

REYNOLDS SAYS HE WILL BE NOMINATED
 Reynolds will carry 69 counties—has practically covered the State. Raleigh, May 29.—With only a few days to go, Robert R. Reynolds, candidate for the democratic nomination for United States Senator, is emphatic in his statement that he will be nominated by not less than 25,000 majority. Mr. Reynolds stopped off in Raleigh to spend Sunday and a rest a little after ten consecutive weeks of personal campaigning, and in that time he has practically covered the entire State. "I know the situation better than any other man" said, Mr. Reynolds, "because I have actually visited the people. My organization is perfected and after hearing from my friends in every section of the State, I can state authoritatively that I will carry 69 counties. The others are doubtful and I am willing to permit the opposition to claim them, although it is not certain that I will lose all of them."

"The opposition is claiming victory, but this is done simply to discourage my friends and to endeavor to catch the 'band wagon' crowd. In the beginning of the campaign, Senator Overman announced that he would not pay any attention to my candidacy. Later he saw the handwriting on the wall and named a State manager. Still later assistant managers were named. Then the work of perfecting an organization was rushed—the management found that my friends were ahead of them."

"This is my last statement before the primary and with knowledge of the state wide situation, after a conservative estimate, I am sure of a majority of 25,000. Thousands of friends are working in my interest and they will stick to the job until sunset of June 5."

KU KLUX ARE PREPARED TO PROTECT DEBATERS
 Five Hundred Klansmen Would Preserve Order at Lakewood Tonight. Charlotte, May 30.—Five hundred members of the Ku Klux Klan are prepared to preserve order at Lakewood tomorrow night when Dr. T. T. Martin, of the Anti-Evolution League, and Howell S. England, representative of the Society for the Advancement of Atheism, debate the subject, "Should the teaching of the lower order of animals be excluded from the tax supported schools?"

Dr. Martin said, he did not need the support of the invisible empire. Representatives of the Klan, while expressing disapproval of the debates, said that the 500 members would be available to be sent to Lakewood, a suburb of Charlotte, to assure its success.

Charles Smith, president of the atheists society, wrote the Charlotte Observer today that a "live monkey" was being shipped to Mr. England to be used as an exhibit.

"Having seen clippings from your journal wherein it was stated that the Ku Klux Klan had threatened to prevent the holding of the series of debates on evolution agreed upon between Dr. T. T. Martin and Howell S. England, I am writing you urging you to use your influence to see that the rights of free speech and free assemblage are respected in your community," he said.

Dr. Martin, whose home is in Mississippi, is field secretary of the Anti-Evolution League. Mr. England is a Detroit lawyer and biologist.

Dr. Martin has been in Charlotte for about a week. He failed to gain the co-operation of the committee of 100, an organization of North Carolinians opposed to the teaching of evolution. This committee passed a resolution here May 4th declining outside help in its efforts. This action was said to have been directly aimed at anti-evolution workers from without the state.

Soldier Entombed Alive.
 The Pathfinder. During the winter that George Washington and his troops were at Valley Forge a young Virginian, Lt. Arthur Carrington, disappeared and was believed to have deserted. More than a century later granite quarries were opened at French Creek Falls, 12 miles from Valley Forge. In the course of the work a cave was opened and in it was found the skeleton of a man. A rusty musket lay beside it and bits of rusty metal that had once been buttons and other parts of a uniform were scattered among the bones.

In gathering up the bones for burial a glass bottle was found. It contained a letter to Miss Virginia Randolph, evidently the dead man's sweetheart. The letter was signed with the name of the missing officer of the Continental army, and had been written in blood. It told how he had been sent out from camp in charge of a small foraging expedition, how they were cut off and pursued by a large party of British, how he knew of the cave where his foragers could lie concealed until the enemy had given up the search, because on a previous expedition he had hidden his horse in the cave while scouting.

But, by the time he and his party reached the rocks the British were close. He abandoned his horse and fled with the men on foot, but he was the only one to reach the cave. His men were taken prisoners by the British. Because the enemy knew the place was full of caves they did not search for him. They simply fired their rifles a number of times in the hope of frightening him into surrendering. A volley was fired close to the cave where he was hiding. The shots loosened a huge rock partly overhanging the mouth of the cave where he was. As it fell it blocked the exit. The young officer was frightened at first, but was reassured of eventual escape by light entering the cave from another direction. When he was convinced that the English were gone he attempted to get out, but discovered that the light came from a small crack in the roof, far out of reach, and only large enough to pass a hand through. After many frantic efforts to move the stone that sealed his prison he resigned himself to death by starvation and wrote the record of his fate in his own blood. His bones were buried in the churchyard at St. Mary's five miles away.

WEATHER CONDITIONS ARE EXTREMELY DRY
 General Throughout State—Very Few Good "Stands" Anywhere. Raleigh, May 29.—Realizing the discouraging situation existing over practically all of the cotton belt, in North Carolina, at this time, it may somewhat relieve the situation to know that all through this state and in most of the South Atlantic states the weather conditions have been extremely dry, with poor stands of cotton resulting. In a trip last week through the principal cotton belt of North Carolina, a field was rarely found with a good stand and only occasionally had any chopping been done, field news of the State department of agriculture report. Thousands of fields had the seed still lying ungerminated in the soil. No grass was growing, as the fields are too dry, and in many places cultivation was unnecessary. While some replanting will be necessary, it is thought that most of the fields simply need enough moisture to get the seed germinated.

The world consumes about 14,000,000 bales of American cotton annually. There is a relatively large carry-over from last year, when over 16,000,000 bales were produced. It was that carry-over that drove the price down and incidentally, the price decline was out of all proportion to the excess production. The price for the present crop will be more or less than the present price, depending on whether the prospective production is more or less than 14,000,000 bales. It is to this state's advantage to make a small crop. When the farmers will not do this themselves, it is probably fortunate for Nature to take a hand in reducing the production.

Due to the fact that the "violent" critics of the cotton estimates last year, were men of influence and political prominence, there was legislation enacted in the United States Senate and House, prohibiting the government from furnishing the usual cotton estimates until late in the season. The farmer will therefore, be compelled to rely upon the private estimates for information. Whether or not this is fair to the farmer will remain for him to see. It is believed that the final crop cannot be indicated 1,080,000 and the August 1st report 1,116,000 bales as compared with the 1,101,200 finally ginned in North Carolina.

What Movie Folks Would Do If Pictures Stopped.
 Hollywood, May 27.—Picture stardom does not remove the individual's interest in the ordinary pursuits of life. Casually, this question was put to Colleen Moore: "What would you do for a living if motion pictures and the stage were abolished?" "Why, I would keep house," she replied. "That started a canvass of the whole lot."

Anne Q. Nilsson would run a ranch. Harry Langdon would be a musician. Lloyd Hughes would sell real estate. Charlie Murray would be a policeman. Jack Mulhall would be a physician. Lewis Stone would return to active service in the army. Joyce Compton would be a secretary. Dolores del Rio would care for her ranch in Mexico. Dorothy Mackail would design clothes. Victor McLaglen would go back to the boxing ring. Mary Astor would be a pianist. Here's what the directors had to say:

Alfred E. Green would run a bookstore. Lambert Hillyer would return to automobile racing, and chemistry. Balboonia would be an artistic photographer. Alfred Santell would be an architect. Merryn Le Roy, comedy constructor, said if there were no theatres he would start one.

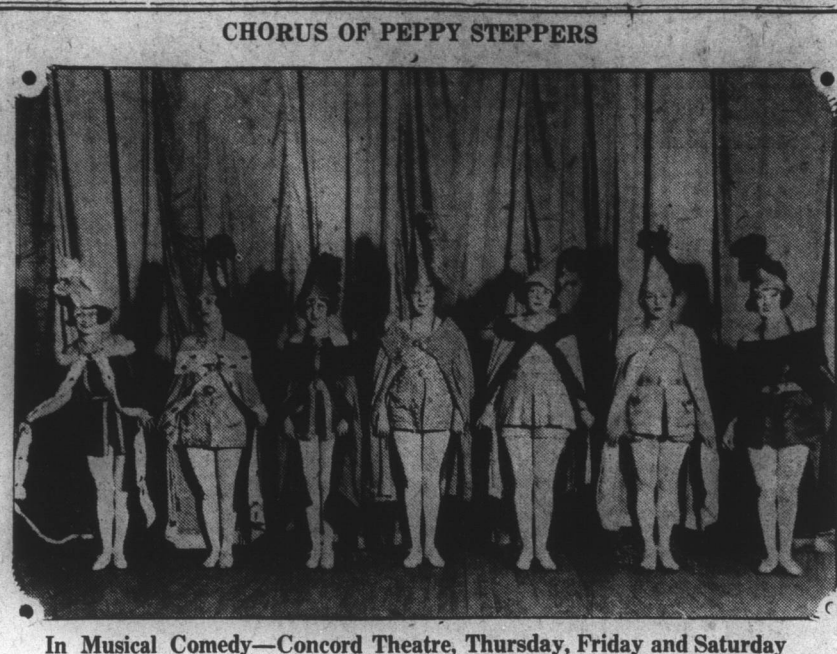

"Good in the Worst" Etc.
 The Pathfinder. Six years ago a Milwaukee youth, with the aid of a companion, held up a store, getting only about $25 for his trouble, but when he was brought before the judge he was sentenced to 25 years in prison. Enough to take the optimism out of any man! But this Milwaukee youth, who before his arrest had always been under the impression that the world owed him a living because he had never had a real chance to make one for himself, began to change his philosophy toward life after he had been in prison a few days.

The young convict got it into his head that he would like to study; he had never received much education. So through a University of Wisconsin extension course he took up simple arithmetic. He had to work overtime in prison to pay for his tuition. When he finished arithmetic the youth took up algebra and electrical engineering. He made high grades in his examinations.

Somewhere hidden in this young convict was a genius for inventing. He conceived the idea of an electric sign and flasher; he worked this out and patented his invention. Now this inventor-convict is working out other ideas, among which are two devices for use in knitting hosiery. But the best thing of all that this Milwaukee youth has done is to set an example to other men in prison. The world owes no one a living, but it will reward generously anyone who is willing to apply himself to useful work and be honest with himself.

Concord Furniture Co.

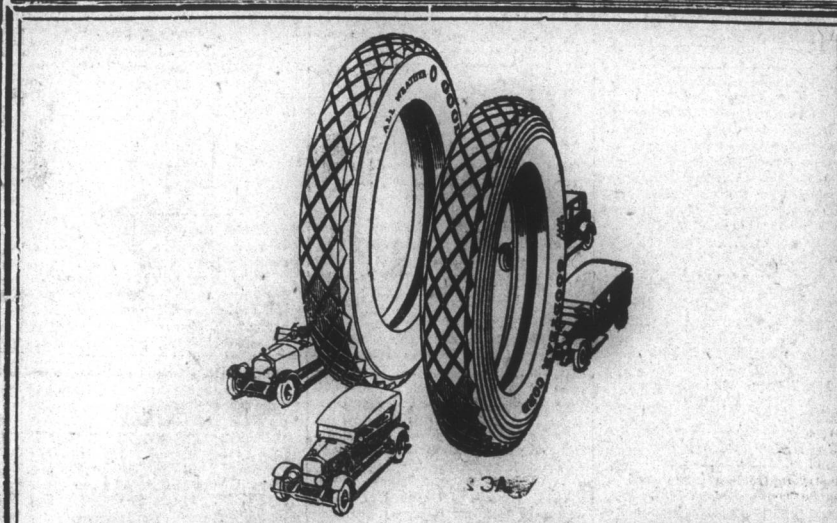

The old mission style of architecture has given the designers of today wonderful opportunities for display of their skill, mainly for the reason that it lends itself so readily to plain surfaces and to color schemes.

In this well studied design the white stucco walls, the red tile roof and the entrance with its round-top openings all suggest this style, which is typical of most mission work.

The plan and arrangement of the rooms are in keeping with the design. While it is not a large house, being only 28x30, it is large enough for a family of average size. The house contains a good size kitchen, a living-room and dining-room combined, one bedroom, sleeping-porch and bath. Good closets are provided, and there is a coat-closet at the rear of the hall. A laundry is placed on the porch at the rear. The fireplace, with bookcases at either side, in the living room is a feature of the house while ample wall space for furniture and pictures is allowed. If necessary, one could build a small basement; and by extending the kitchen floor into the basement a furnace could be installed.
