Mailed Lighted Cigarette. Charlotte Observer. When is a letter not an ash tray? That's what postoffice employees are trying to fathom.

Yesterday, apparently, some one carelessly or carelessly flicked a burning cigarette stub into the letter drop that was discovered when a number of letters began to smoulder.

These were quickly rescued, the ashes put out, and those letters burnt too badly to be sent through the mails returned to the sender.

Just when the cigarette stub was thrown in the mail receptacle or why, the postoffice employees were unable to determine, however the offending miniature fire brand was gingerly extracted from among the hundreds of letters which were in danger of going up in smoke and thrown out the window.

An ostrich is worth more dead than alive. When the bird is killed every bit of it is used. The flesh is made into-biltong, the skin is sold for fancy shoes, the feathers are made into dust-ers and ornaments, and the bones are ground up for meal.
