Officers Discover Eleven Bottles Full Strung Along on Rope. Elizabeth City, May 4.—"Guilty on all counts" was the verdict of the jury in Recorder's Court Tuesday in the case of Leonard Twiford and Amos Bateman, residents of Eastlake, charged jointly with violation of the Turlington act as the outcome of their arrest by Sheriff Carmine and Chief of Police Holmes Thursday night at the river landing on the Worth farm, about four miles from this city. Judgment was reserved.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY
Curse or Blessing, Which?—He that withholdeth corn, the people shall curse him; but blessing shall be upon the head of him that selleth it.—Proverbs 11:26.

IS IT RIGHT?

Is it right to tax the auto a little more every time money is needed? That seems to be the theory we have been working on, for taxation in regard to motor vehicles has increased more rapidly than any other kind.

First, the average per vehicle tax levied for the entire country was $20 in 1925 as compared with $17.35 in 1924, an increase of fifteen per cent. in a period of twelve months.

Second, special taxes collected from car owners by the States reached a new high peak last year, with a total of $406,648,561 as compared with $305,266,742 in 1924, an increase of $101,381,819.

Third, the State's revenue from the gasoline tax almost doubled in 1925, the total being $146,289,040 as compared with $79,734,789 the previous year.

DO WE WANT ALL THE FACTS?
A news dispatch from Durham tells about Duke University students protesting against the passage in North Carolina of any law prohibiting the teaching of evolution in the public schools or colleges of the State. It is known that students in other institutions of learning are opposed to such a law.

It may be all wrong to teach the theory of evolution, but we are not convinced that any law will prevent its teaching. Neither are we convinced that the law will help the cause of the fundamentalist. There are hundreds of persons in North Carolina who never thought of evolution in their daily habits but who are likely to investigate now that an organized movement has been made to secure the passage of an anti-evolution bill in the State Legislature.

The students of the public schools and colleges of North Carolina are entitled to all of the facts. That's the chief reason we are opposed to any evolution bill. Give the students the facts, we say, and they can form their own opinions. If studying evolution of necessity destroyed all belief in a Supreme Being or in the words of Holy Scripture we would be opposed to it, but such is not the case.

We are not in sympathy with any movement calculated to curb facts. Science has played no little part in the development of the world and if we can't study science and its various branches then we are curbing the facts.

BANK GIVES PRIZES.

For the third successive year, notes The Manufacturers Record, the First National Bank of Laurel, Mississippi, announces a series of prizes for farmers and farmers' wives for achievements in the production of cotton, corn and chickens, the total this year running to $700, as compared with $600 last year and $500 the year before. These competitions, it is stated, "have resulted not only in increasing yields of crops and chickens, but also have assisted in adding 1,200 new farmer customers to the bank, increasing the deposits in a few years over $1,500,000."

POST AND FLAG'S Cotton Letter.

New York, May 4.—The market has ruled generally steady though near months have been relatively easy. Strike news and expectations of a rather more favorable review of the weather for the past week were without particular effect. A settlement of the strike on some terms is thought probable in the near future as the undertaking is so vast and so far-reaching in its effects that it will be intolerable to all, including those who brought about the situation.

Device Measures Ocean Depths.

It is no longer necessary to go to the trouble of letting down a cable in order to ascertain the depth of the ocean. The fathometer, an instrument which automatically registers the depth of the water over which a ship passes, is now used for that purpose. This device is based on the principle that every sound produces an echo.

Daredevil Killed.

Jewell Bell, 24 of Louisville, Ky., once jumped from a fast train into the Ohio river—and lived. He tried the same stunt from an airplane over the ocean at Vera Beach, Fla.—and was killed. He fell on his back and repositioned twenty feet.

Nineveh Tablet Deciphered.

In 1872 George Smith of the British Museum found an interesting tablet in Nineveh. The inscriptions were deciphered by Assyriologists some years afterwards, but Paul Haupt, professor of Assyriology at Johns Hopkins University, has recently rendered a more complete translation. He first restored the tablet to make it legible. Prof Haupt told the American Oriental Society at Philadelphia that the inscriptions bore the story of Noah and the ark. According to this account, Noah cut

SYNOPSIS CHAPTER XI

Marie Downey, innocently involved in a scandalous affair with Clifford Dudley, an actor, climbs to stage stardom because of the notoriety. John, a former sweetheart, writes that he wants to marry her. Marie, tasting success, puts him off. For three years she lives, with her chasm Sally, a new Mrs. Clifford calls her up on her twentieth birthday, and with some plan of revenge in mind she invites him to her party after the show that night. Unknown to her, John is in the audience.

She had to come out of her part and smile, oh, so sweetly, much more sweetly than he remembered. She ducked her head and made a charming little bow. John caught his breath, and craned his neck. "Gee, she's swell, isn't she?" murmured a man. "Say, I saw this show three times already. Whaddye know about that, and each time she's better'n the last." "Yes, for a fact, she's good tonight." "Sh-sh," muttered John. The men turned about and glared at him. But he did not notice. He did not want to miss a note of her voice.

So for three acts. And in the intermission, he had time to sit, fazed, and wonder how he had dared to come to New York and suppose that perhaps—That girl on the stage in diaphanous clothes, who kicked up her legs at the least provocation, who revealed her dimple so knowingly, who flirted with every man in the audience, she might be called Marie Downey and have sprung from Winesville, but she probably did not even remember the town any longer. Nor him. Nor yoo-hooing up the back stairs of the hotel. Nor the sunny hours he had waited on that old singing-teacher's porch, nor the golden mornings he had carried her books to school. Not one chance in a thousand. In John's breast coat pocket reposed a slip of paper, on which he had copied, after luring it out of Jane, the chambermaid, Marie's address in New York. Why he had copied it, he hardly knew. Except that it was comforting to know that he might go and look at her house, see what contained her now.

Perhaps if she had been less gaudily clad, and more sensitive about her legs, he might have considered actually seeing her. But such a girl—now—she was like a changing in Marie's outward semblance. He would not know what to say to her. What interested actresses?

A stillness fell on the theatre. The last people clamored down the aisle. What interested actresses? Suppose—suppose—he went down to her house. It was very late at night. At this hour Winesville was asleep. Mightn't she be offended? Even if he were an old friend (she had said long ago she would be fond of him always) could he try to see her so late? He argued it back and forth.

At a touch on his shoulder he started up with a wild thought—that perhaps—she had caught sight of him—"Say, Jo," said the caretaker, "stitcha got no home?" "Gesse cynical, rude New York people with their curling lips and sniffling noses! He shambled out, a light rain falling on his shoulders, stunned by the rush of a thousand taxis, caught in the rush of a thousand heels, dazed by millions of lights, and splattered by the dust and wet of hundreds of wheels.
