Ramsay MacDonald Ends Visit.
New York, April 26.—At one of the few public functions he has attended during his present visit to America, Ramsay MacDonald, the former British premier, will be the guest of the Foreign Policy Association at a dinner at the Waldorf this evening. Immediately following the dinner, Mr. MacDonald and his daughter will embark for home.

Salisbury Enjoys a Quiet Election.
Salisbury, April 25.—Salisbury today enjoyed one of its quietest and most orderly elections. It was a primary to select 10 names from which in May to elect five commissioners to launch the new managerial form of government. Twenty-three men offered and up to 10 o'clock tonight only one ward out of four was ready to report on results.

ROUNDS OUT 20 YEARS' SERVICE
During Part of This Time He Was All Broken in Health, Having Been Poisoned About Twelve Years Ago.—He Declares That the Herb Extract Remedy Helped Him More Than Anything Else.

"After having been poisoned about twelve years ago it just seemed like I could never find a thing that would straighten me out. My system was all out of order and nothing seemed to have any regulating effect. Many a time I felt as though I would have to give up my job on account of ill health, but I finally found the right medicine for which I am very grateful," said W. P. Fowler, with the Southern Utilities Company for 20 years and who resides at 1243 Pogram Street, Charlotte, N. C., when he stopped in at the Charlotte Drug Company, a few days ago, to tell the Herb Extract representative what his medicine had done for him after a thorough trial. "Your medicine is a great laxative and reconstructive tonic combined and I must admit it is the only medicine I could ever find that would thoroughly clean out, regulate and tone up my system after I had been poisoned. This great medicine brought me greater earning power in that it restored my health on account of ill health which was the case before I used it. It relieved me of a stubborn case of constipation, put my digestive organs in splendid working condition and toned up my system in a general way. What more could any one ask for when taking any medicine than that it makes them feel like a new person? That is just what your great herb medicine did for me and naturally, I feel as though I will never be able to praise it enough for all it has done for me in relieving me of my troubles. Today I feel fine in every respect, have a good appetite, plenty of energy, sleep fine at night and now my work is a pleasure with good health. I am more than glad to give it my heartiest endorsement." Gibson Drug Company.

MAILING BLANKS FOR LAND RE-VALUATION

Every Piece of Land in State Must Be Listed Under New Machinery Act.

The Tribune Bureau Sir Walter Hotel Raleigh, April 26.—Blanks upon which must be listed the number of acres and approximate value of every piece of land in the state, according to its present and true valuation, are being mailed out to the county supervisors in all the counties in the state, with a letter explaining the provisions of the new machinery act with regard to the regular quadrennial re-valuation of the property in the state by LeRoy Martin, secretary of the State equalization board, though the letter is being signed by the State board of assessment, which is made up of the attorney general, the commissioner of revenue and the chairman of the corporation commission.

The form which has been sent out was prepared by the State board of assessment at the request of the equalization board and the letter points out that the information its requests is very important to both boards, especially the equalization board, since this information is essential to the distribution of the $3,250,000 equalization fund to the various counties. The letter asks that these blanks be distributed to the tax assessors immediately and that they be properly filled out and returned as soon as possible.

These blanks call for the name, race and address of the owner of the tract, its description, as well as adjoining lands and kind of highway it abuts upon, the number of acres of cleared, pasture, waste, timber and cutover land, the value of each per acre and the value of the buildings upon it. At the bottom of the blank is a space containing the same number of blank spaces, to contain the revised estimates to be made by the assessor.

Part of the recent law outlining the powers and duties of the board of assessors in the various counties is quoted as follows:

"They shall have authority to personally visit and inspect any property, real or personal, which is to be assessed; they shall make diligent inquiry as to its value; and have authority to subpoena and examine under oath witnesses who may have knowledge of the value of property at its true value in money as defined in this act, and make a detailed statement on each and every piece and kind of real property together with its true value in money, and return to the county supervisor upon blanks furnished for that purpose."

CAPITAL-LABOR THEME DISCUSSED BY DANIELS
Better Understanding Between Employer and Employee Needed, Raleigh Man Says.

Tribune Bureau Sir Walter Hotel Raleigh, April 26.—What the world needs today, especially with democracy being more and more threatened by dictators on every hand, is a better understanding between employers and employees, so that they may work together toward the elimination of class and misunderstanding, and thus build up real efficiency and mutual accomplishment, Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the Navy, and editor and publisher of the Raleigh News and Observer, told the members of the American Business Club and their "bosses," who were their guests at the regular weekly luncheon.

With dictatorships gaining ground in Italy, Russia and other European countries, and with the growth of the idea in those countries that the masses are no longer capable of thinking for themselves or governing themselves, it becomes increasingly important that in order to combat the spread of these ideas, we in this country strive to eliminate class, and continue to strive for the attainment of real democracy, Mr. Daniels told the club.

"Nothing will make the world better as quickly as for employers and employees to learn to work together in the handling of their common problems, and for them to have more consideration for each other," Mr. Daniels said. "If bosses will learn not to try to 'lord' it over their employees, and realize that the employees of today will be the bosses and business men of tomorrow, and try to get their point of view and share their opinions with his, not only will business have taken a great step forward, but civilization will have materially advanced.

"And until those who are in positions of power and authority learn to say to themselves 'What would I do if I were in the other man's position' will the world have advanced in the true spirit of understanding and brotherly love as it should. Another thing that employers should consider is that most of those they employ are young men and women, in whose hands the destiny of the future rests. Thus it is increasingly important that they should be given a large amount of consideration, and be made to feel that the responsibility of the undertaking they are engaged in depends as much upon them as upon the 'boss.'"

In beginning his address, Mr. Daniels said that he had turned to his dictionary in an effort to find out just what a "boss" was, and that he found a large number of different definitions, among them some of the following: "aprotuberance," a "bulky animal," a "fat woman," a "political dictator," a "bovine animal" a "cushion" and then finally a "master workman," which was the more accurate definition of the ideal "boss."

"It is not necessary for any man in a position of authority to put on lugs in order to assert that authority—it is not necessary for him to make out of himself a protuberance, and protrude himself into the private affairs or even the duties of those associated with him. When a 'boss' does this, it is an indication that his brain is too little for his job," Mr. Daniels said.

"On the other hand, the successful 'boss' is the one who works with his men, instead of making them work for him, and who seeks to understand his men and help them in the better performance of their tasks. And the employer who does this increases his own efficiency and the efficiency of his entire organization. It is good business, it is good psychology and it is good religion, and the world is better off. More bosses of this sort are needed."

Over $15,000,000 Advertising Increase in 1926 is Revealed.
New York April 25.—National newspaper advertising in the United States was $15,000,000 greater in 1926 than in 1925, it is estimated in the annual report of the American Newspaper Publishers' association, made public today.

The total of national advertising in 1925 was $220,000,000. In 1926 this was increased to $235,000,000, the report estimates. This was an estimated increase of 6.7 per cent.

"The Greatest Tire In The World"

Recently Goodyear announced "The Greatest Tire in the World."

They said this new tire has an All-Weather Tread specially-designed for balloon tires, that it does away with all existing ideas of how long a balloon should wear, that it gives better traction, more non-skid.

Now—we know something about tires. We tested this one, looked it over, cut one up, tried it for everything we could think of.

Take OUR word for it, it IS the world's greatest tire.

We have your size. Come in and see it. More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind.
