"DAD'S DECALOGUE" IS NEEDED BY PARENTS
Prof. J. B. Robertson Approves Suggestions by Philadelphia School Superintendent.
Dr. T. C. R.oomer, superintendent of the Philadelphia schools, at a meeting of the Big Four Fathers Association recently presented the following suggestions which he termed "Dad's Decalogue" and which Prof. J. B. Robertson, superintendent of the county schools, passes on to the public here:
Do not expect the teacher to control your child, if you have failed at home.
Habits of obedience and respect for authority must be learned first at home.
Fathers, know your sons. Mothers, know your daughters. Children who have been taught always to confide in their parents can be trusted anywhere.
Find some daily home duties or chores for your boy or girl to do, and they will come to appreciate in some degree the sacrifices you are making for them.
Don't give children much spending money. Let them earn it; otherwise an excellent opportunity to acquire the habit of thrift is lost.
Where children are far enough advanced to have home study, be sure that they regularly set aside the same time for it every day. Regularity is a good habit to acquire.
Do not believe every report your child brings home. All children do not lie, but most children have strong imaginations which tend to operate in their own favor, if they are guilty.
Do not take the part of your child against the teacher before hearing both sides, and do not do it afterwards.
In nine times out of ten you will find, to your embarrassment, that your child was wrong, and in the tenth case, it is better to suffer a slight injustice to your child than to destroy the teacher's influence over him.
If you have a complaint to make, go first to the principal of the school, not to the superintendent, a board member or others.
Do not expect miracles. Not all children are equally apt. The school trains minds—but does not furnish them.
Do not apply the adult standard to the work of children. Do not upbraid your boy because he can not do things as well as you can. And when new things are tried in the school, consider where your business would be if you still used the same things that were used when you were a boy. If you do this, you will not criticize all new innovations in school work.

PAPERS THAT POISON NEWS POISON SELVES

Suppression of Pertinent Facts Equivalent to Death Verdict, Says Book.
Chicago, March 19.—A newspaper "can no more afford to poison its news than a dairyman can afford to put prussic acid in his milk," Hanses Leach and John C. Carroll say in their new book on the newspaper, "What Is News?" just published.
"The newspaper which poisons its product poisons itself. Suppression of important or pertinent facts in the interest of popularity, class, gang, clique or self-interest is the equivalent of a death warrant if persisted in. Of this the tall of dead newspapers is sufficient testimony."
All phases of the newspaper's relation to the myriad activities of modern life are touched on in the book, which describes news as "accelerated literature" and the newspaper as an institution "which is writing literature as the clock ticks."
The authors are members of the staff of The Chicago Tribune. Leach is known as a writer on economic topics under the pseudonym of "Scrutator," while Carroll is an instructor in the Medill school of journalism at Northwestern university.
The writers declare that newspaper men long have had a triple classification of news based on the themes of money, love and religion. "To be more specific and probably more enlightening, news interest as disclosed by the world in review is that tumbles day or night upon the copy desks from wires, cables, hot from the reporter's typewriter or cooler from the mails, seems to be summed up thus:
"Life and death, desire for amusement, curiosity, ambition and cupid-ity, wealth and poverty, religious hope, generosity and stinginess, honesty and dishonesty, heroism and fear."
While crime is called "the most interesting of all news themes—judged by circulation gains and popular interest," the authors assert that "as the cost of publishing has increased and the volume of crime has increased the proportion of all crime that wins a place in the news has waned until it is less than one-half of 1 per cent. in the larger dailies."
"The idea that the suppression of crime news would lessen crime ignores the fact that newspapers are by no means the only method for the dissemination of information. They have never superseded the gossip and the grape-vine telegraph."
Likewise the authors find that comparatively little of available sex news is printed, although citing the subject as one of wide interest.
"Sex will disappear from the news when newspapers are written and read by Robots. Men and women and their problems as such always have been the theme of accelerated literature as of nearly all other sorts.
"But just as in crime, the very abundance of sex news in time forces a process of selection, until a very minute fraction of sex news ever gets into the newspapers and that is usually selected because it carries with it some unusual feature or appeal—exactly as the sex of great literature is always something vastly more than sex."
The relation of advertising to newspapers is commented upon. "It has become conventional to say that a newspaper lives on its by-product, advertising." The authors deny this, saying:
"It probably is true today that the great majority of newspaper advertisements are as dependent on the newspapers as they are on the railroads, the post office or the telephone for their continued existence and functioning."
At a conference of negro preachers in America a visiting bishop was looking at the various examination papers and came upon one marked 101 per cent. "See here, Brother Jones," he asked the worthy who was conducting the test, "what basis does 'yo' base 'yo' answers on?"
"100 per cent," advised the minister.
"But how does this man come to be marked 101 per cent?"
"Oh, 'yo' see, suh," answered the minister, "he answered one question we didn't ask!"

POSTAL CLERKS IN CITY EXPERT AS DISTRIBUTORS

Test Made Before Railway Mail Service Inspectors Shows Admptness in Handling Mail.
The Concord postoffice has some expert mail handlers.
This was demonstrated this week when a railway mail service inspector made a visit to the local office, gave the clerks 3,264 cards to be mailed and checked up on their work.
T. L. Chaney was the only clerk to make a perfect record, but two others, J. M. McEachern and A. W. Brantley, made only one mistake.
J. W. Barmhart, the other clerk, made only five mistakes, the total of seven mistakes giving the quartette an average of 99.8 per cent.
The record made in the local office is said to be a very excellent one.
The inspector making the test here was G. C. Goodloe.

BIBLE CLASS MEMBERS DISCUSS CHURCH WORK

Members of Class of the Forest Hill Methodist Church discuss problems at Oyster Supper.
Discussion of various problems of their Church with special emphasis on matters pertaining to their class, featured the meeting of the members of the Men's Bible Class of the Forest Hill Methodist Church Friday evening.
Members of the official board of the Church were guests at the meeting during which an oyster supper was served.
A. E. Odell, H. S. Williams and Rev. T. F. Higgins were speakers at the meeting, each touching on some phase of the Church work. A fine spirit of interest was manifested, with special interest shown in the discussion of the revival services to begin in the Church tomorrow.

At the Star Theatre Monday and Tuesday.

Raymond Griffith plays the role of the hero, a Confederate spy. His general tells him he must go west to Virginia City, the site of the famous Comstock Lode, the source of the Union's war finances, and divert the next wagon train of gold to the South. Griffith's experiences en route to the western city are varied and he becomes a central figure in goldpits, Indian battles and love affairs with fair ladies. He falls in love with two of them in particular, a brunette and a blonde. Each falls in love with him and each girl admires the other. It is a difficult triangle.
By the time Griffith obtains the gold he is arrested for highway robbery. He reveals his identity as a member of the Confederate Army and says he can be held merely as a prisoner of war. He is informed that the war is over and that he is just a common robber. Just before he is about to make a quick exit from this life with the aid of quick western justice, the girls save his life.
In the end he is forced to decide which of the girls whom he loves equally well and who love him, he will marry. The way he settles the difficulty and brings to an end his hectic career in the cause of the Confederacy is the new and refreshing finish to the story. It's a Paramount.

STANDARD BUICK CO.

"Here!" called out Mattoosian, the office wit, to the errand boy. "Run over to Schmidt's bird store and get 10 cents' worth of pigeon's milk."
"Here you are," he said. "Mr. Schmidt says you can milk the bird back to me and be quiet about it."
The boy set out, but did not return for some time. When he did get back the chief clerk was giving orders to Mattoosian.
But the boy knew nothing of office etiquette, so he stepped between them and produced a five pigeon.
"Here you are," he said. "Mr. Schmidt says you can milk the bird yourself. And there's no change."
Had not Bartholomew, brother of Columbus, been detained by pirates when on his way to aid King Henry the Seventh of England, America might have been discovered in the name of the British King.
