

Would Change Date for Securing Auto License From June to December

State Senator Canaday Says Droughton and Page Favor the Proposed Change in Law.

WOULD AID THE FARMER, HE SAYS

Senator Sharp Is Against Equalization Fund and His Bill Would Change Matters Some.

Raleigh, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A measure to change the automobile registration statute and one to equalize taxes on property were presented today in the State Senate.

Senator C. C. Canaday, of Johnston, proposed to amend the Consolidated Statutes, changing the automobile registration date from June 30 to December 31st.

Senator J. M. Sharp, of Rockingham, would repeal a section of the Consolidated Statutes to the effect that public schools of the state could be operated for 6 months from funds raised by equalized taxes on property.

His bill is designed to relieve counties from levying any tax on public schools, and would put this obligation on the State.

SOME IMPORTANT WORK OF LEGISLATURE

Interest in Broughton's Bill to Substitute Life Imprisonment for the Death Penalty.

The Tribune Bureau Sir Walter Hotel By J. C. BASKERVILL Raleigh, Jan. 13.—The introduction of the revenue and appropriations bills in the house and offering of three bills looking toward the expansion of the present judicial system through the creation of four additional judicial districts, with a revised form of districting and rotation, introduced by R. O. Everett, of Durham county, were the principal items of interest that developed in the general assembly Wednesday, although there was a total of 25 bills introduced in the house and seven in the senate.

Considerable interest was shown in the bill offered in the senate by Senator J. M. Broughton, of Raleigh, to substitute life imprisonment instead of the death penalty for three of the four present capital offenses, invoking the death penalty only in case of conviction of rape. Some interest was also expressed in the bill offered by Senator M. K. Blount, of Greenville, requiring the constitution of the United States to be taught in the schools of the state.

HAS McLEAN'S IDEA OF ECONOMY GONE BEYOND THE MARK?

With the Result That the General Assembly is Going to Overdo the Matter, Is Question Asked.

WHAT IS RESULT GOING TO BE?

Committees Are Inclined to Take Budget Recommendation as Maximum Instead of Minimum.

Tribune Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel. BY J. C. BASKERVILL.

Raleigh, Jan. 14.—Has Governor A. W. McLean's economy idea overdone the mark, with the result that this general assembly is going to overdo the matter? This would seem at least plausible, in view of tendencies already noticed in both house and senate, and in the two relatively short hearings on the appropriations bill before the house and senate committees.

What, then, is the result going to be? Nothing else than that a number of state departments and institutions are going to find themselves with an appropriation far under—not what was requested—but less than what was recommended by the budget commission and Governor McLean, according to a number who have been watching the trend carefully for the past ten days.

Those who thought Governor McLean was stingy in his budget recommendations are now almost ready to admit he is an advocate of extravagance compared with many of the members of the general assembly, said a close observer of the legislative trend today.

Whether these are indications of merely a temporary condition, or whether the condition is likely to grow, cannot now be foreseen, of course. But should it remain and continue to grow, it is generally admitted that there might be some danger for the administration's program as a result of it.

WOODEN MODEL OF NORRIS OFFICE IS OFFERED AT TRIAL

The Model Shows Room in Which D. E. Chipps Was Killed on July 18th by the Noted Preacher.

MODEL WAS FIRST EVIDENCE GIVEN

Rev. J. Frank Norris Is Being Tried for His Life in Austin for Slaying of the Lumberman.

Austin, Tex., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A wooden model of the Rev. J. Frank Norris' office and its surroundings at Fort Worth was introduced by the prosecution as its first evidence when the trial of the Baptist minister was opened today.

The model shows the second floor of the 4-story building adjoining the church in which Chipps was killed. It shows the stairway up which he climbed to his death last July 18, the ante-room he entered before approaching Norris, and the office in which he was shot three times as he protested to the pastor against attacks on Mayor H. C. Meacham, of Fort Worth.

The exhibit was placed in front of the witnesses stand where the jury may look down on the roofless interior as though it were on an adjoining building peering down into the Norris office.

About fifty witnesses were sworn in, Mayor H. C. Meacham did not respond when his name was called, but William McLean of the prosecution, said he was in town and would appear in a few minutes.

An embalmer and an undertaker described the wounds in detail. The purpose of the state is to show that Chipps was moving away from Norris when shot and that he had his hands up in the attitude of protecting himself.

One wound was in the left side, the bullet moving to the heart, and two others were in the right side near the neck, witnesses testified. The bullet in the right side also penetrated the elbow as Chipps had his arm across his body, a witness said.

The check was drawn by the city of Salisbury, payable to the city of Salisbury to cover engineering supervision of the Spencer end of Salisbury avenue, connecting link between the two cities.
