

DOHENY TESTIMONY BEFORE COMMITTEE ALLOWED BY COURT

Story as Told by Oil Magnate Will Be Presented as Evidence by Prosecution at His Trial.

FALL STATEMENT ACCEPTED ALSO

Defense Made Strong Objection But Was Overruled on Every Point Presented to the Court.

Washington, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Edward L. Doheny's own story of his $100,000 transaction with Albert B. Fall as told before the Senate oil committee was admitted in evidence today in the Doheny-Fall oil conspiracy trial.

Justice Hoehling's decision placed the Senate committee record before the jury and was a sweeping victory for the prosecution. It is expected, however, to become one basis of an appeal by the defense, in the event the former cabinet official and the oil man are convicted.

The justice acted after long argument by attorneys who presented their contentions while the jury was excluded from the court room.

The decision opened the way for the prosecution to continue its presentation of evidence on which it hopes to prove that the $100,000 was part of a conspiracy which resulted in award of the Elk Hills oil lease to Doheny while Fall was secretary of the interior.

The court's opinion was sweeping. It overruled every objection raised by the defense and permitted the statement made to the committee by Fall to go before the jury along with that of Doheny. In this statement submitted to the committee in writing, Fall said the $100,000 which he purchased additional ranch property in New Mexico, came from Edward B. McLean, publisher of the Washington Post.

The Doheny testimony was given before the committee in January, 1924, when the oil magnate appeared a second time at his own request and said that he had sold Fall, an old-time associate, the Elk Hills oil lease for $100,000, which was then called a private loan. The cash was sent to Washington in custody of Edward L. Doheny, Jr., and Fall gave in return a note which was produced before the Senate committee with the signature torn off.

Justice Hoehling held that neither the Doheny testimony nor the statement of Fall constituted evidence within the meaning of section 850, of the revised statutes which prohibits use of congressional testimony in subsequent criminal trials involving the person testifying. The court noted that the oil man had appeared before the committee voluntarily after he had previously testified in response to a formal summons, and that the Fall statement was submitted on Fall's own initiative.

The justice quoted Doheny's statement before the committee in which he said in requesting permission to appear the second time: "I wish to state the full facts to the committee, and to the public."

Such a statement, said the court, removed all suggestions of compulsory testimony against self interests in contravention of the fifth amendment to the constitution.

The lawyers' arguments on the point were concluded Friday and Justice Hoehling's decision was read from the bench as soon as the court met this morning. The jury, excused from the court room during the argument, then was recalled, and government counsel resumed their case with the reading of Fall's committee statement.

EXPECTS A FORTUNE OF TWELVE MILLION DOLLARS

Durham Woman to Share in Estate of Chief Justice Marshall. Durham, N. C., Nov. 28.—Some time around the first of the year Mrs. Mary Happer, of this city, expects to receive a fortune of $12,000,000. She has received word that the government, which has held the property, which is to be divided among the surviving heirs for many years, will hand over to her her share of the estate, which will reach the figure mentioned.

Recently a will has come to light by the late of the late Virginia Marshall, written by John Marshall, the first chief justice of the United States Supreme Court, for his vast estate, in which the direct descendants were to secure the property. Mrs. Happer has claimed her share under this provision, claiming that her father was the last of the direct descendants. Two brothers of the Durham woman will also come in for their proportionate part of the estate, she claims.

COTTON STORING PLAN NOT WORKING WITH SUCCESS

Reason is That Most of Crop Has Already Been Sold. Washington, Nov. 27.—The Coolidge administration plan to store 4,000,000 bales of cotton, in order to advance the price to the southern planters, it is revealed today at the federal farm loan board, is not working very well. It was said there by one of the southern members who would not allow his name to be used, that the plan was impractical, that the authors of it knew it would not work. It was merely a "gesture" of the enemies in the administration, of the much feared Tamm bill, and it had been encouraged by financial interests to keep the southern farmers from becoming radical, and joining the "agrarian revolutionists" of the west.

It has now been more than a month since the administration plan to loan the farmers in the south $165,000,000 for the purpose of retaining 4,000,000 bales of this year's crop for a period of 18 months, was launched. Not one penny of that money has been paid to any farmer, and probably will not be, because at the time the plan was announced the farmers had sold practically all the cotton they had produced.

Let Kerosene to Avoid Sweeping, in Negro's Plea.

Baltimore, Nov. 27.—James Walker, negro, may be shiftless in body but his mind works fast. Arraigned in police court on an arson charge, he explained: "Judge, I didn't intend to set fire to the house. After the kerosene was split on the rug I just set a match to it to save the trouble of sweeping it up." The excuse failed.

The self-depreciation that is a cloak for shirking responsibility is not the kind of weakness that shall benefit the earth.

Will Taxes Be Increased or Reduced by Next Legislature?

Tribune Bureau, 815 Walter Hotel, BY J. C. BASKERVILLE.

Raleigh, Nov. 29.—Taxpayers are they going to be increased or reduced in the approaching session of the legislature?

This is a question not only uppermost in the mind of politicians here in the state capital, but in the minds of the people all over the state as well, especially since there has been a well defined move gotten on foot by those opposed to the present state administration to organize a spending orgy in the forthcoming legislature. But the men who realize that every dollar expended by the legislature must be paid for by the taxpayer are already asking themselves and others to show where this additional revenue may be obtained. For if the legislature should decide to give every institution and department "every dollar asked for," as some are already advocating, it would require at least $5,000,000 additional revenue, and perhaps more.

The income for the general fund, not including the highway department, for the last fiscal year was a little less than $12,000,000, and although the appropriations for this period exceeded the actual income by means of the 5 per cent horizontal cut and other savings in the administrations of the state's finances, actual expenditures for the 1925-26 fiscal year were held down to $11,702,353. However, the estimated expenditures for the current fiscal year amount to more than $13,000,000 with slight indications that the revenue will exceed $12,000,000. Thus it becomes immediately evident that if the legislature increases the appropriations to $15,000,000 or more, which would be necessary to grant the requests already made before the budget commission, some method of increasing the revenue of the state, through increased taxes, or additional taxes, will have to be worked out.

What avenues of taxation are still open, and what possible increases could be made in tax schedules already existing?

Perhaps one of the first things the lay mind turns to in thinking of taxable sources of income is corporations. They are generally thought of as being wealthy and amply able to bear taxation without feeling the burden in proportion as individuals and smaller businesses do.

But, it must be remembered that North Carolina is already levying one of the highest taxes levied by any State in the United States on franchises of corporations, likewise the taxes levied on incomes of corporations and individuals are high, and not far from the constitutional limit, which is a 6 per cent. Tax experts point out that it is possible to tax corporation or individuals only to a certain point, and that if that point is passed, the income derived tends to diminish rather than increase, because whenever a corporation finds that it is being taxed beyond the point where it causes to earn a marginal return on its investment, it has to do one of two things: either close up and quit business or move to another state where the tax load is not so excessive. So far North Carolina has not crossed beyond the point of danger in taxing corporations, and has been the gainer in a number of instances where large corporations have moved their organizations bodily to this state as a result of excessive taxation in other states.

Thus it is that economists argue with most effective logic that it is better to depend upon a large volume of taxes from numerous industries, moderately taxed, than to drive away these industries through the levying of too high a tax. And if an attempt is made to increase the tax on corporations in the state at present, with the tax rate already perilously near the danger point, the state is likely to find that the income resulting would be less than at present.

The same thing holds true in connection with the income tax, both on corporations and individuals. Some may argue that these taxes should be increased to the full amount allowed under the constitution—6 per cent. But here again the economists and tax experts say that while a slight increase in revenue might result, such a boost in the tax rate on incomes would have an extremely harmful effect on the credit standing of the state, in that it would in effect indicate that it had exhausted its taxing power.

Another significant consideration in connection with the question of increasing the state's revenue is the increased cash that this liberality would entail. And in this day and age in which the people as a whole keep informed on these matters, and realize that in the end it is they who have to pay, they are not going to leap before they take a look. The taxpayers of the state as well as of the nation are insisting more and more that they be given 100 cents worth of service for 100 cents paid in taxes, and they are checking up on their public servants in office constantly to see that this is done.

Consequently it is not likely that the people of the state of North Carolina, who pay the taxes to support the government, are going to approve any wild, harum-scarum plan for prohibitions expenditures to any whatsoever just because they ask it. Neither are they going to permit the legislature to kill the goose that lays the golden egg by increasing taxes beyond the point where the marginal utility of the agencies taxed will be impaired.

In other words, the taxpayers of the state want a fiscal policy in the state whereby the most can be received for every dollar expended, with all unnecessary expenditures eliminated. And they want these expenditures kept within the revenue of the state. In other words, they want a balanced budget which is exactly what the present state administration is striving for.

MRS. HALL ASKED FOR MEANING FOR WORD "CASUALTY"

She Said She Asked Police Day After Husband Disappeared if Any "Casualties" Had Been Reported

SIMPSON INSISTS UPON DEFINITION

She Says in Her Opinion Word Does Not Mean a Violent Death as Suggested by Prosecutor.

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Differences of opinion between Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and Prosecutor Alexander Simpson over the definition of the word "casualty" first appearing in the Hall-Mills case Saturday, continued in her cross examination today.

The issue arose today soon after Mrs. Hall resumed her testimony in her own behalf. She had testified that she telephoned police headquarters Friday morning after her husband had failed to return home Thursday night, asking if there had been any casualties reported.

"Why did you ask the police if there had been any violent deaths reported when you did not know your husband had been murdered?" asked Prosecutor Simpson.

"I did not," said Mrs. Hall. "I asked if there had been any casualties."

"Casualties means violent deaths," said Simpson.

"Not necessarily," said Mrs. Hall. Simpson had attempted to show by his questioning Saturday that the use of the word "casualty" in her inquiry to the police indicated knowledge that her husband had been murdered.

Defense counsel then said that the word had no such meaning, but was properly used in referring to possible accidents.

The court gave no official ruling and no call was sent for a dictionary.

This was the first time Mrs. Hall had attempted to correct the prosecutor. Her brother Willie Stevens in his testimony several times called the lawyer's attention to lapses in pronunciation and use of terms although no actual definition was involved.

The court was fifteen minutes late getting underway today. Mrs. Hall wore the same black coat and hat, making up her costume Saturday, the sombre note being relieved only by a white collar to her black dress and dark gray gloves.

All three of the defendants showed evidences of good spirits, when they took their seats.

Henry Stevens greeted several cousins, and Willie Stevens in addition to exchanging hand claps with many of the family group, shook hands warmly with John Rann, the court clerk. Mrs. Hall smiled at the crowd about her chair, but she was austere again when she walked to the witness stand.

The State was assembling witnesses to be put forward in rebuttal as the defense prepared to rest its case.

Henry L. Bickham, former New Jersey state treasurer, who testified for the state, was in the court room. Records of his witness in the U. S. Army, Navy and Marine Corps have been introduced by the defense. He testified that the late Azariah Deekham, the one time prosecutor of Somerset County, paid him $2,500 to leave the state after he had investigated the Hall-Mills case over a period of months including an interview with Henry Stevens. The defendant denied having seen Bickham, saying that he was in Florida at the time Bickham said he had seen him at Lavalette.

On Stand Four Hours.

Decision Affects Locomotives' Equipment.

Washington, Nov. 29.—(AP)—States are prohibited from prescribing equipment for railroad locomotives operating within their borders, the Supreme Court declared today in the cases from Wisconsin and Georgia.

BOONE JAIL'S LONE PRISONER BREAKS OUT

Without Even a Keeper For Company, He Digs Hole Through Wall and Departs.

Boone, Nov. 28.—Last Week, Watauga county's jail had neither jailer nor prisoners. Later, it had one prisoner, one Presnell, whose Christian name was not recorded, but still no jailer. Without even a keeper for company, Presnell became lonely as he pondered the charge of passing a worthless check, which had been lodged against him. In search of companionship he broke a hole in the wall of the jail and departed.

And so once more Watauga county's jail has neither jailer nor prisoners. Shows 16 Times, Kills 15 Rabbits.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Opened Steady at Decline of Three Points to an Advance of One Point. New York, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The cotton market opened steady today at a decline of three points to an advance of one point, active months showing net losses of two to four points on early trading under Southern hedging and local selling, probably promoted by relatively easy showing of the later cables from Liverpool.

Talk of somewhat freer spot offerings in the South toward the end of the last week and rumors of probable further tenders on December contracts here were other factors in the decline, but offerings were not heavy and were absorbed by trade buying and covering. December eased off to 12.54 and March to 12.61, the market holding within a point or two of these prices at the end of the first hour.

Private cables said hedge selling had neutralized month-end calling in the Liverpool market.

Cotton futures opened steady: Dec. 12.55; Jan. 12.40; March 12.62; May 12.86; July 13.02.

SENATE'S CONTROL AT STAKE IN THE ELECTION IN MAINE

Special Election to Determine Successor to Senator Bert M. Fernald Who Died Recently.

MAN CHOSEN TO HAVE BIG POWER

There are Now 47 Democrats and 47 Republicans in Senate.—Campaign Was Bitter One.

Portland, Me., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Control of the senate in the new Congress is at stake in Maine's special election today, to determine a successor to Senator Bert M. Fernald, who died in office. A sensational campaign involving charges of excessive expenditures (and the Ku Klux Klan has had possibilities of an aftermath in an inquiry by a senatorial committee.

The party alignment of the new senate as determined by the regular election early in the month is: Republicans 47, Democrats 47, and farmer-labor 1.

Arthur R. Gould, Republican nominee, who has been the subject of charges within as without his party, and who was repudiated by Governor Brewer, Republican, but supported by Senator Hale and the party machine, was opposed at the polls today by Fulton J. Redman, Democrat. Gould was cleared at a public hearing before Secretary of State Ball of charges of having exceeded the $1,500 expense limitation imposed by law on primary campaigns.

ANOTHER FEATURE OF VOLSTEAD ACT UPHOLD

Supreme Court Says Physicians Can Be Regulated in Whiskey Prescriptions.

Washington, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Volstead act restrictions upon the quantity of whiskey physicians may prescribe to patients each ten days, were sustained today by the Supreme Court.

The decision was by a sharply divided court, four members, Justices Sutherland, McReynolds, Stone and Butler, dissenting. The dissenting opinion was that the state had exclusive jurisdiction to regulate the use of intoxicating liquor for other than beverage purposes, and that Congress had not prohibited the use of whiskey for medical purposes, and it did not have authority to do so.

The decision, which was rendered in a case brought by Dr. Samuel W. Lambert, of New York City, marked another victory for the government which has been sustained by the court almost without exception in its program for dry law enforcement.
