to women nobody knows. Ordinary observation, however, convinces one that cigarette smoking by women is becoming more prevalent with every passing year. The slender, delicately formed lady's cigarettes, are no longer affected by the girls of today.

No one can deny that Mr. Werner is right. His statements cannot be successfully contradicted. Women go into the drug stores and get the favorite brands just as the men do.

Eighteen years ago, we are told, the production of cigars and cigarettes ran neck and neck about 7,000,000. Now about the same number of cigars are being made while the production of cigarettes has increased to 75,000,000,000.

NEGRO BAND IN SWINDLE GAME

Work the Old Scheme of Dividing Contents of Found Pocket Book. Monroe, Nov. 30.—Seeking to recover $80 of which he had been swindled, Sam Howie, an old gray headed negro farmer of Union County, Friday turned the light on the deeds of a party of strange negroes, which gave the police department of Monroe some lively chases last Wednesday afternoon.

This unique organization, which is made up of a few black negro, a tall brown skin negro, two other negro men and a negro woman, has been pulling some clever tricks on the members of their race.

Wednesday old Sam Howie was talking to a likely young negro who had assisted him in selling a bale of cotton, when in their sight another negro picked up a pocketbook. Uncle Sam and his new friend being the only ones to see him find it, it was decided to divide the money and all play shut mouth.

Except for Clarence Brown, who was caught here last Wednesday, the members of the gang are at large. It seems that they could not stand the sight of a uniform, and when Chief Spoon gave chase to two of them, they all ran in a different direction.

COLE BLEASE TO START NEWSPAPER OF HIS OWN

Will Edit and Publish Weekly at Anderson.—Spartan Devoted to Political Discussion. Anderson, S. C., Nov. 30.—Senator Cole L. Blease will begin the publication of a weekly newspaper, Blease's Weekly, on December 10th.

The new publication will be a full sized seven-column paper and will be devoted to frank and candid discussion of political and government affairs of the nation.

Senator Blease's opinion on matters pertaining to national and international affairs will be featured in the weekly, which will be sold for $2 a year.

Much interest has been aroused over the announcement that Mr. Blease would give the people of South Carolina and elsewhere his views each week through a newspaper of his own.

It is believed that the new paper will be given a warm welcome in his state, as Mr. Blease's friends will gladly hail its appearance as a free lance independently published organ expressing Mr. Blease's ideas, after the manner used by the late Senator T. M. Watson, of Georgia, whose paper was for years a favorite in that state and over adjoining states.

It is announced that sample copies will be mailed persons who request them while the subscription books of the paper are open and many subscriptions have been received.

Copyright 1924-25, P. P. Collier & Son Co. and G. P. Putnam's Sons. "BOBBED HAIR" with Marie Prevost is a dramatization of this story by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

By midnight Conemaure Moore was to announce her engagement to one of two suitors or be disinherited by Aunt Celimena. Instead she is now speeding through Greenwich, miles from home, at the side of young David Lacy of New York, whom she didn't know but whom she hailed as he was passing aunt's. And so a traffic cop has halted them and threatened to arrest them for speeding. And Connie, garbed as a nun, is pleading for mercy. At Aunt Celimena's home, miles back in Connecticut, excitement runs high.

CHAPTER III—Continued. In the reflected glow the face of the policeman altered its expression slowly. It ran from anger, through surprise to bewilderment. Still Lacy could not see her face, yet from the effect upon the policeman he understood that it was no ordinary face. An ordinary face couldn't possibly have had such an effect.

"It's not a mask I'm wearing," Again she was interrupted, this time by a sneeze so violent and so realistic that Lacy was tempted to slap her regardless of her dignified robes, well in the middle of the back. "It's not a mask I'm wearing," and again a sneeze. "It's a thing—a sort of thing to keep out the dust. I suffer so from hay fever."

The cop yielded, but he was cynical. "Well, it sounds fishy to me, but I guess it's all right. But look out for Hogan at the Portchester line. He won't let you off so easy."

Lacy started the motor, and when he turned again, the face of his companion was once more hidden by the mask. She was sneezing delicately this time, with just the proper effect. The car moved off.

CHAPTER IV

By Elsie Janis. In the two hours following that brief, altogether unsatisfactory talk with her niece, Miss Celimena was guilty of forgetting several times the rigid code of hospitality in which she had been trained and staring openly and anxiously at the painted face of the big grandfather clock in the hall.

If she could have done it without being seen, it is not at all certain she would not also have gone so far as to push the hands forward, to lessen the sheer nervous torture of those dragging minutes until midnight.

This latest escapade of Conemaure's was not only utter foolishness, but it made the girl and Miss Celimena herself seem undignified. It was unthinkable that a Moore of Moorelands should resort to such cheap buffoonery for the announcing of her engagement—which ought, properly, to be a serious, not to say ceremonious occasion. Thus, over and over, back and forth in the same track, like frightened and ferbly indignant mice, ran the thoughts of Miss Celimena.

And even oftener than she studied the clock, this much-harassed lady studied the faces of the two other people most concerned in Conemaure's outrageous behavior.

It was easy to see that Saltonstall Adams had little liking for the sudden blaze of limelight in which he found himself. Salt, like Miss Celimena, had been brought up to see dignity weigh much more heavily in the scales than romance. Or perhaps his definition of what constituted romance differed from spoiled young Conemaure's. At any rate, as any and everyone could see, he looked very stiff and disapproving indeed as he danced, correctly and dutifully, with one after another of Conemaure's guests, gallantly trying to live up to what was expected of him, but—as only the discerning noticed—with a faintly wistful bewilderment underlying the disapproval, as if his rather slow brain had not entirely caught up with the meaning of what was happening to him.

Bingham Carrington, on the contrary, was carrying the awkward situation off with a high hand. Inwardly he resented it, if possible, even more bitterly than his rival, for Bingham was an emotional youngster and very genuinely in love. But he held his handsome blond head well back, with his chin lifted a half inch or so more than usual, and had a drawn come-back for every inuendo of the over-curious.

DINNER STORIES

After many conferences had been held by the board of directors of a small town bank about buying a new water cooler, a grouchy old member said this to say:

"Gentlemen, before we adjourn, I move that our next conference be held on a merry-go-round."

As they looked at him in astonishment, he added the tag of explanation: "We never get anywhere."

He—Why do you stare at me? She—Father said you are a self-made man.

He—Well? She—I'm wondering why you made yourself like that.

New Clerk (to office boy)—I don't like this job. At the last place I could take things easy.

Office Boy—Then it must be hard on you here. We keep all valuables in the safe.

Mrs. Smith: "I don't see why mothers can not see the faults in their children."

Mrs. Jones: "Do you think you could?" Mrs. Smith: "Yes, if my children had any."

Johnnie: "Father, I can't get those arithmetical problems. Teacher said something about the greatest common divisor."

Father: "Great Scott! Haven't they found that yet? They were looking for it when I was a boy."

"Your wife looks stunning tonight. Her gown is a poem," replied the poet.

"What do you mean, poem?" replied the straggling author. "That gown is two poems and a short story."

NEW PREHISTORIC FORT IS FOUND IN KENTUCKY

Occupies Crescent Shaped Mountain Top.—Is Accessible Only by Two Creeks. Lexington, Ky., Nov. 30.—A prehistoric fort has just been discovered by Prof. W. G. Burroughs, of Berea College, in the southeastern part of Madison county, it was announced today. This fort is not the one described in despatches of November 8th.

In the new fort an unusual number of caves were found with striking indications of their use by a prehistoric people. The fort covers the flat top of a rough crescent-shaped mountain 600 feet above the valley and bordered with cliffs which in some places have a sheer drop of 200 feet. In other places, after a steep climb up a slope a limestone cliff rises vertically fifty feet and above it is another steep slope surrounded by a forty-foot cliff of sandstone.

Access to the top of the fort is possible only at the east and west ends of the crescent by working up through crevices two and a half feet wide, with slopes of 80 degrees. On the north side a narrow break in the cliff occurs, but it would have been impossible for an enemy to climb it in face of arrows or stones from the defenders on the summit.

On the south side, halfway along the mountain, a ravine breaks the continuity of the precipice. Here is a barricade of rocks, piled together and forming an inverted Y-shaped wall.

An Arcadian Print Shop. Union Republic. Yes sir, we have it right here in North Carolina, a real Arcadia, where even the smell of tobacco smoke is taboo, the chewing of the plug is a crime and as for rubbing snuff any man in that office caught in such a disrespectful practice would be electrocuted on the spot.

This wonderful place is located in no other spot than in Union, sweet Union, in the city of Monroe, laid out during the "era of good feeling" and named for the illustrious gentleman responsible for that era, James Monroe.

What if everybody in the world were like Eugene Ashcraft and his co-workers, Willie Correll, Louie Hart, Hugh Smith and last but not least the black "devil" of the shop, Abe Carless, what would become of Winston-Salem, Durham, Wilson, Greenville, Kingston, Danville and lesser cities galore who depend on the tobacco sold there for their business?

What would become of the great plant of the Reynolds company in this city if everybody was like the Monroe Equivocal force?

And what would become of that great army of farmers who depend on the tobacco grown on their hill-sides for their money crop, aye some of this very weed grown in the sandy loam of Uni in county and what would become of all these men who labor by the sweat of their face if they were all like the Equivocal Arcadians? Perish the thought.
