

Dario's Wet Law and Coming Bridge Property Values Up Along Border

International News Service
 Windsor, Ont., May 9.—The early passage of Ontario's liquor laws and the proposed $2,000,000 bridge between Windsor and Windsor with expected industrial prosperity to the border area, is having far-reaching effect on property values.

Many deals, including the reported acquisition of a half block of land in downtown Windsor by a New York syndicate at a cost of $200,000 have been announced.

Its sale to the New York interests is to be followed by early erection of a 15 story hotel, a 100 family apartment and a 200 room car garage between the hotel and apartment structure, according to reports.

Nerve Makes Cruickshank the Man to Watch Today

BOBBY WENT TO THE TROUBLE OF ESCAPING FROM A GERMAN PRISON CAMP JUST AS THE ARMISTICE WAS SIGNED!

WALKED OFF WITH FOUR CHAMPIONSHIPS—OHAYES—AND $11,000 PRIZE MONEY DURING THE LONG, HARD WINTER OF 1926-27

Bobby Cruickshank

Here's Bobby Cruickshank, doughty little Scotchman, one of the most contending contenders in professional golf today. The same nerve that enabled him to escape from a German prison camp will serve him in the British and American open plays this Summer.

NEW YORK (I-N Special).—Ten years ago a little man, in a prisoner's uniform, cautiously made his way through the German lines toward the Allied front. He was suffering from the effects of two injuries, confinement in a German military prison, the terrors of escape and a two weeks' trek across country by night.

As he reached his buddies in the British trenches, he expressed surprise that there was no firing.

"The war! That's over," some one told him. "The Armistice was signed today. You should have stayed in prison. It would have saved you a long walk."

So Bobby Cruickshank, once amateur star of the Scotch links, went back to Great Britain, pretty much out of shape. He had studied law, but he found the confinement of a law office irritating as the result of his war injuries.

So Cruickshank set off for America, where a good golfer can get an open-air job—teaching club members to play golf—at the expense of his amateur standing.

He served with the Shackamaxon, Oklahoma City, and Progress golf clubs. He was almost unnoticed outside his own sphere until one day, he was in the national open championship to be held at the Oakmont Country Club, near Pittsburgh, in June. His club, the Progress Country Club, of Purchase, has sanctioned his entry at the British open in England.

Bill Grimm's Program

Copyright, 1926, by Collier's Weekly and G. F. Putnam Sons
 "Bill Grimm's Program" is a dramatization by Film Booking Offices of America, Inc., (F. B. O.) of H. G. Witwer's stories of the same name.

SYNOPSIS
 Bill Grimm, a rough-and-ready but gallant taxi-driver, has been instrumental in uncovering the cohorts of a band of bootleggers, headed by Jack Fairfax, a wealthy but dissipated man. Barbara Baxter, a prohibition agent, has directed the movements of the State troopers, and Bill falls in love with her, just as Fairfax has done. Pansy Pilkington, a friend of Bill's, goes off with Fairfax. After a talk with Barbara, Bill decides to strike out for bigger things and goes to New York.

Well, to make a long story agreeable, I took a room with Butch Ford and Left Hook O'Brien in their taxi suite at an uncostly hotel. Both the boys could afford the Ritz, but they saved their pennies—a feat which took me years to accomplish and then I had to have help. A few days after that I managed to pounce on a job driving a taxi, through the starter being a friend of Butch's and a wild admirer of Left Hook O'Brien. At last I was a full-blooded New Yorker and had started on the road to fame and fortune. Cold cat—what a trip that turned out to be!

Acting around Broadway one day, which likewise happened to be my afternoon off, who do I bump into but Pansy Pilkington. Pansy seemed glad enough to see me this day.

What Pansy Pilkington really came to New York for was to get a job as a chorus girl, and while I had to admit that Pansy had more than enough qualifications for that exacting portfolio, I looked on the matter with some alarm.

But Pansy just laughed me off kind of scornfully, saying I ought to know that she knew her oil and that there was exactly no chance of anybody putting over a swift one on her. In fact, my fears for her safety seemed to steam her up, and she dropped a few sarcastical remarks about me and gravedyard missed me by the breadth of hair and dumb looking Never again will reading "The Ride of Paul Revere" give me a thrill, because the ride I took that day would make Paul's look like a canter in the park! Honest, we went through everything but college, and pretty soon motorcycle cops took up the chase, with foot guardsmen standing on the running boards of commandeered cars and blasting away merrily. Bullets flowed like water, and there was only two more shots fired at Gettysburg!

But we had a running start, and the traffic maze helped us too. While I weaved my taxi in and out at breakneck speed, the cops seemed to get in each other's way, and at Van Cortlandt Park I'd shook off everybody, the spite of all the shots exchanged, neither me, my dress, gas tank or the lumps at Pansy's taxi was hit. They made me drive 'em way beyond Hastings, where a touring car joined us with two other cabs on the front seat. I stopped by request, and one of my fancy hands me a hundred dollars bill and tells me gruffly to head it. I was only too glad to get rid of 'em, and I breathed a heavy sigh of relief as they jumped in the touring car and vanished up the road at top speed.

"So this is New York!" I says to myself.

That night the papers is full of the daring hold-up of the Stevedores & Scientists National Bank, together with the part I was forced to play in the get-away of the robbers. A single man merrily up and down my spine when I read that when two brigands had grabbed $40,000 and wounded one of the tellers, my phone and one of my wrecked taxi also decorated the front pages, and I got quite a thrill out of reading all the details, feeling I had certainly become a part of great prominence in the bustling part of New York! I knew Barbara Baxter would read all that and I felt like calling her up and saying, "So nothing ever happens to a taxi driver, hey?"

But I didn't. Instead, I sit up half the night thinking over the robbery with Butch Ford and Left Hook O'Brien, which looked on me as a hero of the first water, though Butch warned me the cops would probably make my life miserable from then on. Butch ain't a homer on his guess, for when I reported for work the next morning I got two beautiful subpoenas—I was both Fred and pinhead!

Barbara Baxter and what she called the "raw deal" we gave Jack Fairfax.

On top of that, though, Barbara invited me to dinner that night at her apartment. Warm puppy, I was sure getting the breaks!

I'll tell whoever's listening I was busy for the rest of the day. Being as loose as cinders in money matters, I blew my whole week's wages on a brand-new outfit of clothes, give the barber a heavy play, and when I rang the bell of Barbara's nifty drum I felt snappy and looked nobbly! Barbara herself opened the door for me, and if she wasn't really glad to see me again, then besides her many other arts she's a wonderful actress. She hadn't put on the dog for me, but in a beautiful blue dress which fit like the skin on a grape she was positively what you'd call a thought for to-day.

Pansy Pilkington was pretty, but Barbara Baxter was breathtaking. "You're looking splendid, Bill," she says, as we sit under a shaded light on a couch.

"I'm driving a taxi," I says, point blank. "That's plenty interesting and likewise calls for no little skill. Ask the man who owns one!"

It had been midsummer in that room—now along comes winter! "Bill," she says reproachfully, "I'm exceedingly disappointed. I thought you'd leave all that in Fairfax Falls. I certainly looked for bigger things from you here than being a taxicab chauffeur. Why, you're in the same rat you were in before—you've simply changed your residence, not your position in life. Don't you see you'll never get anywhere this way? What opportunities will ever come to you as a taxi driver?"

"Barbara," I says quietly, "I met you while I was driving a taxi. It's nothing else over happens to me for the rest of my life I got no squawk comin'!"

In another minute what had all the earmarks of a grand evening was ruined. No kidding, we parted with all the loving affection of two preliminary boys breaking from a clinch. She didn't rush to the door after I'd gone and howl to the empty air for me to come back, like they do in the movies either. I walked to see.

Less than a week later my taxi is hailed when I'm cruising along upper Broadway and extending to a stop. I like to fall off my seat when I get a flash of my intended fare. It was no gas loss than my ancient ghost, Jack Fairfax!

Physician Says Producer Won't Be Able to Work at Prison.

Greenville, S. C., May 7.—Earl Carroll, the New York theatrical producer, was said today by Dr. C. O. Bates, one of his attending physicians, to be a "nervous wreck."

Dr. Bates said that Carroll, who has been a patient in a hospital here since he collapsed on a train April 25 while en route to the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, would not be able to work for some time after being taken to the prison and probably not before the expiration of his year and a day sentence for perjury in connection with his "bath tub party."

BOYS START OUT TO SEE THE WORLD

Left in Bank and Returned to the Orphanage From Which They Had Escaped.

Winnipeg, Ga., May 6.—(I-N)—The problem of how to return two 12-year-old would-be world travelers and adventurers who had wandered away from the Ormeewood Court Orphanage at Ormeewood Park, presented a knotty situation for local authorities.

It was beginning to look like the boys would have to stay here when a passing motorist picked them up and took them to Atlanta police headquarters. Now they are back at the orphanage—and glad to be back, they say.

could not give a satisfactory explanation of their presence. And the difficulty began.

The boys readily admitted belonging to the Ormeewood orphanage, but when authorities of that institution were notified, they replied they did not have the funds to send for the boys. Atlanta's police chief was appealed to, but he replied whereas the boys were charged with no crime, he had no means to send for them.

The boys, Fred Galbreath and Mack Singler, set out a few days ago to see the world, the immediate objective being Jacksonville, Fla., where Singler has a brother. They were held up in Barnesville however, when they

Chinese Leaders Tell United States "Yellow Peril" Stories Are Myth

By W. F. SULLIVAN
 International News Service Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, May 9.—The "Yellow Peril" is a myth.

China and the United States are just like two loving brothers and each is going to see that his brother gets along in this big turbulent world.

The United States wants to see China gain its independence and China—she also same like us, very much.

Such was the spirit of the love feast, which climaxed the 23rd annual convention of the On Leong Chinese Merchants' Association in a two weeks' session here. The dinner was one of the most gorgeous given at a fashionable hotel here this season.

Civic and political leaders in this city, who were guests of honor at the banquet, joined in lauding the Nationalists' move for independence. The speakers were confident that the present movement in China would result in a well-defined, firm and well-organized republic.

Congressman Tommaster
 Congressman L. C. Dyer, of St. Louis was toastmaster. Speakers on the program were Joe Lin, head of the On Leongs of St. Louis; So Ho Mee Tong of New York, national president of the tong; United States Senator Harry B. Hawes; Louis H. Brewer, U. S. District Attorney; Joe King, On Leong leader of Omaha; Dr. E. B. Clements, Republican national committeeman and others.

So Ho Mee Tong, whose words were translated by Joe Lin, declared that the On Leong organization, which had a membership of 15,000 merchants in China and America, had for its purpose the furthering of business and social relations.

"No country is more loved or more respected by the Chinese people than America," he said.

Senator Hawes declared that "we could trust the Chinese to give justice to foreigners on their own soil."

"We will watch their movement toward an organized republic with sympathy and kindness," Senator Hawes said. "I am opposed to concessions on a soil controlled by a sovereign nation."
