Preserves Flags For Posterity. Mrs. Helen Thompson of New York city is one of the few women in the United States conversant with the art of mending old flags. She was known on Governors Island, where she did most of her work, as "The Second Betsy Ross." Yet she performed her task in such quiet obscurity that her remarkable skill is not known save to those directly concerned with the preservation of flags.
Two of the flags which hang in the American Historical museum in New York were restored by Mrs. Thompson. She has repaired flags of all the American wars. Her largest single "recommission" was for covering all the flag which hang in the beautiful Pan-American building in Washington, D. C., 22 in all—the emblems of all the South American countries, forming a glorious canopy of color for the state receptions held in that building.
In the recent primary in Oregon three candidates in a certain district were tied for the nomination for congressional with one vote each.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

LOW TEMPERATURES DUE TO ICEBERGS?
It's a Long Jump to Ice Fields But Then the Winds Move With Great Rapidity.
It's a long jump from North Carolina to the ice fields of the north, yet it seems probable that the low temperatures of last night and this morning might have had their origin there. Winds chilled by icebergs were blamed for the drop of 30 degrees in the mercury in New York city in a single day, causing the weather bureau there to chalk up the coldest June day in ten years.
While the change in temperature here was less pronounced than in New York, it was very noticeable, countless men being the unusual rather than the usual thing on the streets last night. Cover discarded during the first of the week was pulled up again during the night and wraps were in evidence among the early risers this morning.
Meteorologists in New York said the sudden cold had been caused by an overnight shift in winds from southerly to northeasterly coming to New York from the Hudson Bay country. Icebergs recently have been reported in the northern transatlantic hands.
It's a big jump from here to Hudson Bay, to be sure, but winds do travel with rapidity; and anyway Concord welcomed the change from sultry temperatures even if its just for a day.
ONE SCHOOL IN THE COUNTY RUNS ALL YEAR
Jackson Training School Youngsters Know What's Twelve Months School Means.
The coming of May and June does not mean to students of the Jackson Training School just what it means to the other students in the county. As a rule all of the public schools in Concord and other parts of the county are closed for at least three months in the year, but at the training school the boys are kept at their desks twelve months in the year.
There are at least two good reasons for the 12-month term at the school, officials say. First, it gives the backward youths an opportunity to catch up with other youths of their age, and second it keeps the boys occupied for a half a day each day.
"Things at the school are run on schedule," one official pointed out, "and if the school were halted three months in the year the schedule would have to be revamped. While half of the boys are at school in the morning the other half are at work. In the afternoon the morning students are at work and the morning workers are at school."
Students in the school are carried through standard grammar grade books and are given fine educational training.
The boys as a whole get along about as well with their studies in the summer as in the winter, the school officials find.
SECOND GAME OF SERIES AT GIBSON PARK TOMORROW
Gibson and Kannapolis Teams to Engage in Another Hard Fought Game at 3:30 O'clock.
If Kannapolis wins, the series will be all even; if Gibson wins the Gingham-makers will have a decided edge on the five-game series. With that knowledge in mind, many fans are going to the game tomorrow afternoon hoping to witness one of the best games of the season. For Gibson will fight hard to retain the advantage gained last Saturday, and Kannapolis will fight even harder, if possible, to even things up. Truly, a good game should be enjoyed by all.
Both teams have strengthened their weak positions since the last game, though the names of the new covers are at the present time, unavailable. Gibson and it is probable that Culp, former Yankee, will twirl for Kannapolis.

Incognito

Cardinal Von Faulhaber, Archbishop of Munich, was photographed as he arrived in America incognito. He evaded reporters and friends on his way to the International Eucharistic Congress in Chicago.

Incognito
The on-lookers then walked to the rock bearing the two markers. Four little girls, dressed in white, pulled the strings that removed the coverings from the markers. The markers of the U. D. C. marker were Adelaide Linker, representing her mother, Mrs. W. M. Linker, president of Dodsos-Ramsauer Chapter, U. D. C., and Frances Gibson, representing her mother, Mrs. H. G. Gibson, vice-president. The D. A. R. marker was unveiled by Elizabeth Odell, representing her aunt, Mrs. C. B. Waggoner, regent of the Cabarrus Black Boys Chapter D. A. R., and Margaret King, representing Mrs. J. P. Cook, vice-regent. Scrolled on the U. D. C. marker are the following words:
In Commemoration of the Ku Klux Klan
During the reconstruction period following the "War Between the States," This marker is placed on their assembly ground.
The original banner (as above) was made in Cabarrus county. The tablet unveiled by the D. A. R. reads:
Traditional Rock where the three White boys (blacked as negroes) met their father coming from mill. Not being recognized, they demanded his horses and after placing the meal on top of the rock to protect it from wild hogs, they joined the other six boys who made up the "Cabarrus Black Boys" and destroyed Governor Tryon's powder about two miles north of here, May 1771.
The original of the banner on the U. D. C. tablet was made in Cabarrus County and is at present in the Confederate Museum in Richmond.
On the Right Track.
"Uncle George, what are you going to be when you grow up?"
George—"I'm going to be a philanthropist, uncle. Those people always seem to have a lot of money."
