State contends that is the reason Atlanta banker has entered the insanity plea at his trial.

FORMER EMPLOYEE TAKES THE STAND

Jack Armstrong says he saw nothing in Manley's conduct that indicated latter was not sane.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 12.—(AP)—Witnesses for the state today continued testimony tending to show that W. D. Manley, former head of the defunct Bankers Trust Company, is pleading insanity to escape criminal prosecution in connection with the failure of the Atlanta banking institution, and 53 small correspondent banking houses.

Following completion of the defense case yesterday, the state began introduction of evidence with the testimony of Jack Armstrong, who said he had been in Manley's employ for six years, and at no time during that period had his employer shown signs of insanity.

The defense closed its case with testimony by Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe, New York, who told the jury that Manley is suffering from "arterio-sclerotic dementia in an advanced form."

Dr. Jelliffe, who testified for the defense in the Harry K. Thaw trial in New York more than a decade ago, said he had warned Manley in 1924 that overwork would result in a complete mental breakdown. He said the banker's mind was now practically gone.

Mrs. W. D. Manley, the banker's wife; Dr. Barnes Sale, an X-ray specialist, and Dr. J. F. Lyons, pastor of Manley's church, also testified for the defense at yesterday's session.

Russian Men and Women Students to Serve in Red Army

Moscow, Nov. 12.—Military training for all university students both men and women, has been ordered by the communist government.

Under the order, issued yesterday, all students are required to take 180 hours instruction in military science during their regular four-year course and two months field practice during the summer. When their university course is finished the men must serve nine months in the army or, if they prefer, one year in the navy.

While the women students are required to take the course equally with the men, they are exempt from the two months field practice and active service in the regular army. As the new regulations apply to all universities and academies in Russia, tens of thousands of students will thus become potential soldiers.

Boys and Girls of Today Better; Professor of Ethics Explains Why

By MILLER HOLLAND
International News Service Staff Correspondent

San Francisco, Nov. 12.—The youth of a generation or so ago was morally worse than the youth of today in the opinion of Dr. Lynn T. White, professor of ethics in the San Francisco Theological Seminary of the Presbyterian Church.

And not only that, Dr. White says, but it is unfair to compare the morals of today's younger generation with those of the generation of thirty years ago.

"It is unportsmanlike, to put it mildly," Dr. White declares, "for us who did not have autos, movies, radios, flying machines and jazz orchestras when we were young, to hurl vituperative bolts at the boys and girls who are the first generation in history to have these things and who have not yet learned to use them in moderation."

Generation Improved

There is no doubt about it, Dr. White believes, but that the present younger generation is more intelligent, more thoughtful, and cleaner than the generation of thirty years or so ago.

Regarding the much talked-of degeneration and wildness among college students, Dr. White says:

"The undergraduates in our colleges and universities have already been educated beyond the moral standards of the alumni."

"A clergyman friend of mine confided to me that shortly before he left California to attend the 110th anniversary of his college in the east, he received three circular letters from undergraduates organizations beseeching him not to adorn his person with a tip pocket flask when he returned for the celebration."

NARROW ESCAPES THURSDAY NIGHT

Students Hampered Traffic in Raleigh Streets During a Big Demonstration There.

Raleigh, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Capital City police today considered placing a strict ban on student celebrations, not confined to college campuses, as a result of a near riot in the city's downtown business section last night when students celebrating State College's football victory over Duke University, and fratе motorists who were held up by the hilarious students monopolizing the street in a snake dance.

"Something has got to be done," said police captain Nat Warren, "it's getting to the stopping point. Somebody's going to get killed."

Last night came near producing a fatality as eye witnesses declared it was nothing less than a miracle that saved young R. H. Dunlap, of Charlotte, from being ground to death beneath the wheels of an automobile when its driver attempted to speed out of the student's grasp. Dunlap was knocked down and severely bruised, but reports from the hospital where he was carried indicate that there was no internal injuries, and he would be out in a few days. He gave his address as Charlotte.

New Date for Execution of Bandit-Slayer

(By International News Service)
Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 12.—Mell M. Gore, barber, will be rescheduled to death during the next few days and a new date set for his execution.

The supreme court has ordered the bandit-slayer of W. H. Clark, grocer, rescheduled under a technicality of the law. The date of execution, twice delayed already, was Saturday. The new ruling will mean several more weeks of life for the bandit.

Judge Humphries says he will reschedule the slayer just as soon as the official order from the Supreme Court reaches him. It is then the duty of Judge Humphries to set a new date for the execution.

Governor Walker, who granted a 60-day stay of execution to Gore recently, is considering an application for commutation of the sentence.

Hint to Flappers

Flappers who are annoyed by mashers may take a tip from the Boston flappers. For a long time a police captain has nonplussed by queries flooding his station: "Hello, is Helen there?" "May I speak to Margaret?" "Will you kindly ask Teresa to come to the phone?" etc.

It happens this way. When a masher asks a girl for her telephone number she gives him the number of the police station. The masher doesn't see the deception—until he calls up; the flapper is allowed to go her way in peace, and the chances are that she will never be bothered by the same masher again.

of San Francisco, agrees with Dr. White—at least insofar as girls are concerned.

Any man or woman who draws an unfavorable comparison between the "Girl of Today" and the "Girl of Yesterday" is chirping through his cheep, according to Eddie's version of what Dr. Scott said.

More Problems Today

Dr. Scott continued:

"The girl of today has not deteriorated morally, socially or intellectually, as we are so frequently told to believe."

"The girl of today has greater problems to solve and more varied opportunities to rubance than had her mother, who was the school girl when I was teaching twenty-two years ago."

"The girl of today has developed more initiative, more poise, and more purpose than her sister of two score years ago."

"It is true that the girl of today is called upon to encounter more in the way of temptation than was the case with her mother, but, in spite of this condition, she has risen to the occasion and has given a purposeful and hopeful account of herself."

"The girl of today is rendering more effective service in many lines of endeavor that formerly were more or less monopolized by her big brother and never by the girl of twenty years ago."

"You may accept it from me, if my personal contact with girls for twenty-two years means anything, that the miss of today is a more finished product than the girl of yesterday."

"In the name of all that is fair and honest, I invite all pin-brained critics of the current girl to sneer that off."

Thomasville Pupils Defy Teachers To Celebrate Anniversary of Peace

Thomasville, Nov. 11.—Following what appeared to be a prearranged schedule, between fifty and seventy-five Thomasville high school boys and girls today defied their teachers with one accord, and meeting upon the streets, formed the only group which celebrated Armistice Day in this city.

Gathering flags, the truant celebrators marched into the heart of town and formed a parade to the big chair, where swarming groups had their pictures made atop the monument. All their movements were carried on in an orderly manner.

Many people tonight contrasted the apathy among the remainder of Thomasville's residents with the bedlam which pervaded the air eight years ago. Many looked upon the act of the pupils as a lesson to those who ran their mills, stores and schools all day without regard for the occasion. Any censure of their action in leaving school without permission has been conspicuously lacking. Whether any punitive steps will be taken by the school authorities had not been discussed tonight.

Avoid Shaking Hands, Shake Germs Dr. Harris Advises New Yorkers

New York, Nov. 12.—Less hand-shaking, more germ-shaking. That was the health note sounded yesterday by Dr. Louis I. Harris, health commissioner, who said that the traditional Anglo-Saxon form of greeting was good enough in its way but not with pneumonia and influenza germs seeking other victims.

"This is not the first time I have issued warnings to New Yorkers about hand-shaking," said Dr. Harris. "It is not my purpose to frighten the good folks of New York, but this is the season of the year when pneumonia and influenza epidemics begin. New York is an enormous city; a city of transients, and I feel as a physician that hand-shaking has its dangers."

For instance, a person whose hands have perspired and are moist, shakes hands with a friend. The friend, whose hands may or may not have been soiled, contracts the disease germs on the other fellow's hand. Unconsciously, one puts one's hand up to ward off a sneeze and the germs are blown onto the hand. In hand-shaking, these germs are transmitted."

He cited the conclusion of an article in the current issue of Health News, written by Dr. W. H. Hill and Miss Helen Mathews, of the University of British Columbia:

"Hand-shaking is even more important in the transference of disease than the use of the common towel."

New Yorkers addicted to demonstrations of fraternity, Dr. Harris said, should observe two rules:

"Avoid touching the lips, nose or eyes after shaking hands."

"Do not touch food after shaking hands. No matter how often the hands are washed, it is likely they are a bit soiled."

REPUBLICANS SEEK WAYS TO CONTROL THE NEXT SENATE

Sen. Curtis Urges Maine Voters to Elect Republican at Special Election on November 29th.

BORAH WANTS TO LINE UP FRAZIER

Suggests That Republicans Permit Senator Frazier to Rejoin Ranks.—Has Been an Independent.

Washington, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Pro-Republican skirmishes in the fight that looms over control of the Senate in the 70th Congress have begun, although the organization of that body still is a year away.

Fearing the possibility of a situation similar to that of three years ago, when republican insurgents joined with Democrats in forcing selection of a democrat as chairman of the powerful Interstate Commerce Commission, although at other chairmanships were held by republicans, Senator Borah of Idaho has suggested that party leaders permit Senator Lynn J. Frazier, North Dakota, to rejoin the republican ranks after two years of wandering in the Senate as a lone figure since his banishment from the party councils.

Indications that the republicans will make every effort to organize the new Senate also were found in the appeal made by Senator Curtis, Kansas, as the party floor leader, to the republicans of Maine, to elect one of their number at the special election on November 29th, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Bert M. Fernald.

But even if the republicans win that contest, their position at the helm remains precarious, because they will have only 47 seats in the new senate, with the democrats having the same number, and the other two held by Senator Shoup, farmer-labor, of Minnesota, and the other by Senator Frazier.

If the latter vote with the republicans, that party would need only one more vote to have a clear majority for reorganization, provided all the insurgents vote as republicans until the senate offices had been filled.

Daylight Saving Legal

The supreme court decided that daylight saving laws, such as that in Massachusetts, in no way violate federal laws or federal rights, and that the federal courts have no jurisdiction over them.

The case was appealed to the court of last resort by the Massachusetts Grange, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, Engineers and Mechanics. They contended that the law was unconstitutional because it deprived persons of property without compensation; that it had caused a depreciation of $20,000,000 in farm values in the state, that it had necessitated the changing of railroad schedules to the annoyance and confusion of all, and that it had imposed burdens on the people by the change of school hours. They insisted that the federal courts had jurisdiction because standard time had been established by act of Congress.

Plan to Control Auto Accidents. (By International News Service)
Mobile, Ala., Nov. 12.—The city commission of this city at the next meeting will hear Mayor Hartwell's suggestions of a plan to curtail auto accidents.

Mobile has had a general increase in the number of auto mishaps for several months and drastic traffic laws, a war against speeders and reckless drivers, and an increased traffic police force are among the plans to check accidents.

New traffic rules, pertaining to speed on streets where traffic is heavy and passing cars on certain streets, will probably be enacted by the commission in order to check accidents.

'UNCLE JOE' CANNON DIES AT HOME; HAD BRILLIANT CAREER

Had Been Critically Ill for Several Days and His Death Was Not Unexpected.

SERVED LONG IN LOWER HOUSE

Was One of Best Known Men in Public Life, Due to His Long Career in Congress.

Danville, Ill., Nov. 12.—(AP)—"Uncle Joe" Cannon died here today at the age of ninety.

In the rambling brick mansion he had built for his bride many years ago life slowly ebbed away from the old statesman, whose iron hand tactics in Congress won him the title of "Czar of the public back in the days before his fall in 1910."

One of the first acts of Cannon, after he quit the arena of public life and went home to Danville to live his waning years as a private citizen, was to join the Methodist church near his home, where his wife Mary worshiped for many years before her death. Never a church member during his Congressional career, Cannon became a regular attendant and a substantial contributor.

Soon after his ninetieth birthday he turned over the first spade of earth for a new church, erected on the site of his late brother's home and expressed confidence that he would live to attend services in the edifice.

In the broad and rambling brownstone mansion which "Uncle Joe" built for his bride many years before, the veteran lived quietly with his two daughters. Most every day donning his black fedora and clenching between his teeth the cigar which came with him to fame, he walked down the shady street to the bank where he retained an office. There he sat for several hours, greeting friends, reading papers, dictating letters and reminiscing.

The business district of Danville except around the home which once had been in the outskirts of the city, but it remained his fortress, and he resisted its abandonment in favor of a new home farther out.

In his study lined with cartoons of the former speaker and with autographed photographs of famous friends, he sat daily to peruse his personal mail and to dictate to his stenographer. As his strength ebbed, he found increasing pleasure in listening to the radio and every day he read from his Bible.

He smoked less in his later years, but insisted that he never had smoked as much as the public intimated from his cartoons. He always smoked mild cigars, he said.

In the latter months of his life he remarked that he could not speak or think connectedly for very long, and recalled that he never was a consistent speaker, but that his oratory was made up rather of firebrands. He seldom attempted after his retirement to grant interviews, or to make a public appearance of any sort.

DONALD ROSSITER IS KILLED IN ACCIDENT

Was Passenger in Air Mail Plane Which Fell About 3,800 Feet.

Van Nuys, Calif., Nov. 12.—(AP)—Donald Rossiter, 21 years old, of Los Angeles, a passenger, was killed when a northbound air mail plane crashed from an altitude of 3,800 feet into Whitley Canyon, three miles south of here early today. The pilot, Chas. E. Widmer, also of Los Angeles, jumped to safety with the aid of his parachute.

The crash occurred shortly after the plane had left Los Angeles for Seattle. Widmer told police he was flying at an altitude of 3,800 feet when the plane ran into rain clouds. He said he saw his ship was about to go into a tail spin and called to Rossiter, who also was wearing a parachute, to jump. He said he shouted to Rossiter twice more to jump, and then he himself leaped from the plane. Widmer landed unhurt about a half mile from where the plane fell. He found the body of the passenger in the wreckage.

CAROLINA CONGRESS OF PARENTS AND TEACHERS

Universal Brotherhood Is Stressed as Basis for Successful Parenthood.

Tribune Bureau
Sir Walter Hotel
By J. C. BASKERVILL
Staff Correspondent

Burlington, Nov. 12.—Although there were many things taken up at the state convention of the North Carolina Congress of Parents and Teachers, which closed its three-day session here last night after an inspiring address on the subject of "World Wide Parenthood" by Dr. Elbert Russell, of Duke University, in which the principle of universal brotherhood was stressed as the basis for more successful parenthood, it was perhaps in the round table discussions dealing with child problems, met by every parent every day in the home, that the 350 delegates to the convention derived the greatest benefit.

The reason for this is that these discussions, instead of being theoretical generalizations, came more nearly meeting the individual need of each parent at the convention, than any other.

And because the success or failure of a child in school and in later life too, depends very largely on the health and physical condition of that child, the discussions dealing with child health problems were listened to with a great deal of interest. And of all the defects in child health, all are agreed that malnutrition is perhaps the most common. Neither is malnutrition limited only to children from poor or almost destitute families. In fact, records kept by nutrition experts in the various schools of this state show that the largest percentage of malnutrition is often found in schools which draw the majority of their pupils from the homes of the middle class and more wealthy people. And this fact makes the handling of the problem even more difficult.

Many children are suffering from malnutrition, whose parents are totally oblivious to the fact, it was brought out by the speakers. And while underweight is an unmistakable symptom, there are many other symptoms. Children who look tired, have rings under their eyes, round shoulders or stooped, are usually in this condition because they are undernourished, according to Dr. Albert S. Root, child specialist of Raleigh, in his discussion of malnutrition and proper food for the growing child.

There are of course a large number of causes of malnutrition, most of which can be included in four major causes, which Dr. Root gave as (1) physical defects, (2) lack of control of home, (3) fatigue, due to over exertion in play or at school and (4) food, whether balanced or unbalanced.

For the correction of malnutrition the extensive use of a vegetable diet was urged, and the substitution of whole wheat bread for bread made from white flour was declared to be essential. Rabbits fed on bread made from white flour, with no other food, die in from two to three weeks, experiments have shown, while if they are fed on whole wheat bread, they thrive, become fat and sleek and live indefinitely, Dr. Root declared.
