"UNCLE" J. W. WELLONS
DIES AT AGE OF 101

Venerable Minister of the Christian Church Ends Long and Useful Life.

Greensboro, June 10.—Rev. John W. Wellons, "the grandest old man in North Carolina," died nere today at the Masonic home at the age of 101 years, five months and 10 days, the oldest resident of Greensboro and one of the oldest in the state.

"Uncle" Wellons, as he was affectionally known at the home where he had been three years, will be given burial on Sunday, when with a service at the home at 10 a. m. in which the Eastern Star and Masonic chapters of Greensboro will give full honors to the grand old man. The body will then be taken to Elon College where the final rites will be held early in the afternoon and interment will be made.

It was at Elon College that he held his last regular pastorate as a minister of the Christian church. It was here that he preached his last sermon also, this a historic occassion at the time of his 100th birth-day, January 1, 1926. With vigor and clarity he addressed the student body and faculty members at that time and in a 40 minute discourse a mazed his hearers that a man could went into the ministry in that State, holding pastorates at a number of places in both states and "occupying one of the first places in the ranks of the ministers of the Christian church. He never married. He had outlived his near relatives but the descendants of those who were dear to him in youth, will be present at the final rites.

Salisbury District Meeting.
Salisbury Post.

Wednesday was a notable day in Methodist missionary circles. At this time the annual meeting of the Salisbury district society was held here and among the many distinguished visitors were $\tilde{\text{LTS}}\text{.}$ W. C. Graham, the newly elected district secretary, presided. Other distinguished visitors were Mrs. W. C. Houston of Concord, the retiring secretary; Mrs. Chas. C. Weaver of Winston-Salem, conference president; Miss Amy Hackney of Asheville, conference superintendent of children's work, and Miss Mabel Cherry of Matthew, who has been a student at Duke University the past year. Miss Cherry has served in foreign work in Korea, and will return to that country as a missionary supported by the women of the First Methodist church. Miss Cherry has a chamming personality and in her talk about the life, customs, and Christian educational work in Korea made a very favorable impression upon her audience.

Mrs. Weaver, who is one of the outstanding women of Southern Methodism, was the principal speaker. She brought a thrilling message of the needs of the hour, and outlined the work to be done this year, appealing to the women of Salisbury district to do their full part financially as well as in other lines of work. The district quota of $5.550 was quickly pledged.

Miss Hackney presented the work of the children's department clearly and foreibly. An able paper on this subject was read by Mrs. J. W. Pike of Concord. Mrs. H. C. Morgan had present a Targe group of children from the local society and these sang very sweetly. Special music through the day included solos by Miss Pat Adams of Concord and Mrs. George Devereux of Salisbury.

Parham-White Wedding.

Kinston, June 8.—The marriage of Miss Amie Jordan Parham and Thomas White will be celebrated here June 28. The prospective bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hugh Parham, of Kinston, and is prominently connected upstate. Mr. White is a Durham lawyer and formerly lived in Concord.

The announcement was made recently at a party given by Miss Parham for other brides-elect and brides. The home of the bostess was decorated with a profusion of summer flowers, a centerpiece of Dorothy Perkins roses, and purple and pink larkspurfeaturing the decorations.

Miss Etta Belle Walker, winner of high score prize at cards, was presented an attractive vanity set. The honor guests were remembered with souvenirs of the affair. Forty were in attendance.

The engagement of Miss Parham and Mr. White was revealed when small Minetta Bartlett and Tom Woodley Heath appeared before the assemblage in the garb of bride and groom and were "married" by Frank Dixon, dressed for the part of minister. The preacher opened a book and solemnly read: "On June 28th, Tom and Amie will wed." The lite girl wore a bridal veil of illusion, trimmed with rhinestones, and carried abride's bouquet.

Miss Parham will be tendered numerous courtesies during the days preceding her wedding.

Gown Touching Floor Chosen To Represent Her.

Washington, June 11.—In this age of knee-length skirts Mrs. Calvin Coolidge has elected to go down in history as wearing hers touching the floor.

The dress by which the Coolidge administration will be remembered in the collection of costumes worn by President's wives in the National Museum here, has just been put in place beside the contributions of Mrs. Warren G. Harding and the second Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

Woodrow Wilson.
This dress is of the vintage of 1924 and already looks a trifle out of date. It was worn by Mrs. Coolidge at one of the first State receptions over which she presided as mistress of the White of the first State receptions over which she presided as mistress of the White House.

The material is white brocaded satin, very rich and lustrous. The skirt touches the floor all around, so that the tips of the white satin, brocaded slippers, exactly matching the dress material, just peep out from underneath.

The dress, has a square cut low neck and a narrow train attached to the shoulders, which sweeps the floor for a yard or so in the rear. There is no trimming except a round wheel-shaped ornament of seed pearls and rhinestones at the left waistline. The slippers also have buckles of matching seed pearls.

The dress is cut on straight lines, except for a side draping from the shoulder and waistline at the right, caught by the seed pearl ornament. It will reveal Mrs. Coolidge to future generations as one of the slenderest of Presidents' wives, with a figure almost like a flapper's.

This gown collection is now complete to date, except that Mrs. George Washington is not represented. The Washington dress last exhibited was removed a year ago by the family descendant to whom it belonged.

Mrs. Warren G. Harding is represented by a white satin gown, worn with an ostrich trimmed evening wrap of blue chiffon.
