STATE PRISON PAYING DIVI-DEND.

For the first time in six years' operation of the North Carolina's State prison resulted in a profit during the calendar year 1925. This fact was established by the report of Charlotte auditors who have just completed a survey of the records.

survey of the records.

The total net operating profits for the State's prison as a whole for the calendar year amount to $42,548.31, but when the amount had to prisoners upon their discharge for themselves and their families in commutation, $24,49.88, is subtracted, the profit is reduced to $18,093.43. Strictly speaking that entire amount should not be deducted, since a large part of that commutation accrued during previous way to calculate.

But the feature of the entire report is that the prison is now on a self-supporting basis for the first time since December, 1920, the last time a report showing a surplus of income over expenses was made. Not only that, but the balance sheet of assets and liabilities shows $2,748,355,35 worth of assets in excess of liabilities; again of more than $600,000 over the figure of 1924, which was $2,117.65726. That means that a large amount was spent during the year on permanent improvements to the prison system and gives added significance to the net profit shown.

A damage suit growing out of the evolution discussion has been filed in Cabarrus county. It is brought by Rev. J. R. Pentuff, a Baptist by Rev. J. R. Pentuff, a Baptist minister of Concord, against the Raleigh Times company, J. A. Park, publisher, and O. J. Coffin, editor. The amount of damages asked by the preacher as compensation for nurts alleged to have been inflicted by editorial criticism in the Times, is $25, 000. Rev. P. Even if retraction, or correction, is made the suit may go on, but the burden is on the plaintiff to show that he suffered actual injury on actount of the publication, which the retraction could not remedy. Usually, however, if satisfactory retraction is published there is no suit. But in this case the Times refused to publish a retraction. Presumably the Times took the position that there was nothing to retract. In any event John Park and Os. Coffin stood pat and the case will go on trial some time in the near future nothing intervening. on trial some time in t ture, nothing intervening

The statement goes into considerable detail explaining why milk is the perfect food and discusses the matter of diet in general for children and adults, emphasizing those articles of diet that are most essential to supply the body with the minerals, salts, etc., needed as well as those that supply the proteins, carbohydrates and other essential elements. In conclusion the admentition is model, "Ear healthing and the provide a large amount of revenue for the government."

more cattle. There is a good profit in good cattle, to say nothing of the health qualities in good milk, yet we find our people showing an indifference that stems to grow with each year. Most of the counties in the State have less dairy cattle now than they had a few years ago.

We should not only increase the number of cattle we have, but likewise we should improve on the breed. It costs no more to feed a scrub, yet the former gives much better returns on the investment.

With a big carry-over from the 1925 cotton crop and prospects that the 1926 corp will be a big one, farmers would be wise to plant less cotton.

Joanna's Decision

A stable groom fumbled with his ap when Joanna had chosen her corse and sent to the house for the riding togs into which she proposed to change in the stable dressing room. The man gazed dubinusly down the Cap Martin slope and estimated the thickening blants of the stable dressing room and the lights of Monte Carlo were last the stable dressing in the stable dressing room. On her way to her own boudoir. Joanna stopped at Yvonne's. She, too, it seemed, was particularly painstaking at her evening's toilette. Her maids were flushed and nervous under the temper of their mistress. That they were having difficulties in pleasing her was evident from the litter of glittering gowns angrily tossed into heaps on the chaise lounge, chairs and, even, tables. For a brief instant Joanna stood in the boudoir door, beneath the curtains that shu off Yvonne's sitting room; just long enough for her eyes to harden and narrow. Then she announced brightly that she would be going out with Kenilworth and that she hoped her running away would not interfere with any plans for the out with Kenilworth and that she hoped her running away would not interfere with any plans for the evening Yyonne might have made. Yyonne glanced at her sharply. She concluded however, that there had been nothing hidden in Joanna's tone. "I have no other plans than a run into the Casino, perhaps," she said. "Betty Weymouth is having something or other to night at her place, and I did promise that you and I would drop in, but that is not important. If you are running away by yourself I
