Ford--"Airplanes Will End War!"

Tennyson's Prophecy 83 Years Ago

For I dipped into the future, far as human eye could see,
Saw the vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be;

Saw the heavens fill with commerce, argosies of magic sails,
Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales;

Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rained a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue;

Far along the world-wide whisper of the south-wind rushing warm,
With the standards of the peoples plunging through the thunderstorm;

Till the war drum throbbed no longer and the battle flags were furled,
In the parliament of man, the Federation of the World.

There the common sense of most shall hold a fretful realm in awe,
And the kindly earth shall slumber, lapped in universal law.

Henry Ford and the verses from Tennyson's "Locksley Hall" to which he refers in the interview. Will Put Front Line Perils in Rulers' "Back Yards."
By HAL COCHRAN
NEA Service Writer
Detroit, Mich., Dec. 7.—"Airplanes will stop all warfare!"
That is Henry Ford's opinion.
He made the statement as he stood by the Ford laboratory building at Dearborn, Michigan, watching a Ford plane, bound for Chicago, disappear in the clouds.
"It will take time," he continued, "but time will bring that situation about."
Must Justify Itself.
"The airplane, first of all, has got to justify itself by successful flights, day after day."
"One or a dozen trips from one point to another mean nothing. It must show consistent and continual mastering of the air and then—it will have the telling effect on war."
"War, heretofore, has been localized."
"The war makers have been able with airplanes the war will be brought to hide behind armies and navies. With airplanes the war will be brought into the war maker's back yard."
Can't Escape Danger.
"They will be made to bear the consequences of their work. They will be on 'the front' because the front will be almost anywhere and everywhere."
"There may be future wars, but they will become wars against the war makers."
"Even though the United States may be a peaceable nation, it does not represent or control the whole world. There are war makers elsewhere. They will be brought to another frame of mind by the airplane."
"You can find the whole future of the airplane in Tennyson's 'Locksley Hall.' Did you ever read it?"

Playgrounds Popular.
Greenville, S. C., Dec. 7.—Approximately 1,700 young persons visited the four playgrounds of Greenville during the last month, according to the report of Miss Nora McAllister, city playground director, which was released today. Of the total number visiting the playgrounds, 4,000 were boys and 2,279 were girls, the report states.
Golf was played in India near one hundred years ago.

Frieda Hempel, the famous singer, believes in going to great lengths to keep herself fit. Recently that her audiences might not be dissatisfied with her voice and appearance, she stayed in bed for two weeks, nourished only by tea and water.

THE PEOPLE NORTH CAROLINA FORGOT.

Winston-Salem Journal.
True bills of indictment have been returned against the superintendent of the Stanly county convict camp charging him with the murder of two negro convicts. A third indictment charges him with assault upon another negro with a deadly weapon. The defendant is entitled by law to a fair and impartial trial and, granting this, trial of him cannot be made before the case is heard in court. He offered testimony tending to show that he is not guilty of murder or of wilful and malicious killing. Both phases of the evidence submitted were recognized by Judge McElroy, who declined to decide their merits, reserving decision for the regular procedure of court.
"The court has heard it talked, whether it is true or not I don't know, since I have been here this week, that parties have said in the streets that no grand jury in Stanly county would return a bill of indictment against the defendant, and if he were convicted that others would pay his penalty for him," said Judge McElroy in speaking to the grand jury. The grand jury did subsequently return a true bill. A fair trial and adequate punishment, if the defendant is found guilty, are further chapters in the gruesome story. Stanly county cannot afford to make a farce of the trial or of whatever judgment may result from it.

There is a phrase somewhere about "the people whom God forgot." There are people in North Carolina whom the State seems to have forgotten. Among these are the convicts, M. W. Nash, who was solicitor in the Thirteenth Judicial District a few years ago, says that while he was yet in office he made attempts to call adequate attention to conditions in the convict camps in Stanly county. While a member of the Senate of the General Assembly in 1921, he says, he introduced bills for the reform of the convict system but found that sentiment along that line was difficult to arouse. Does it require conditions such as reports indicate existed in Stanly county to arouse the people of North Carolina to the evils of the convict plan? Apparently it does. News comes from Stanly that it is likely the county commissioners will abolish convict camps altogether.

The abolition of the system on a statewide basis is a logical outlet from a very embarrassing situation. North Carolina gets entirely too much advertisement from her convict camps, publicity that is damaging and in a measure unfair. For the best thought in the State is shocked when it hears of conditions such as the Stanly disclosures reveal. Convict camps are not consonant with the progressive achievements and trend of the State. North Carolina cannot afford to be cruel. The ends of justice can be met without resort to cruelty. North Carolina must look after the people she has forgotten. Dr. Ashby Jones once told a Winston-Salem audience that no city is better than the condition of its least fortunate inhabitant. The wisdom of his declaration is of more than city scope. It takes in the entire State.

BURIED TREASURE.

Winston-Salem Journal.
The most priceless treasures of antiquity ever discovered have been found in the coffin of Tut-ankh-amen, which has just been opened. Searchers in the tomb discovered inside the outer stone casket three coffins of solid gold, one within the other, the outer being declared to be the largest single piece of gold work known to archaeologists and the second the finest known example of Egyptian art. Inside the coffin with the king's body, sewed in his regalia and packed around the body, were found an armful of gold trinkets and jewel chests.

According to custom the king wore his crown, a coronet, which is declared to be the finest masterpiece of the jeweler's art in the world. Two gold hilted swords and two gold handled daggers were strapped to the youthful king's body and when the linen garments which the king wore were removed the body was found to be sheathed in gold leaf, the feet covered with golden sandals, with a golden stall on every finger and toe, besides numerous finger rings.
More valuable than the gold trappings of the king, however, from the standpoint of history, was the royal Book of the Dead, which is expected to throw remarkable light in Biblical chronology. The document is the longest manuscript covering the events of this age down and will engage the attention of translators for many years to come. While the nature of the contents are yet unknown it is believed that the narrative recounts the period of Egyptian captivity and their subsequent release, of the period paralleling the Biblical Exodus.

Whatever the outcome the world owes a debt of gratitude to Lord Carnarvon, whose death precluded any appraisal of the treasures in the tomb which he discovered. Quite to our liking, an American had a hand in the discovery, for Carnarvon's unfinished work was completed by Howard Carter, his American assistant. Fortunately, for history, the tomb of Tut-ankh-amen, situated in the Valley of the Kings, was one of the few not ransacked by robbers.

L. R. J. H. HOLMES FINDS NO PERIL IN CATHOLICISM

It is America That Threatens It, as Well as Protestant Units.
New York World.

Roman Catholicism is more afraid of America than America, with all its fanaticism, is afraid of Catholicism, the Rev. Dr. John Hayes Holmes yesterday told a capacity congregation in the Community Church.
He also charged that the Catholic Church is a secret foe of prohibition and is active in breaking down enforcement of the Volstead Law. Such opposition, he declared, is one of the most serious difficulties Prohibition has to face.

Calls Tammany Disreputable.
His answer to his own question was, "No, the real situation is that America is a menace to Catholicism," but before he gave it he presented a careful analysis of the opposition to Catholicism in this country, in the course of which he denounced Tammany Hall as a "disreputable organization," called New York City, a field of combat between the Catholic and the Jew, hinted at an "easy capture of the Democratic party by Governor Smith, declared that the political history of Boston is a "scandal and disgrace to the city and to the Catholic Church," and severely criticized Cardinal O'Connell.

The Catholic is one of the three great martyrs of American history, the Indian and the Negro being the other two, Dr. Holmes said. He recalled the days of his own boyhood when he said many Protestants thought every priest was a libertine, every nun of doubtful virtue, every convent a house of dubious reputation. He referred to the A. P. A., as a "pestilential agitation."

Survival of Medieval Times.
Dr. Holmes gave four reasons for the general impression that Catholicism is a menace to free democracy emphasizing that he had no sympathy with any but one. Opposition is partially rooted in history, is a survival of reflection of bloody combat between Catholic and Protestant in the Reformation, he said. Secondly, there is the feeling of older settlers against alien newcomers.

"I resent the impudence of Protestants who would pretend to hold the country as their own," declared Dr. Holmes. "The United States is no more a Protestant country than it is a Jewish country. If the Catholics can dominate it, they have a right to do so."

The third factor is political and economic, and on that score Dr. Holmes confessed he felt some sympathy for those who oppose Catholicism. Taking Boston, for an example, he said it was no longer an Anglo-Saxon town but one of the great Catholic cities of the world, and that its political history was a disgrace to the church and city.

"The Catholic Church hasn't had the guts, if you'll pardon the word," cried Dr. Holmes. "To clean up the Augean stable of corruption that has existed so long in the political life of Boston."

Band Leader Reverts to Type

Paul Whiteman, famous jazz band leader, dipped back into the years while visiting Des Moines, Ia. Before becoming a musician he drove a taxi; and this photo shows him sitting in the driver's seat of a Des Moines taxi. With him is Gov. John Hammill of Iowa, whose guest, Whiteman was.

Catholic vs. Jew.

New York would be as flooded with Catholics as Boston, Baltimore and Philadelphia if it weren't for the Jews, he said. The city is a field of combat for the two elements.
"Al Smith," the speaker continued, "is the outstanding representative of those urban forces of Democracy largely backed by the Catholic Church which are overflowing into the life of the Nation, and his amazing popularity forecasts an easy capture of the Democratic party."
"Most serious in the minds of many is the feeling that the Catholic Church never has and never will abandon the idea of temporal power, the combination church and State and church supreme."
"Millions today believe that Catholics aspire to restore the Pope to imperial power. To me the idea is simply ridiculous. It makes me laugh to hear of 'divided allegiance.' The man who cherishes that notion writes himself down as a moron. The Pope could call and call in vain. The nation could call and be heard."

Dr. Holmes criticized the Catholic Church as being responsible for ignorance and superstition, guilty of financial exploitation and of using despotic and tyrannical power, but immediately gave example of similar faults on the part of Protestant churches and said his quarrel was not so much with Roman Catholicism as with "organized Christianity." The religion of Jesus, he asserted, is tied hand and foot by ecclesiastical organization.
Attacks Cardinal O'Connell.
He told how local priests would not answer his letters; how others refused invitations to preach in his church. He recalled Cardinal O'Connell's action last year in having Massachusetts priests read to their congregations a letter opposing the Child Labor Amendment, on which a referendum was being taken.

There was applause and laughter when Dr. Holmes, in ringing tones, said:
"Cardinal O'Connell ought to get down on his knees and ask God's pardon for that. And it is possible that God might be very slow in granting it."

Young people today are drifting from Catholicism, Dr. Holmes concluded. It was a desperate day for that church when the gates of immigration were closed, he said.
"Catholicism is dying," he finished. "So is Protestantism, thank God. America needs faith to open its arms to a new spiritual democracy—and American religion!"

Pharr Will Oppose New Tax Proposal.

Charlotte, Dec. 7.—Edgar W. Pharr, speaker of the North Carolina House of Representatives, is to leave his home here Wednesday for Washington, where he will take part in a conference, the 10th of speakers of state houses throughout the country. The purpose of their meeting is announced, it to frame a protest to Congress against the recommended link of state and national inheritance taxes.
Such a bill as the house ways and means committee presents becomes a law, Mr. Pharr says it would demoralize inheritance tax system in all the states and result in hasty special session in every state.
