Man of Affairs.

Washington, Feb. 22.—(P)—Setting in motion today the movement for a great celebration of George Washington's 200th anaiversary in 1932, President Coolidge in an address to Congress described the first of the nation's leaders as a man who had a very high standard of public and private honor and as one whose record as a practical business man had never received the attention to which it was entitled.

The President's address to a joint session of the senate and house was arranged to put into practical operation the plans for the 1932 celebration. And through a nationwide hookup of radio broadcasting stations millions of persons throughout the nation heard the extent of being able to forecast with remarkable vision the growth of the nation he founded and the changing conditions which it would meet. But essentially he was a very practical nan. He amplyaed the problems before him with a clear intellect. Having a thorough understanding he attacked them with rourage and energy, with patience and persistence."

Declaring the facts of Washington's life, though a matter of record, were not easily accessible, the President said that many books written about him, "often scholarly and eloquent," had encountered the temptation to represent him as an heroic fire about him, "often scholarly and eloquent," had encountered the temptation to represent him as an heroic fire about him, "often scholarly and eloquent," had encountered the temptation to represent him as an heroic fire about him, "often scholarly and eloquent," had encountered the temptation to represent him as an heroic fire about him, "often scholarly and eloquent," had encountered the temptation to represent him as an heroic fire about him, "often scholarly and eloquent," had encountered the temptation to represent him as an heroic fire about him, "often scholarly and eloquent," had encountered the temptation to represent him as an heroic fire about him, "often scholarly and eloquent," had encountered the temptation to represent him as an heroic fir
