THIS IS THE DAY.

Voters in various parts of the nation today are deciding who will represent them in various offices for the next several years. County officers, Governors, Congressmen and Senators are being chosen in various sections of the country and about the only sure thing about it now is that not half enough people will vote.

There is another thing that is almost as certain, too. That is the fact that results are going to vary differently in many places from predictions. Take this county, for instance. The outcome of the election depends on the Kannapolis vote and both parties are claiming victory in that town.

Similar instances no doubt, can be found in every State. No one seems to know just what a certain number of voters are going to do and these voters carry the balance of power in many precincts, counties and States.

And of course, the wets, dries, the World Court advocates, the anti-World Court advocates and every other group that favors or opposes something, will see victory for themselves in the outcome, regardless of what the outcome is.

Money will be more plentiful than ever at the polls as it has been in the campaign, and many persons won't know themselves how they are going to vote until they reach the polls and see how the cash holds out.

WILL QUEEN CANCEL TRIP SOUTH?

The railroads of the South, we judge from certain reports, are not willing to haul Queen Marie and her party at a loss. We don't know that we blame them. It is right and proper to recognize royalty yet we do not see why royalty should expect to spin in luxurious trains all over the United States without paying for it.

MORE POWERFUL THAN THE GOVERNMENT REPORT.

Cotton prices staggered and reeled under the government forecast of a crop of 17,454,000 bales—but they did not fall.

On the final day of last week, during which the report was made public, new buying strength appeared and prices made appreciable improvement.

It began to look as though recently organized corporations will have a fine effect on the crop after all. Of course it is too late to save all, but it is not too late to save something and these corporations, backed by millions of dollars, may bring enough relief to prevent disaster.

Of course all farmers are not hard hit, but the majority have felt the slump in price. Anything that tends to strengthen the market tends to strengthen them too and when they see how things are going they will be less anxious to sell, thus keeping from the market many bales not officially recorded in any of the storage places.

HOW LONG WILL THE "CHARM" CONTINUE?

Premier Mussolini has escaped another assassin's bullet, and this time he came nearer death than on the occasion when a man tried to throw a bomb into his automobile.

Mussolini has meant much to Italy and has given that nation more power, wealth and prestige than it has had for years, but just the same there are anarchists everywhere and they seem to be especially sore at the Premier.

NO COMPLAINT.

Mal Daugherty essayed a dance for the first time in his life, a sort of jig-time Charleston. Harry M. Daugherty smiled a broad, bland smile. After deliberating for nearly sixty-hours the jury had disagreed—seven to five, according to newspaper reports—for conviction.

For more than a month the jurors had listened to the interesting story of the transfer of $7,000,000 American Metal Company stock, seized during the war, to one Richard Merton, German metals magnate. They had Merton tell of a jolly New York dinner where the deal was consummated, a dinner attended by the late John T. King, Connecticut politician, by the late Jesse Smith, Daugherty intimate, by Thomas W. Miller, Aljpa Property custodian. They heard Merton tell of turning over to King a block of bonds ($441,000) for his "help and speed" in putting the transaction through.

"I have no complaints to make," declared Mr. Daugherty after the jury had been discharged. There was one other noteworthy utterance. "I will not be able to tell for a month," said United States District Attorney Buckner, "whether I'll bring them to trial again or not."

"ROOMS FOR TOURISTS".

Lean years are lurking just around the corner of the city hotel men's road. E. M. Stalter tells the American Hotel Association. A little cloud, no bigger than a man's hand five years ago has grown to portentous size. The cloud was and is marked "Tourists Accommodated." Mr. Stalter hoists the storm signal 'er it is too late.

Women On Jury Give Lawyers Heart Failure By Changing Their Minds

(By International News Service) Akron, O., Nov. 1.—The fickleness of the gentler sex, long celebrated in story and song, carries on right through the musty tones of the law, too. A case in point was the action of a "mixed" jury of men and women which recently tried Ed Robinson, accused of cutting a fellow employe at a rubber tire factory here.

He was overjoyed when two women members, having changed their minds between the jury room and the box, calmly declared that the verdict rendered was not their verdict. Judge L. S. Pardee gave additional instructions to the jury, and it retired again. A few minutes later, however, the defendant's attorney was downcast when the jurors filed back into the box and reported a unanimous guilty verdict, the two women having again changed their minds.

SMALL ACCOUNTS BURDEN TO BANKS

Paul P. Brown Declares Small Accounts Handicaps to Banks of State.

Banks in North Carolina are laboring under the handicap of many small accounts improperly looked after by depositors and are doing too much for their customers, declared Paul P. Brown, secretary of the North Carolina Bankers' Association in an address before the Raleigh Kiwanis Club yesterday.

Mr. Brown declared that any man who has less than an average of $50 per month on deposit but no right to kick on a service charge. A survey of 126 banks showed that there were 90,700 depositors whose accounts were less than $25 each month.

Wife Refused to Testify.

(By International News Service) Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 1.—"My wife can save me from the gallows. In a final showdown I believe she will testify for me rather than to let the father of her child be hanged. If she had been left alone at the first trial I believe she would have testified for me."

On this Clyde Reese Bachelor, under death sentence for the murder of his wife's father, Judge Lamar C. Smith, at Wetumpka, Ala., pins his hopes of escaping the extreme penalty.

Bachelor and Leonard were held in jail at Montgomery until a few days ago. Fear of mob violence caused them to be removed here for keeping. "Hays ought not to hang because the would not have done it had it not been for me," says Bachelor.
