five pages, I began to slightly quiver, to start at the scratching of the fig tree, to listen for other noises. I gave up. Dashing out of the house, I sought companionship in a bridge game and waited until the next afternoon to read it again.

So engrossed had I become by the next night that all the noises in and about the household failed to stop me but I read solidly until the last page had been absorbed.

I had a raging headache the next day.

I shall not tell you of the plot of the book. It is far too good for me to spoil by trying to give you an idea about it. My suggestion is to read it for yourself. By the way, better read it in the afternoon, if possible, when you will have company at night. I saw Red Lamps for nights thereafter.

The other book is "The Professor's House." It is more the study of character than a narration of incident. The author writes in a clear, forceful style which is most entrancing. She merely gives hints as to characters, for the most part, and forces us to be content with the details of only the professor's life and Tom Outland's life, the latter of whom was dead before the book opens.

Outland's money, left to the professor's daughter, has a strange influence on the entire family and on the professor himself. The strange turn of events in the latter part of the book, the stranger ending of the book, all add to the charm of the volume, even though they do leave the reader with a slightly unsatisfied feeling.

One unique feature of "The Proessor's House" is the strange setting of Tom Outland's story in the middle of the book and breaking the thread of the other narrative. Most authors would have placed this in the beginning.

The first book is by Mary Roberts Rinehart and the second "The Professor's House" is by Willa Catha.
