MANY BIG GAMES FOR GRID FANS TOMORROW

In the South, East and Middle West important games are scheduled for gridiron. The football schedule for tomorrow is one of the richest of the year in promises. Big teams in all sections of the nation meet and championships are hanging in the balances.

The Army plays Notre Dame in what should be one of the biggest games of the year, with the outcome maybe deciding the national honors. Always as much interest has been created in the game between Michigan and Ohio State for "Big Ten" honors.

Harvard plays Brown, an undefeated team, while Columbia and Pennsylvania are meeting. The Navy plays Georgetown and may get a surprise. The leading games in the South tomorrow include: Montgomery, Ala.—Alabama vs. Florida.

Clemson—Clemson vs. The Citadel, Birmingham, Ala.—Alabama Poly vs. Marquette, Va.—North Carolina vs. Davidson—Davidson vs. North Carolina.

Washington—George Washington vs. Randolph-Macon, New Orleans—Tulane vs. University of the South, Nashville, Tenn.—Vanderbilt vs. Tennessee.

Blackburg, Va.—V. P. I. vs. Washington & Lee, Bristol, Tenn.—King vs. Lenoir-Rhyne.

GOING HUNTING IN NORTH CAROLINA COMPLICATED

Many Laws to Befuddle the Seeker After Game. Raleigh, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Business of going hunting in North Carolina is a complicated one.

In addition to his gun and dog the Tar-Heel Nimrod must well-lug along a pack train to convey all the statutes extant in the state regarding the taking of wild game.

But soon the season will be open. It is already open in some localities and on some animals, but generally November 15th is regarded as the day.

November 15th this year falls on Monday. This will save a lot of hunters from violating the law, for in North Carolina it is plainly put: "Thou shalt not hunt on Sunday."

Other "shalt not" follow in riot. They converge from three sources to befuddle the innocent seeker after game. Federal, State and county laws confront him, and to make the matter worse they are rarely the same from one season to another.

Only recently the whole structure of hunting license fees was upset in North Carolina by a Supreme Court decision to the effect that no county could charge non-residents of the county but residents of the state more than residents of the county.

This changed the scale in some things like fifty counties for state residents, but left the bars down for passing it on out-staters. Some of the ducking grounds are reputed to derive goodly portions of their revenue from this source.

But it's the diversity of laws and not fees that constitute the hunter's burden. Federal, state and county. No uniformity in the opening date of seasons. The situation is such that to hunt legally in North Carolina the only safe method is to get in touch with county authorities where the hunting is to be done.

These regulations may be obtained in printed form from Henry M. London, state legislative librarian, at Raleigh. They are free.

All non-residents are required to obtain written permission before hunting in the state. Laws governing hunting by one person on the lands of another vary with different counties. Then, too, there is always the menace of running afoot posted land unless he has carefully searched records at local court houses before venturing into the field.

Under the state law the killing of buffalo and elk is prohibited. This has been jealously referred to as covering hunting in menageries only. The state law likewise prohibits the export of quail, grouse, pheasant, wild turkey, woodcock, snipe or beach birds.

Non-residents, however, are allowed to take a specified number of such game out of the state personally during a season.

Loss of Sleep Stimulates Brain But Hurts the Body

New York, Nov. 11.—Loss of sleep promotes rather than decreases the efficiency of the brain, but takes it out of the body, it has been shown by recent experiments in the psychologist's laboratory. Results of these experiments, started at Yale and carried on at Colgate University, are published in the current issue of Industrial Psychology, Colgate University publication. The article by Donald A. Laird, head of the department, and William Wheeler, Jr., of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, tells concisely "what it costs to lose sleep."

Three young men and fifteen daily difficult multiplication problems were the primary materials of the experiment. Also included in the laboratory equipment were alarm clocks wakening the students after two hours' less sleep than their habitual quota, a stopwatch to time their multiplication exercises, a mathematical expert to check their results for errors, and an apparatus measuring their oxygen consumption.

It was found that while each young man did his sums from several seconds to more than a minute more quickly, and with no more mistakes on the shorter sleep ration, he used up from two to three times as much energy in the act.

The young men were first drilled for several weeks in mental multiplication. Problems such as 87x539 were solved without the use of pencil and paper, fifteen being solved each day at a single sitting, and a solution time and number of errors being noted.

After the "waking level" was reached, so that practice no longer served to improve, the young men were subjected to a week's experiment on eight hours' sleep as the "control" period. They were then tested on six hours' sleep nightly. "In all subjects, in fact, the mental work seems to be improved upon partial insomnia," says the writers.

Norway Says Goodbye To Prohibition With Landslide Vote In Referendum

By ARNE KILDAL. International News Service Special Correspondent. Oslo, Nov. 11.—If anybody had said a few days ago that liquor prohibition would be abolished in Norway as a consequence of the new referendum on the matter, he would have been mercilessly ridiculed. Many believed that the dry majority of 184,000 votes which the prohibition referendum in 1919 gave as a result, would be somewhat reduced, but no admirer of whimsy and gin had the audacity to predict that the majority for prohibition would be favoring into a majority of over 100,000 favoring the opposite side.

It has been a veritable landslide, and it is the general opinion that the prohibition system has forever been doomed in the country of the Vikings. The disappointment of the dry forces is great, but they take their defeat in the right spirit and declare frankly that the will of the people must be respected and that the Storting has no other thing to do, when it meets after ten years, than to abolish prohibition.

In the circles of the wet a feeling of deep relief is manifest, not least in the city of Oslo that voted down prohibition by a margin of 87,000. A large and hilarious crowd assembled outside the windows of the newspaper offices during the election night and when reports were published showing progress for the wet, they were received with enthusiastic applause and shouting. A few whistles tried to make themselves heard, but apparently they were too few and drowned in the violent outbursts of exultation on the part of the wets. When particularly encouraging reports appeared the opponents of prohibition who restrictions will be proposed, and it is not unlikely that the Storting, where a majority of the members favors prohibition will increase the number of restrictions along this line. However, everybody seems to agree that the Storting cannot disregard the will of the people and there can be no doubt but that prohibition will be abolished.

It is a general feeling that the result of the referendum will influence the situation in other countries as well. Finland, where total prohibition has been practiced for the last few years, it is said that the Norwegian situation may help the wets to force through a similar public referendum, and probably with a similar result. Likewise, it is held that the tremendous defeat in Norway will influence the situation in Sweden and Denmark, and make the fanatics refrain from trying the fatal prohibition experiment in their countries. "It is a long way to the United States," it is a long way to the United States, even will look up and take notice.

Rain In Blowing Rock-Boone Section Turns Into Sleet. Blowing Rock, Nov. 11.—The slow soaking rain that fell over the Blowing Rock-Boone section Tuesday and Wednesday night turned to sleet Wednesday morning, with a few snow flurries in some places. The rain that had fallen on the trees froze Wednesday morning and gave the forested mountainsides around the town a grayish color.

It is interesting to note that while the cities show a decisive majority against prohibition, the country districts give a small majority the other way. When interviewed as to the cause to be taken by the government, Mr. Morrill, secretary of social affairs, asserts that the cabinet in the near future will submit a proposition to the Storting recommending free sale of liquor under government control, in a similar manner to the free sale of strong wines which has been in use here for the last few years.
