LOCAL MENTION

All the banks of the city will be closed on January 1st, it being a legal holiday. The weekly meeting of the Concord Rotary Club will be held at the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow at 12:30 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Morrison returned Sunday night to their home in Kenansville, N. C., after spending Christmas here at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Fields.

The body of R. J. W. Hitt, who died here early yesterday morning at the home of relatives, was sent this morning to Toccoa, Georgia, for burial. The funeral services will be held there some time tomorrow.

According to figures made public Monday 13,130 bales of cotton had been ginned in Cabarrus County prior to December 13th. For the same period last year 12,252 bales were ginned.

A basketball game will be played tonight between the Y juniors and the Kannapolis juniors, the game to be called at 8 o'clock. The Y varsity will play Lenoir-Rhyne on Wednesday night at 8 o'clock in the Y gym.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sabin and little son, "Sonny," and Charles E. Burnham, a noted baritone and voice teacher, of Asheville, will arrive on Wednesday to be the guests of Miss Pat Adams, at Dr. W. C. Houston's.

There will be a regular meeting of the Fred Y. McConnell post of the American Legion Friday evening at 7:45 o'clock. Barbecue and all the good things that go with it will be served and all members are urged to attend.

Volleyball practice for the business men's volleyball team will be held tonight at the Y. M. C. A. at 6:30 o'clock. All members of the team are urged to be present to practice for the game against Salisbury to be played on Thursday.

Police officers report that $155.55 was collected in fines and costs in police court Monday. Twenty-two cases were on docket for trial and in addition to the defendants fined, others were bound over to Superior Court.

C. N. Fields, city tax collector, has a notice in The Daily Tribune calling attention to the fact that after January 1st a penalty will be added to city taxes. The penalty was postponed from December 1st to January 1st but no further extension will be made.

R. L. Thompson, charged with forging a note on a local bank and arrested in Florida, was given a hearing in police court Monday. Probable cause in the case was found and he was bound over to Cabarrus Superior Court which will convene here Monday morning.

Street work in Concord has been halted by the cold weather. The ground has been frozen so hard since Saturday that Superintendent R. C. Benfield has been unable to continue regular road work in the city. However, Mr. Benfield has his men and teams engaged in hauling cinders and other work that can be made.

Gene Stratton-Porter's great work, "Keeper of the Bees," will be shown at the Pastime Theatre not only on Wednesday and Thursday but there will be a New Year's Watch run, Thursday night. The last showing will begin at 10:45 a. m., December 31, 1925, and will close in 1926. Admission, 20 and 40 cents.

The cold weather has temporarily interrupted brick work on the new hotel building. It has been so cold that mortar would have frozen if placed on the brick so for that reason the work has been halted. It is planned to rush this work again as soon as favorable weather prevails again.

Continued improvement is reported again today in the condition of C. C. Griffin, who was hurt Saturday night when struck by an auto at the intersection of Corbin and Union streets. Mr. Griffin returned Sunday to his home from the Concord Hospital, where he was rushed after the accident.

The regular January term of Cabarrus County Superior Court will convene Monday. The session will continue for two weeks with the first week devoted to criminal cases and the second week devoted to civil cases. Sheriff Caldwell reports everything in readiness now for the opening of the court Monday morning.

Finer than "The Girl of the Limberlost"—a picture reeking with warmth, vitality, sentiment and movement—the sweet, wholesome story of a young war hero condemned by physicians to die within a year and the Mystery Girl whom he married to give her child (as he thought) a name—Gene Stratton-Porter's finest work, "The Keeper of the Bees," at the Pastime Wednesday and Thursday.

In Turkey and Persia fashionable women dye their hair and the palms of their hands and the soles of their feet with henna.

W. O. W. NOTICE

Regular meeting of Elm Camp No. 16 W. O. W. Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Pythian Lodge Room. Every member is urged to be present. S. A. WEDDINGTON, C. C. E. C. LITAKER, Clerk.

A Sir Galahad of The Loop

How a Midnight Meeting Blossomed Into Romance

SHOULD I speak to a girl, a girl on the street at night, a girl who is sobbing and in evident distress? A strange chance that developed on a meeting is described in a man in the case, in January's "Smart Set."

Telling her how he met the girl, at a corner of Chicago's famous "Loop," he says: "I had walked my way out of the midnight fog, and stepped into the entrance of a store to wait for a street car. Close to me stood a girl, her face hidden in the collar of her coat. Her head was turned from me, but I caught a sound that made me forget all about my car and the bitter cold. She was crying. 'Should I speak to her?' One is used to all kinds of sights and hold-ups in the city, but there was something unusual about this one. 'What's the trouble, Miss?' I finally asked, uncertainly. 'She glanced up, the tears bright on her lashes. Then she looked at me squarely. What she saw must have won her confidence, for she put her hand on my arm and almost whispered: 'Could you, would you do something for me? I am cold—suffering so—and haven't had a bite to eat since yesterday. Would you get me something to eat and a place to stay—and let any explanation come later?'"

"I was puzzled. Here was a good-looking, well-dressed young woman asking me for help. I had just a dollar in my pocket. 'I took another look at her pretty face. Well, I would take a chance any time on that face. 'A taxi driver soon answered my call, and in a few minutes I was ushering the girl into my one-room kitchenette-and-bath apartment. 'I watched her silently as she seated herself near the table and I settled down for a smoke. She sat for a few minutes nervously twisting her handkerchief in her hands. 'I know I owe you an explanation,' she began. And what she told me then made me grit my teeth in anger at the cowardly beasts who lie in wait for hard-working, defenceless business girls—when they know that their intended victims are alone in the city, far from family and friends. 'Her awful experience in her first job in Chicago had made it impossible to secure other work. Now she was penniless, and the rent for her tiny hall-bedroom was overdue. 'That's my story,' she concluded. 'Now what are you going to do with me?' 'I'll tell you exactly what I'm going to do with you. I'm going to take you down to a friend's office next Monday and he will put you to work. 'But—' 'And in the meantime we will have to make out the best way we can,' I finished. 'I can't take you to a hotel tonight. It is very late, and you have no baggage. 'She looked up and tried to smile, but it was a pitiful effort. 'You have been very good to me—I couldn't have asked for more—and I will do just what you think is best. 'I dropped her hand and jumped to my feet. For a moment I was hurt—hurt because she had taken my kindness as a bargain of some sort. 'So, that's the kind of a fellow she thinks I am, eh?' I thought. 'Let me tell you something, little girl, I told her heatedly, looking straight into her deep brown eyes. 'You are as free here as you would be in your own home. I am not a cad. It's too bad that you misunderstood. I don't want any pay or any thanks. I understand your—but that will do for tonight. You are going to bed—and that very soon. No questions asked. 'I produced a pair of my pajamas for her, and let down the Murphy bed, telling her that I would go in and bunk with one of the boys down near the end of the hall, that is, when he came in, which was usually late. Then I turned the back of the big chair toward the bed and settled myself with a magazine while she went to bed. Soon I could hear the little movements, the sighs, and then the subdued breathing which made me know she was asleep. 'The outcome of this "Smart Set" story, which is called "The Fellow She Thought I Was," proves that love—deep, true and lasting—may often be found in the most unexpected places.
