KANNAPOLIS BOYS TO GO ON EUROPEAN TOUR

Plans Maturing For the Third World Friendship Trip—Cabarrus, Y. M. C. A. Sends Three Members.
BY JAZZY MOORE

Kannapolis, Nov. 24.—Three boys from Cabarrus county are being considered as possible members of the Third World Friendship Tour, to be conducted through ten foreign countries next summer under the auspices of the National Council of the Young Men's Christian Association. It was announced today by John S. Carpenter, general secretary of the Cabarrus Y. M. C. A. Forty boys from nearly forty states will be accommodated this year, as against twenty from eleven states in 1925.

The boys selected will be divided into two groups of twenty each. One group, to be gone ten weeks, will sail from New York in June and visit ten countries. The other, which will be away five weeks, will attend the World Y. M. C. A. conference at Helsingfors, where two thousand persons from about fifty countries, three hundred of them boys under twenty-one, will meet to discuss world problems.

"Efforts will be made to have the tours as representative as possible," said Mr. Carpenter. "Four negro boys will be included among the forty tourists, and, if possible, one American Indian. The boys must be of high character and outstanding qualities of leadership. It is obvious, of course, that many applicants of good standing and eligibility will have to be rejected, since the size of each group is limited."

The longer of the two tours, called the A-1 tour, will leave New York on June 26 and will return September 1. Visits to England, Belgium, France, Germany, Holland, Sweden, Finland, and Denmark will be included. From July 31 to August 7 the party will be at Helsingfors, where, with members of the shorter tour, they will camp with boys of foreign countries and attend special boys' meetings.

It is expected that in many of the countries visited prominent officials will greet the American boys. This past summer, the Y. M. C. A. party was received by many officials, including Dr. Michael Hainisch, president of Austria, who presented each boy with a large autographed photograph.

The chief idea of the World Friendship Tours is "to promote a better understanding among the nations of the world, through introducing their youth to one another before they have reached the age where thoughtless prejudice sets in," according to J. A. Van Dis, of the national council, who has conducted the tours in the past.

George White's Scandals.
How would you like to be the official sphenaker to four dozen dainty Cinderellas? Such is the unusual position of one Wellington Ward, of Devonshire, England, who is now in America ministering to the shoe needs of the famous beauty choruses. It was seen with George White's Scandals of 1924, coming to the Charlotte Auditorium on Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, November 26, matinee and night.

It is Ward's sole task to provide the necessary footwear worn on the stage by the feminine contingent of the "Scandals." And may be he hasn't got some job. The exceedingly high import duty on the finished English boot product is the direct cause of his being in this country. It is figured a big saving in footwear will be made by having the unfinished product imported and completed at Ward's plant in New York, after which they are reshipped to the members of the choruses, as needed, on tour.

The George White feminine beauties require a specific type of dancing slipper that cannot be duplicated in America, and owing to the peculiar nature of their dance performances the girls need slipper replacements at surprisingly frequent intervals. Working eight hours a day, it takes Ward, who is an skilled shoemaker of some twenty years or more experience, approximately a full month to turn out the requisite four dozen pairs of dancing slippers of the special design, with sizes and construction varying according to the individual measurements of the youthful feet.

The George White Scandals of 1924 will be in two acts and thirty lavish scenes. The costumes, stage decorations and curtains used in the revue were made in Paris by Max Weldy, from designs furnished by Erte.

A Word of Appreciation.
To my many friends in the city of Concord and over that part of Cabarrus county which I canvassed in the recent Tribune-Times Automobile Contest, I wish to express my sincere thanks. I appreciate more than I can express, the interest each one of you has shown in me besides giving me your subscriptions.

I feel that my largest reward is not the $200 cash prize I have won, but in the large list of new friends I have made during this contest. And while I am defeated so far as an automobile is concerned, I am not defeated in the larger and richer things, the acquisitions of friendships, for these will be fresh and good when the automobile is worn out and gone. And this fact helps to enable me to hold up my head and smile, and say "the will of the Lord be done" in the face of defeat.

Sincerely,
E. MYERS.

No measure taken by the new government in Turkey can be regarded as half so radical as the order for the Turks to discard the fez for the hat of western Europe. For centuries, so tenaciously have the Turks hated the head covering of Europe that a common way to accuse a Turk of infidelity to Islam has been to nail a hat to his door.

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPH EXPLAINED AS FAKE

Picture of Firemen Shown in New York Made in Chicago, Dr. Prince Tells the Scientific American.
New York World.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, lecturing on spiritualism in this city once, showed his audience a picture of 12 firemen in Chicago against a background of smoke under the impression that he was exhibiting a remarkable spirit photograph, writes Dr. Walter Franklin Prince, widely known investigator of supernatural phenomena, in the current issue of the Scientific American.

Dr. Prince, whose article, "My Doubts About Spirit Photographs," is described as a scientific answer to Conan Doyle's recent "The Case for Spirit Photographs," explains that he is telling for the first time how the noted spiritualist was fooled by a fake.

Adopted as Spirit Photograph.
"At a lecture in New York," the investigator writes, "Doyle showed a picture of a dozen firemen who perished in a Chicago fire, thrown on a background of smoke from the burning building. He admitted that he did not know the history of the picture but it looked so much like the famous Cenotaph spirit photograph that he adopted it."

"I recognized it at once as a fake made by a Chicago photographer to show what could be done. I saved the lecturer from repeating his blunder and would not tell the story now had Doyle not become so bitter against spiritualism since Conan Doyle's exposure to the public which thinks the inventor of an impossible fiction detective must himself be a good detective."

Dr. Prince begins his article with the statement: "I do not deny that there are spirit photographs, but they are not of pronounced character."

Attacks English Picture.
He attacks first what Conan Doyle has said is the most remarkable spirit photograph that he ever has seen. It was taken by two English big mediums in a spiritualist church in England. At the top is a male figure with long beard and one hand extended with fingers spread. Flanking this are several small nude child forms. The "ectoplasm" lies about thickly.

The mother of the photographs, a medium, said the adult figure was that of St. John the Evangelist, who at times was her guide. Four other mothers recognized their children in the four baby forms.

Not a National Gallery.
"Do London spiritualists never visit their national gallery?" asks Dr. Prince. "There hung, and I suppose hangs now, the original of the picture of 'St. John' and the four recognized children, unannounced and unexplained. Am I the first to discover that the upper two-fifths of a print of Murillo's 'Holy Family' is which furnished the basis of this 'spirit' photograph?"

"The 'St. John' was meant by the artist for the Deity, the four recognized children are the cherubs, common in such pictures two and a half centuries ago, the dove has been blotting out 'ectoplasm,' and the lower half of the picture, cut away. But I will not dispute that is the best spirit photograph ever."

Dr. Prince's article follows tests made by the Scientific American of the claims of many spirit mediums, the last one to be examined by the publication's committee, of which Dr. Prince was a member, being Mrs. L. Crandon, more widely known as "Margery," wife of a Boston physician.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS.
New York Mirror.

My girl friend and I were in a theatre one evening when a young fellow entered and occupied the seat beside me. He was handsome and soon I grew interested in him. Within an hour, thinking I took my friend's arm, I said: "Dotty, don't look now, but isn't the fellow beside me handsome?" Imagine my embarrassment when I had taken the fellow's arm instead of the girl's.

Stranger—And how about your memory?
Oldest Inhabitant—As good as the day I was born.

I was in Manila where street cars are divided into first and second class. First-class fare is six cents and second-class five cents. One morning I hurried to my office with only a nickel in my pocket. As I boarded the second class I discovered, to my horror, that a girl I had danced with the night before was beckoning to me from the first-class. I didn't have the price to join her.

My boss absolutely forbids the girls to enter the luncheon adjoining our office during business hours. One afternoon I took the opportunity, when my boss left the office, to go into the luncheon room. Upon sitting at a table I found my employer across the table.

Every night I place my money under my pillow. Yesterday I forgot to take it when I was going to business. I went to lunch at the usual time, and when I went to pay my check, I found that I had forgotten to bring my money. The manager compelled me to leave my gold watch as deposit until I could return with the money.

A friend of mine sold me two theatre tickets for a benefit which was to take place in the near future. I overlooked the date of the performance and took a friend to the theatre. After presenting the tickets, the doorman shouted, "What's this. These tickets were for last night." I never felt more embarrassed.

The western league managers will get together for their winter meeting at Kansas City, on November 30th.

BANDITS RIFLE CASH REGISTER IN CAFE

Order Proprietor, Waiter and Customer to Throw Hands Up; Get $138.

Charlotte, Nov. 23.—Police were searching tonight for two fashionably dressed bandits who staged a bold holdup Sunday night at 11:45 o'clock in the Little Rock Cafe, Tryon street.

At the point of revolvers, they held off one of the proprietors, a waiter and three customers, looted the cash register of $138 in cash and quickly made their getaway in automobiles.

Five customers including the two bandits, seated at tables in the cafe were munching sandwiches. R. M. White, one of the owners, of the establishment, was in the cafe. George McSwain, a waiter was serving the customers.

Suddenly the two whipping out revolvers, sprang to their feet, leveling the weapons on the others and shouted almost in concert: "Hands up." Ten hands went up. The men got away in an auto waiting outside the cafe.

An examination was proceeding in the class room.

Inspector: "Can any boy tell me what comes in like a lion and goes out like a lamb?"

Silence prevailed for a few minutes, then a piping voice from the back: "Our landlord, when he gets the back rent."

A VISION OF LIFE.
BY ISABELLA McSPARREN.

Only a bundle of fagots.
Broken and twisted in turn;
Laid in pile for the lighter.
High and straight let it burn.

I can see the fine wood,
Made by the Master so keen—
Torn in the middle and severed.
'Twisted unfit to be seen.

Thus does life with her subjects
Life, when its heart's sick and sore;
Each piece twisted and wasted,
With so much of promise before.

Broken by word and action,
Broken and misunderstood;
Laid on a heap at angles
Like so much kindling wood.
