OUTEST THINGS.

New York Mirror. Four year old Helen had been refused a third helping of turkey and began to cry. Her mother wishing to cheer her, said, "Here's the wish-bone, let's make a wish." Helen joyfully pulled the longer piece. "How lucky," said her mother, "and now what is your wish?" "More turkey, please mother," came the prompt answer. Little Mary was left in charge of the house while her mother went shopping. On her return mother asked her if a man called with a bill. "No, mother," replied Mary, "he had a nose like the rest of us." Hostess (at party)—Does your mother allow you to have two pieces of pie when you are at home, Willie? Willie—No, ma'am. Hostess—Well, do you think she would like it if I gave you two pieces? Willie—Oh, she wouldn't mind, this isn't her pie. Little Willie was sent by his step-mother to a butcher shop. "My little man, what would you wish?" asked the butcher. "Oh, I think I want something real nice for dinner," replied Willie, hesitatingly. "I have some steak as tender as a woman's heart," replied the butcher proudly. "Gimme sausage!" replied Willie decisively. Teacher—Johnny, did you see the reindeer? Johnny—No, it hasn't rained in two weeks. Little Harry—My father is a broker. What does yours do? Grace—Whatever mother tells him. The subject of the Sunday school lesson was, "Whatever a man soweth so shall he reap." Little Alice was asked the text upon returning home. Her reply was, "Whatever a man sews always rips."

SAY IT—

New York Mirror. Say it with a shovel and bury your troubles. Say it with a dinner; you've got the roll. Say it with cards and have a heart. Say it with coal and get in soft. Say it with a hat and get trimmed. Say it with fingers; you're dumb. Say it with a white mule and get a kick out of it. Say it with a lantern and light out. Say it with cream and get whipped. Say it with a ruler and go straight. Say it with cabbage; you'll get ahead. Say it with claims and be a little necker. Say it with a hammer and make a hit. Say it with coffee, you've got the grounds. Say it with checkers and make a move. Say it with balloons and give 'em up in the air. Say it with rouge and make up. Say it with alcohol and rub it in. Say it with radio and get "Alice. Where Art Thou?" by a coloratura soprano. Say it with garlic and have a whole train to yourself. Post and Flagg's Cotton Letter. New York, Dec. 2.—The cotton market today has had a very good undertone although business has been light with scalping and switching operations predominating. A favorable weekly weather report encouraged some local selling and sentiment was rather bearish in anticipation of increased crop estimates. On each dip, however, a good demand appeared and Liverpool was a buyer of October so that the local selling ran into support which caused a covering movement later in the day. Reports from the southwest are quite bullish in regard to both the grade and amount of cotton that has been picked and what remains in the field. There also appears to be a tremendous amount of price fixing still to bedone in December and May. Although sentiment is generally bearish purchases on declines are recommended as general trade conditions are improving. POST AND FLAGG.

When winter's snow is falling outside—and the noise of wind roars through the trees—when the house is dark but for the blazing logs in the fireplace—have a Camel!

No other cigarette in the world is like Camels. Camels contain the choicest Turkish and domestic tobaccos. The Camel blend is the triumph of expert blenders. Even the Camel cigarette paper is the finest—made especially in France. Into this one brand of cigarettes is concentrated the experience and skill of the largest tobacco organization in the world.

WHEN it's a winter night and the day that was busy is done. And outside the snow is driving through the trees before the wind. When, inside, the crackling logs catch fire and burst into flames above the hearth—have a Camel!

For Camel is the tried and trusted friend of millions of experienced smokers. Whether your returning steps bring you home tired or jubilant, no sweeter, more mellow fragrance ever came to you from a cigarette. There's not a cigarettey after-taste, not a tired taste in a whole country full of Camels. Only mild and mellow flavor, deep-down contentment in your home or any home where Camels are lighted.

So this night, before your roaring logs of oak or hickory—have a Camel. Open up the famous package of Camels and know the fragrance, the contentment that brings happiness to millions. Put a Camel between you and a light and taste the mellowest, most delectable blend ever made into a cigarette.

Have a Camel!

Our highest wish, if you do not yet know Camel quality, is that you try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any cigarette made at any price. R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS.

New York Mirror. The ocean had been cold and to warm up we started a game of tag in which we were joined by a girl I knew slightly and a very stout man. After watching him chasing some of his slimmer pals I remarked to this girl, "Who is that young man, he's so fat he is getting in his own way." I decided to go swimming again when she informed me that he was her brother.

It was the night before Thanksgiving and we were making preparations. I had a quarrel with my friend John. As I strolled along the hall I saw a man walking in front of me whom I took to be a friend. I walked along beside him and did not spare John in my discourse. After some time my friend unmasked and to my great embarrassment I discovered that it was John, the boy whom I had so mercilessly criticised.

I was dressed as Pierette at a Masque Ball and danced with a handsome Pierrot. While sitting on a balcony, under a romantic moon we kissed and I promised to marry him. We both unmasked and sat speechless for opposite me sat my brother.

The most embarrassing moment in my life was at a wedding party. I told a gentleman friend of mine that I had been admired by everyone, especially by one man who never took his eyes off me. I described the man and asked him if he knew him. "Why, yes,"

I do," he answered. "He is a detective and was here to watch the wedding gifts."

One evening I was out walking with a girl friend when two men came along and walked in front of us. I thought one of them resembled my brother-in-law and, walking over to him, pulled his hat down over his eyes. To my surprise I found that he was a stranger.

Having a striking resemblance to my twin brother, I once escorted a young lady on a shopping tour. When she had her purchases completed the salesman asked me when I intended to pay the balance on my wife's fur coat. That was the most embarrassing moment in my life, as it took me some time to convince them that it was my brother who was their debtor.

What the World Is Doing As Seen by Popular Mechanics Magazine

Flying a "Drinking-Cup" Kite Flying kites will always be a popular boys' sport and a distinctly new type of kite, which has been found successful, is shown in the drawing. It is made from ordinary cone drinking cups, a number of which can be purchased for a few cents. The sharp end of the cone allows the kite to catch the wind while a small lead shot, split and attached to a short length of thread, which is fastened to the rim of each cone as indicated, sets as a tail. Small round split fishing sinkers can be used instead of shot. The cones are strung at intervals along the line and the kite can be fashioned into various shapes, depending on the ingenuity of the builder. The "pull" of the kite increases with the number of cones used. The "guy lines" are threaded through the point of the cones.

What You Should Do When You Cut Your Finger While cuts usually are not dangerous unless an artery or a vein is severed, they are likely to give considerable trouble if not properly treated, says Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Commissioner of Health, City of Chicago, in a special article. Over 600 persons die in the United States every year from the effects of cutting or piercing instruments, and many of the injuries were not at first considered serious.

Have the wound cleaned. That is the first and one of the most important steps. Always try to get someone to dress the cut for you. The cleansing should be done carefully so that no dirt or other source of infection is left in or introduced into the wound. If the skin is covered with grease or oil, remove this with benzine or alcohol (not wood alcohol). Green soap and water are sufficient in other cases. Rub away from the cut so that foreign matter will not be brushed into it.

The next step is to use an antiseptic. Iodine is good for many wounds. It should be put on with an applicator—a toothpick or a small stick with a bit of gauze twisted around it. Use this as a wash, dipping it into the iodine and gently brushing it over the injury. Next apply a strip of sterile gauze. Handle the gauze by the ends so that the fingers do not touch the part that is to come in contact with the wound. Lay the piece directly on the cut and then apply the bandage.

This should be wound firmly but not too tight. With a little practice, you can learn to twist the cloth as you wrap it, so that it will not slip. Split the end for tying or use a cord or sew the bandage. Use no salves or ointments. If a vein or artery has been severed, call or visit a doctor at once, and in the meantime endeavor to stop the bleeding. This can usually be done with a tourniquet, improvised from a handkerchief and a stick. Fold the handkerchief diagonally, bring the opposite corners up and spread them so the cloth will be nearly the same width throughout.

The important point to observe in using a tourniquet is the position of the wound. If an artery has been cut, which is indicated by intermittent spurts of bright-red blood from the wound, the tourniquet should be applied above the wound. When a vein is severed, the blood will flow evenly and will be darker, and the tourniquet is put on below the cut because blood in the veins flows back toward the heart. After tying the handkerchief in the proper position, insert the stick between two folds and turn it until the bleeding stops. Loosen the tourniquet slightly after a few moments to ease the strain and cleanse the wound, but twist it back again quickly.

The above applies to cuts on arms and legs only; for cuts on head, neck and trunk, a doctor should always be called.

Novel Battery Cable Eliminates Binding Posts

A battery cable that eliminates the binding posts in the set is now available. Various-colored, flexible insulated leads are increased in a fabric covering, and the battery ends are labeled for the different voltages. The opposite end of the cable terminates in a hard-rubber or composition block, the ends of the wires protruding just beyond this block. Two holes are provided for mounting the unit on the subpanel in the position shown. The battery leads of the circuit are then soldered to the terminals on the block, doing away with the usual binding posts in the set.
