TRAINING YOUTH TO BE USEFUL AT HOME

Training in Home Making Problems Stressed During Better Homes Week.

Washington, D. C., May 6.—Training in the problems of home making is desirable for children as well as for adults. In the preface to the Guidebook of the Better Homes in America campaign, Secretary Hoover states: "Children, the home builders of the coming generation, should receive practical training in the problems of home making and should begin early in life to set their minds to work on the values of well-managed homes through courses conducted in civics, in manual training, and in the practice houses increasingly established for home economics classes."

A phase of the Better Homes in America movement which has created no little community interest has been the demonstration of home management houses and home economics cottages in Better Homes campaigns. These home management houses connected with colleges and normal schools, and the home economics cottages which belong to secondary schools are dwelling houses where classes in home economics practice home making and carry on all the work of a typical home. Such houses in all sections of the country were opened and demonstrated during Better Homes Week—April 24th to May 1st.

Plans for the demonstration of these houses have, at this early date, been received by Better Homes in America headquarters at Washington from more than fifty schools where such houses are located. It is probable that more than a hundred of these houses will be entered in the campaign by Better Homes Week. The opening of these home making houses with demonstrations, exhibits, and lecture programs offers scientific and up-to-date knowledge for the home makers of the community and an opportunity for these home makers to see good planning and interior decoration, and to observe the better ways of carrying on household activities.

In some communities new home management houses and home economics cottages will be demonstrated. Construction work is being hurried along in order to have the house completed by Better Homes Week. The Utah Agricultural College at Logan, Utah, is to open its beautiful new modern home which has just been completed. In Perkinston, Mississippi, a new home economics cottage will be furnished for the demonstration. The State Agricultural College at Corvallis, Oregon, has just purchased a second home management house which has been extensively remodeled by the college, putting in all modern devices and improvements. One or both of the home management houses at Corvallis will be used for Better Homes demonstration houses this year. A new cottage is also being built at Woodlawn, Va., which will be opened during Better Homes week.

Among other home management houses which will be demonstrated, some will be repaired and remodeled, others will be redecorated, or will add new pieces of furniture, and some will have the grounds replanned and planted. In Tucuman, New Mexico, where a home economics cottage has been recently acquired which will be demonstrated during Better Homes week, boys have done carpentry work, put in window panes and made minor repairs. Girls of home economics classes have done all the redecorating, painting and refinishing walls and reconditioning furniture. The girls also will plant the grounds. In many of these home making cottages, boys of carpentry and manual training classes have added such equipment as study tables, cabinets, cupboards, built-in book shelves, kitchen cabinets, etc. They have also made electrical and plumbing repairs, built cement walks, pergolas and assisted in repairing furniture. Much may often be accomplished by this boy-labor at small cost. Such work also provides valuable educational training for the boys doing the work.

Among the home management houses which will be demonstrated in the 1927 Better Homes in America campaign are the houses at Woman's College, Newark, Delaware; Montana State College at Bozeman; University of New Hampshire at Durham; New York State College of Agriculture at Canton; Oklahoma A. & M. College at Stillwater; Indiana State Normal School at Terre Haute; Mechanics Institute house at Rochester, New York; University of South Dakota at Vermillion and many others. Home economics cottages located in fifteen states will be demonstrated during this campaign for home improvement.

Plans for these demonstration have not been entirely completed. Each home economics teacher will endeavor to provide scientific home making knowledge for the home makers of the community through the house demonstration. She will select the type of demonstration and type of program which will be of the most use to these home makers. Home economics teachers of several communities have suggested the information most needed by the home makers in their own community which the demonstration of the school cottage might provide. Some of the suggestions included are selection and arrangement of furniture, simplicity in furnishing, labor saving devices, meal preparation and serving, food values, methods of installing water in the house and family cooperation. One particularly valuable suggestion mentioned by a number of teachers is the necessity of teaching home makers that homes can be made comfortable and attractive without the expenditure of a large amount of money.

The Lobo, or large gray wolf, is rapidly vanishing in the stock-raising regions of the West. During the last year only eight were taken in New Mexico, eighteen in Arizona, twenty-eight in Montana, one in Oregon, six in South Dakota, eight in Utah, twelve in Wyoming and none in Colorado.

NO TIME BETTER THAN NOW TO BEGIN SAVING

By S. W. STRAUS, President American Society for Thrift.

NO matter how difficult the practices of thrift may seem today, the months and years to come will make the task no easier. It is the general experience of life that the hardest dollar to save is the first one. Those who save small amounts now are better equipped to save more at a later time because they are stronger in character and have the inspiration of something already saved.

One of the sayings of Polonius was: "A man may, if he knows not how to save as he goes, keep his nose all his life to the grindstone, and die not worth a groat at last."

If you are not saving money today, do not make the mistake of believing that time will make the beginning easier. Even though your income may increase and your general circumstances in life become more prosperous, you will find it just as hard to save money later as it is now.

Every day you practice thrift the task becomes easier; every day you put it off you make the task a little harder.

Dickens created the character of Wilkins Micawber who was always "waiting for something to turn up" and wasted his years in poverty and want.

Plan and provide for the future. Do not be deceived by the mirage of tomorrow. If you cannot save money today, you are a potential failure; if you can save it, you are a potential success.

27-Cent Trip

Who wouldn't grin like this if he were able to make a trip from New York to Cuba and back for twenty-seven cents? Morris Halegna, nine, son of a New York candy merchant, boarded a liner. He wasn't discovered until the second day out. He just had to be taken to Cuba and back. He left with a quarter and two pennies, but returned with $14 more, given him by passengers who enjoyed his grin.
